With the first cold snap this winter the pipe in the well froze up for a distance of thirty-six feet from the top. His place is a mile and a half back from the Platte, but the only theory that can be advanced so far is that there is some kind of an opening through to the edge of the bluff, and when the wind is from that direction it draws up through the well like a chimney in full blast. It is an interesting phenomenon, at any rate.

[FROM TESTERDAY'S SECOND EDITION.]

AGAINST THE PEACE OF HAYTI.

Revolutionists Equip a Vessel to Attack Her Scaports.

FORMIDABLE PAEPARATIONS BEING MADE Who the Leaders of the New Movemen Are-How and Where the Plot Was Started - Government Agents

Looking for the Vessel.

New York, Jan. 9. - The discovery has just pecu made by Mr. Price, the Haytien minister, to the United States, says the Herald; of a revolutionary movement, having for its object the overthrow of President Hippolyte of Hayti. The revolutionary party, he has found, has fitted out in this country a manf-war equipped with all the appliances of nodern warfare, which is intended to be used by the Haytien political exiles in Jamaica to capture Port au Prince and establish a new government. Minister Price has denounced the revolutionary movement to the government at Washington, and it is to be expected that the detective' machinery of the State department will be set in motion today for the capture of the man-of-war and the arrest of the agents here. Government agents will seize the ship-if they can find her. How the Movement Started, The chances are, however, that the revolutionary vessel is already far out to sea, where the Haytlen navy will have a merry ime finding her. The revolutionary movement is a direct result of the events of the tragic 28th of May, 1891. The passions aroused by Hipporyte's acts on that fateful day led the men in exile in Kingston, Jamaica, to band themselves into a committee, which had for its sole onlect the numshment and overthrow of Hippolyte. There were several men in exile in Kingston who had been prominent in the affairs of Hayti. Among them were General Francois Nanigate, General Anselme Prophete, ex-President Legitime and General Fouchard. There were other exiles of more or less prominence but these men were the acknowledged leaders. Each man had his political follow ing in Hayti. Some were in the south, some were in the north and some were in the in terior of the island.

After much discussion it was resolved that the leaders should constitute themselves a committee of revolution, and that an expedi-tion should be fitted out in the United States An agent was sent to New York accompanies by delegates, but after the situation had been thoroughly canvassed the movement was abandoned. For a time it looked as though and the committee of revolution gave up al hope of immediate progress.

For several months political matters in Hayti and among the exiles in Kingston were very quiet. In fact, they were sus-piciously quiet. Early last autumn the situation had apparently become so peaceful that President Hippolyte issued a manifesto of general amnesty, inviting all the exiles to re-turn to Hayti. He even went so far in his desire to get the exiles back as to send a ship to take them to Port au Prince free o charge. The ship returned empty.

Chose a New Leader. It was during this time of peace and quietness that the present revolutionary move-ment was set on foot. The committee of revolution at Kingston chose a new leader and new methods. The leader was General Francois Nanigate. It was Nanigate's inselves together for the success of the move-ment. It was decided to fit out a man-of-war in the United States and to purchase large quantities of arms and ammunition. he general plan being to attack Hyppolite by water in his stronghold at Port au A trustworthy agent named Francois Robert, who was a man of ability and dis-cretion, was sent to New York to confer with the friends of the movement in this city. The agent, accompanied by an assisant named George S. Richet, arrived in this city early in the summer. He had many onsultations with General Nanigate's riends and also with the friends of those of he revolutionary leaders, but the serious work of the movement was arranged almos solely with the friends of Nanigate. Late in the summer it was definitely ar and armed, and that this vessel, after being properly equipped with the supplies and munitions of war, should sail for Hayiti on or about the middle of January, 1892. Raised the Sinews of War.

