GRAND ARMY DEPARTMENT

Preparations Made for Entertaining the State Encampment at Columbus.

RILED BY A COPPERHEAD HISS

Peru's Progressive Post-Kearney's Candidate for Commander-Valor Justly Rewarded-A Veteran's Impressions of His First Battle.

COLUMBUS, Neb., Feb. 6.- [Special to THE BEE. |- The state encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and of the Womans' Relief Corps takes place in this city on the 17th, 18th and 19th of February, to which every Grand Army post and Womans' Relief Corps is expected to send delegates. This event will also c. Il together a large number of the Sons of Veterans, and the crowd will be swelled by a large number of comrades who are not delegates but who come as

State Commander Teeter was in the city the other day and he informed THE BEE correspondent that if the weather is anywhere near favorable the people of Columbus could look for the largest attendance at this en campment of any ever held in the state. He notices that more interest is being taken in the meeting than has heretofore been apparent, and thinks that the central location and accessibility of this city are favorable towards inducing a large attend-

Arrangements are being made by Baker post, No. 9, Grand Army of the Republic of this city to provide quarters for the delegates and to make the affair pass off smoothly. The post has secured the opera house for the encampment meetings, and the Meridian hotel has been selected as Grand Army of the Republic headquarters for the visiting veterans. Post commander S. L. McCoy looks for upwards of 800 delegates, besides an indefinite number of visiting comrades and Sons of Veterans. The Women's Relief Corns is making active preparations for the reception of delegates, and will provide homes for them free of charge while they remain in the city. Mrs. C. J. McCoy, president of the Columbus relief corps, informs THE BEE that much interest is being manifested in the encampment by the corps throughout the state. She has received inquiries from about eighty corps which are going to send from two to three delegates each. As there are a numper of corps to hear from yet, it is reasonable to estimate the number of delegates to the Women's Rejief Corps encampment at from 300 to 500. The corps has secured Ochlrich's half for meetings of the encampment and the Meridian hotel will be known as corps headquarters.

Mayor Henry Ragatz has decided to tender the freedom of the city to the visitors, and the people here have a warm place in their hearts for the boys who were the blue and will endeavor to make their visit pleasant and in every way creditable to the city.

A matter of considerable importance to the old soldiers will be brought up, it is understood, and it is that of considering the advisability of relocating the place for holding the required. Creating the place for holding the reunion. Grand Island has nad three secutive meetings of the reunion there, and there was some kind of an understanding be tween that city and the Grand Army peoplithree years ago that the reunions would be held there for five consecutive years. No one can tell whether or not the location for holding the reunions will be changed or not, but those who ought to know say the question will be considered.
Commander S. L. McCoy has received in structions from the state department com-mander to appoint guards and an officer of the day. The guards were appointed at the meeting of the post here tonight. It is the understanding between Department Com-mander Tester and Post Commander McCoy that the former will bring an officer of the that the former will bring an officer of the day with him from Lincoln.

The meetings of the encampment will be open to visiting comrades, ladies of the Relief corps and Sons of Veterans, and the gallery in the opera house, which is commodious, will be at their disposal. The program for the encampment cannot be given except in a general way. The first day will be devoted to organization and the appointment of the necessary committees. The second day will consider matters pertaining to the legislative affairs of the en-campment, and the third and last day will be used for the election and installment of officers for the ensuing year. As there are a large number of candidates for the office of department commander, and as they ar most all hard workers and men of ability, i is expected that the last day will be full of excitement and interest.

The Sous of Veterans do not hold their encampment until next June, when it takes place at David City. Those who come here to the Grand Army and Woman's Relief Corps encampmet will do so simply to see how it is done and to absorb any information or amusement that they may detect.

The new guns, to the number of twelve received by the Columbus post are very fine. They will be used by the guards during the encampment, and the new swords, five in number, are things of beauty. They will be worn by officers of the encampment. With such ample preparations being made by those who know how to get ready for such meeting, and with so much interest being manifested by the people of the city generally and by the officers and comrades of the state at large, there is no perceptible or valid reason to base a belief that the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic and o the Woman's Relief Corps will not be a grand success, affording pleasure alike to the vis-tors and to the city and cause Columbus to be more widely known by the people of Ne

