HOW TO SECURE A PATENT.

Directions to Inventors Issued by The Bee Bureau of Claims.

METHODS OF THE PATENT OFFICE.

The Course Followed by the Author of an Invention to Protect His Rights—Costs of Obtaining a Patent.

To the inventor the all important question presents itself: "How can I secure a patent?" and this the Bee Bureau offers the following explanation:

Inventors as a class are not familiar with the laws under which letters patent are granted, the forms and practice in the patent office at Washington and the technical methods of casting specifications and claims to properly protect their inventions against infringers, yet the value of the patent and even its validity depend largely upon the careful and expert preparation of the case.

Many inventors suffer the loss of benefits that should be derived from valuable inventions owing to insufficient protection by patents procured through incompetent or careless agents, etc.

Under the laws of the United States letters patent are granted to any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or has invented any new or useful improvement thereof.

A patent is granted for seventeen years, during which time the owner has sole and exclusive right to make, use and sell the patented invention.

For economic reasons before making application to the patent office for a patent, the inventor should ascertain whether or not the invention is new or patentable.

The first thing to be done is to find out whether or not the invention is new and patentable.

For advice on the point it is necessary to send a rough sketch or a photograph of the invention, together with a brief description thereof, setting forth the object of the invention, the advantages to be derived therefrom, and the advantages attained. While a model is very seldom necessary, yet it is often of great assistance.

Upon receipt of the data mentioned sufficient material is furnished to the inventor to enable him to make a rough sketch or a photograph of the invention, together with a brief description thereof, setting forth the object of the invention, the advantages to be derived therefrom, and the advantages attained.

Whenever it is found that any person asking for advice is justly entitled to pension or benefit under the law, the government will forward to him the necessary papers and instructions, which will be mailed to him at once, and he will be required to return them to the office of the bureau, and upon their arrival the claim will be promptly filed in the proper department.

The inventor should be careful to prepare a receipt of the remittance of the specification of the invention will be carefully prepared and forwarded to the inventor, together with a copy of the papers and instructions.