The money with which to fit out the expe lition was raised in this city among men chants who have or who wished to have busi ess dealings with Hayti. The amount is aid to have been close upon $500,000. She was an American built vessel, 230 fee ong and of 2,000 tons register. She was admirably adapted for the purpose of a man-of-war, and she had been built extra strong for the purpose of carrying rails and heav railway supplies. She had two screws, which drove her at the rate of fourteen knots an our. She could carry coal for fourteen days steaming at full speed After the steamer had been turned over to the revolutionary agents she lay for a short time in Tebo's yard, in Brooklyn, where she was accidentally found by spies employed by Minister Price. She was very closely Minister Price. She was very closely watched, but the spies were thrown off the scent by a business man of this city, who as-serted that the ship belonged to him, and that he was about to load up for Europe, After the spies were withdrawn the ship left the port for a quiet place on the south Atantic seaboard, where the work of fitting or was begun early in October.

Precaution to Avoid Discovery. During the three months that the con tractors were at work upon the ship utmost precaution was taken to avoid covery. The ship was constantly couled so that she might put to sea at a moment's notice. The workmen who were employed in strengthening her decks, in making the necessary alterations and in constructing the un carriages were not allowed to leave th ship even at night. They ate and slept board, and no one except the foreman contractor were allowed to go on or off the

Toward the mistle of December most o the big guns had been put in position, and the men to manage them had been engaged The gunners selected were retired United States navy gunners. When the work was nearly completed they were sent on board and were not allowed to leave. For fully three weeks the gunners, workmen and others interested in the work of preparation did not leave the ship even for a moment They were waiting for sailing orders, whice might arrive at any time. The cracking o an armor plate detained the vesser more than a week, so that it is likely that if it had not been for this accident. Minister Price would ave searched the coast in vain for any trac of the revolutionary ship. Armament of the Ship, The ship was armed with four large bree loading rifled cannon, and six rapid firing guns. The largest rifle threw a difty-pound shot and the next largest a thirty-pound shot. The secondary battery had rifles of six-inch bore. The ship was fitted with powerful search lights and all the appliances of a modern man-of-war.

The plan of the expedition was to proce to a selected point in Jamaica with sufficien arms and ammunition for the equipment of a army. The exiles at Jamaica were then t be taken on board, and the completed expedition was then to descend upon Port-au-Prince, the capital of Hayti, and to make an attack by water. It was expected that the navy of hippolyte would have little chance with the powerful guns and thick armor o the fleet revolutionary ship. In co-operation with the ship, the revolutionary troops were make a landing and attack the city While the man-of-war fought the vessel of the navy and pounded the forts of shore the troops were to rush through the streets attacking. Hippolyte's soldiers and citing the populace to rise in rebellion was expected that most of the able bodies cause of the revolution, thereby avenging the bloods deeds of the 28th of May. When Hippolyte's capital should have been captured by the revolutionists a new government would be set up, probably with General Nanigate at the bead of it. Then, if Hippolyte had taken to the recuntains with the intention of fighting, a large army would be Outline of the Ideal Organization Suggested by the Committee.

It is reported that the sultan has dismissed the pasha of Tan-gier. The removal of this official is one of the demands made by the rebeis.

PARISIAN NOTES.

Liability of Foreigners' Sons to Military Duty-France in Africa. Paris, Jan. 9.—The court of cessation has allowed the claim of one Hess, the son of a German father and French mother, born in France, to serve in the French army, thus creating a liability on foreigners' sons, born in France of French mothers to serve in the army. The decision has created some stir among foreigners living in France, and a number of British residents are in communication with the ministry of justice in regard to the matter. It is semi-officially denied that France has conceded the easis of Tuat, now within the sphere of her influence in northern Africa. At the same time it is declared that France claims that the regions in dispute never ceased to belong to her.

A dispatch to the Temps from Madrid says that the Spanish government is about to negotiate with the Bank of Spain and other Spanish and French banks for the conversion of the Cuban debt.

Buildings of the State University of Missouri Destroyed-Other Blazes. COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 9 .- The main building of the state university of Missouri was destroyed by fire tonight, causing a loss of $100,000.