The soldier revers the memory of his hero; and of recollections revived by the recent presentation to the city of Kearney of a bronze bust of Phil Kearney, by his distinguished cousin General De Peyster, the following incident of the grim old warrior, General W. T. Sherman, is told by Moses H. Sydenham, who enjoys the distinction of having edited the first newspaper west of Omaha. "Being postmaster at Ft. Kearney for a long time, I became acquainted with many distinguished military men, but I especially remember General W. T. Sherman who paid the fort a flying visit in the spring of 1866. His tent was just outside the Barracks beneath a group of spreading cottonwoods. I called to tender my respects to the hero of the 'March to the Sea.' I approached and saluted. The general responded and made me feel quite at ease. "The war over and the armies of the union victorious, there was a prevalent and enthusiastic desire to accord the famous guest of the little outpost an ardent welcome. We had, too, an eye on the business side of the situation. Dreams of cities mingled with our mirage. Omaha was a city, and towns were being built on paper along the railways across the plains. Why not Ft. Kearney be a city.

The talk of the general tickled us.

We were jealous of our sister forts, and bore a good-natured pride in our soldiers and equipments. He talked without reserve, asserting that it was the intention of the War department to make Fort Kearney the central supply post for the west, that material for the erection of large stores had been ordered and work would begin at once. And there was at once a large store house erected and activity and good cheer prevailed throughout the garrison. "A short time clapsed, and General ing with General and Mrs. Carrington. The party cantered through the valley west past 'Dobetown,' and under the miles of linden that line the way. Faint traces of mounds and an old iron safe are all that is left to tell the stranger of these habitations of sod. As they rode out of town, a man in front of a store hissed vehemently at General Sherman. He had been hissed at before, but it was south of Mason's and Dixon's line. insult came from a southern sympathizer. The general's coming at all places had been a series of ovations, but this unexpected affront disconcerted the great man. He waxed indignant and took the hiss as an insult from the whole population, and despite the protests of the soldiers and citizens, he vowed his vengeance. Abandonment of the fort soon followed, and this action meant the abandonment of the whole frontier or annihilation at the hand of the Indians, who were then giving the settlers serious trouble. Upon appeal to the department for protection, Lieutenant Foul'cs was permitted to remain with part of a company until the final and complete withdrawal of troops in the spring of 1891.

For Department Commander. The Grand Army men of this city, says the Kearney Hub, will present the name of Robert La Fontaine to the annual encampment to be held at Columbus February 17, 18 and 19, as a candidate for the position of department commander. In doing so they will have the best wishes of every citizen of Kearney, where he has lived so long and is so favorably known.

Comrade La Fontaine made a good war record. He culisted in Company I. Twelfth New York cavairy, commanded by the late Colonel Savage of Omaha, and remained with his company until the close of the war. He was in thirteen engagements, besides numerous hot skirmishes and dangerous scouting detours. To show for that service he has two gunshot wounds and one saber cut. He is one of the oldest Grand Army men in the state, having joined the organization in 1868 in Connecticut, and has been a member continuously since that date. He came to Buffalo county in 1877. and has filled nearly every office in Sedgwick post No. 1, and always with the best of satisfaction, including that of post commander, is a thorough organizer, a perfect gentleman, and every particular qualified for the higher position to which his comrades would promote him,

And to all that his Grand Arm friends can say in his behalf, the Hub and every person who knows him will give the most unqualified endorsement The department of Nebraska will do itself proud by making him its commander.

His Valor Rewarded. Captain Frank D. Baldwin, Fifth infantry, U. S. A., is doubtless a firm believer in the old saw, "better late than never." At any rate the gallant captain was presented last week by Uncle Sam with a medal carned a generation

The presentation took place at Gen eral Nelson A. Miles' headquarters in Chicago. The circumstances under which the award of this token of honor was made are these: During the campaign in which Gen eral Sherman was engaged in the southeast there were two conspicuous occasions of gallantry displayed on the part of the officer Frank D. Baldwin. One was October 5, 1863, near Murphysboro, Tenn., on the line of the Nashville & Chattanooga railroad, where that officer was in command of a company of troops holding a stockade at Stone River. It was attacked by several thousand men under the commana of General Wheeler, who is now a member of comgress, and assaulted by artillery and dismounted cavalry. So heroic was the defense made by the company holding the stockade that for nearly two hours the small command contended against the force under General Wheeler-in fact, until the stockade was destroyed by the ar tillery fire. This made Captain Baldwir a conspicuous officer in his commandnamely: the Nineteentn Michigan volunteer infantry.