One of the literary societies of the university had arranged to give an entertainment in the chapel and the audience had just as sembled when the small of smake attracted general attention. Investigation discovered the fact that fire had started in the library directly above the chapel and was burning fiercely. The audience dispersed quietly while the students did all they could to sub due the flames and save the contents of the building. The village fire depart-ment could not cope with the flames, and they confined their efforts to saying the adjoining buildings, in which they were successful. The main building was opletely destroyed and only a small portion of its contents were saved. The loss is $400,000 and the maurance $130,000. The entire library, consisting of 40,000 volumes, was wholly destroyed. It is insured for $10,000. The building contained all of the recitation ooms, the chapel and a large auditorium esides the library.

The main part of the building was constructed in 1845 at a cost of $200,000. Two large wings had been added in the last ten years at an additional cost of $200,000

WORSE THAN A CYCLONE

Diamond, a Big Elephant, Goes on a Rampage in His Winter Quarters.

CONQUERED BY THE WILL OF MAN

Cool Heroic Courage of Keeper Sweeney and His Brave Assistants Alone Prevented the Complete Wrecking of the Menagerie Building.

Penu, Ind., Jan. 9,- | Special Telegram to THE BEE |-Ed Sweeney, the manager and keeper of Wallace & Co.'s elephants at their winter quarters two miles east of this city. went through an experience this morning that he is not likely to forget very soon, and one which, but for his presence of mind and ecolness at a critical period, would have resulted disastrously to Wallace & Co. and the loss of human life.

Diamond, the ponderous elephant of the show and one of the finest of his species in this country, has been unruly for several days, but little was thought of it. This morning he slipped his chain in the house where he was confined, and with freedom came in a violent fury.

Killed His Companions,

He commenced by tossing the light articles of furnature about, smashing them to flinders, and then turned his attention to Mack, the pet bull dog of the circus, who has been his constant companion for five years. With one turn and twist of his trunk the dog was sent flying up through the skylight, sixty feet away, landing outside dead. The fury of the beast was now a frenzy, and he started toward Dick, the favorite horse, who had been his companion, also, for five years. In the rush the horse was impaled on the tusks, and Diamond went through the enclosure like one mad. He threw the horse up and down and in one instance clear across the enclosure. With the death of Dies he turned his attention to the building in the endeaver to secure entrance to the other elephants.

Made the Menagerie Howl. Failing in this he commenced tearing away the sides. He then found another horse, which he proceeded to demolish as he did Dick.

The interior by this time presented the appearance of a slaughter house and, coupled with the cries of the lions, tigers, monkeys, elephants and other animals, the scene can be better imagined than described. Pandemonium reigned, and the noise was heard two miles away. About this time Sweeney arrived. His first act was to enter the place alone and without any weapon. One glance at the elephant, however, caused him to retreat. Together with some fifteen other employes, armed with irons, spears, clubs and other weapons, he entered and approached the beast. Twice was he driven back, always returning and commanding the brute to do as he said. His Will Power Won.

It was a question of mind over brute, and the although in the deadliest kind of danger and narrowly escaping death many times, his will power, aided by the utensils of war, conquered, and Diamond was driven into his corner and chained. The elephant has been with the circus for five years and this is the first time that any trouble has occurred. It is doubtful if thirty men with an hour's time could have caused more devastation than Diamond did in the space of three minutes. INFLUENCED BY THE POLICE.

How a Conviction of Murder Was Secured in a San Francisco Court. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 9 .- In the of Sidney Bell, charged with the murder of Samuel M. Jacobson, the trunk manufacturer, on August 6, 1890, a continuance was granted today for one week. Bell was convicted some time ago, but made a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, which motion is still pending. An afternoon paper prints lengthy affidavits alleged to bave been made by Edward W. Campbell, who was arrested at the same time with Bell, and whose testimony, chiefly, on the first trial tended to convict the latter. Campbell is now in Chicago, and in an affidavit claimed to have been made by of the police and by hope of release to swear falsely against Bell. The affidavit claims that Jacobson was not shot by Bell for the purpose of robbery, but that he was killed by one Henry Schwartz during a family quarrel. The affair has created considerable nterest from conflicting statements made by Campbell and other witnesses on whom the prosecution relied to convict Bell, and etectives and police officials connected with the case.