The other event took place the follow ing year, July 20, 1864, when at the bat-tle of Peach-Tree creek, near Atlanta, Ga., an assault was made by the con-federate forces against the line commanded by General Hooker. The federates made a desperate assault, which second round to the thriving fort. He was met by a countercharge of the regi-was received by General Carrington of the Eighteenth infantry. A reception serving on this occasion. He led the company in the countercharge, and was again conspicuous for his heroism and gallantry in capturing the flag of the confederate regiment and two commis-sioned officers. So heroic was the attack "One afternoon he went horseback ridwhich the officer led that the officers and men of his company recently petitioned congress to give him a medal of honor in acknowledgment of his valor.

The medal is the usual government medal, made of cannon bronze, and bears medal, made of calling the following inscription:

THE CONGRESS 5th U. S. Inf'y for Distinguished Bray'y At the Battle of Peach Tree Creek, Ga July 20, 1864.

Captain Baldwin enlisted in the army in 1861, and has been in active service since then. At present he is stationed at army headquarters in Chicago as inspector of rifle prectice. He distin-guished himself on several occasions during the war against the Cheyennes, Kiowas, Arapahoes and Comanches who in the summer of 1874 made several raids in the Indian Territory, Texas and southern Kansas. He served as first lieutenant under the com-mand of General Nelson A. Miles. No vember 8 of that year a detachment under Lieutenant Baldwin surprised a large camp of hostiles near the head of McClollan Creek in the early morning and attacked them with such vigor as to compel the Indians to abandon the protection of the ravines and retreat to the open country. He rescused from the hands of the Indians two white girls, who, with their parents and brother, were captured by the hostile tribe in Kansas. The Indians murdered the parents and brother and maltreated the girls. General Miles afterwards became their guardian. On another occasion Captain Baldwin, in company with three other officers, was attacked by a band of 100 Indians. The four men killed twelve redskins Warren D. Abbott, commander, First and compelled the remainder to retreat

HOW TO TELL A STORY. Evil Can be Used, but it Should Be Con trasted with Good.

It seems to us that in good fiction evil must appear as a foil for good; that it must be set over against righteousness so as to make black black indeed and white purely white, says a writer in the Chantauquan.

The story teller need have no express moral hobby to ride post haste; his tale will be all the better if told with the pure love of story telling; but we may be quite sure that his taste is unsound if he chooses a salacious story to tell and gives it the unction of personal rehearsal. Here, indeed, is where we would draw the line. Evil can be used by the artist with clean hands and to wholesome effect by contrasting it with a healthy, solid projection of good. The chief trouble with current realism is that it does not do this, but chooses to set hopeless evil and nerveless commonplace side by side without any triumphant moral heroism to dominate or neutralize it.

The ethics of fiction shines in the character, the moral nature of the story, more than in the ostensible or even the actual, moral purpose of the author. It is the general effect that the work likely to produce when read by the aggregate of readers which must be a large element of the test.

Birds Doctor Themselves. Some interesting observations relating to the surgical treatment of wounds by birds were recently brought by M. Fatio before the Physical society Geneva, says the Medical Record. quoted the case of the snipe, which he had often observed engaged in repairing damages. With its beak and feathers it makes a very creditable dressing, applying plasters to bleeding wounds and even securing a broken limb by means of a stout ligature. On one occasion he killed a snipe which had on the chest a large dressing composed of down taken from other parts of the body and securely fixed to the wound by the congulated blood. Twice he had brought home snipes with interwoven feathers strapped on to the site of the fracture of one or other limb. The most interesting example was that of a snipe, both of whose legs no had undoubtedly broken by a misdir-ected shot. He recovered the animal only on the day following and he then found that the poor bird had contrived to apply dressings and a sort of splint to both limbs. In carrying out this operation some feathers had become entangled around the beak and, not being able to use its claws to get rid of them, it was almost dead from hunger when discovered. In a case recorded by M. Magnin a snipe which was observed to fly away with a broken teg was subsequently found to have forced the fragments into a parallel position, the upper fragments reaching to the knee and secured there by means of a strong band of feathers and moss intermingled. The observers were particularly struck by the application of a ligature of a kind of flat-leafed grass wound round the limb, of a spiral form and fixed by means of a

Seeds and Fertilizers. Good seeds are essential requisites to successful farming and gardening, as are fertilizers in most localities, and both ought to be obtained or arranged for this month. The aim should be to procure the very best of seeds-pure in quality, genuine as to variety, and adapted to soil and climate. When seed is procured from a distance it is advisable to select carefully from the lists of reputable dealers.
