MINOR MENTION. N. Y. Plumbing Co. Council Bluffs Lumber Co., coal. Craft's chattle loans, 201 Sapp block. Valentine social at Mrs. J. C. Bixby's Thursday evening. Miss Laura Covatt entertained a party of friends last evening at her home on avenue A.

The meeting of the grand lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen opened in earnest yesterday morning in the Royal Arcanum parlors, with Grand Master Workman W. R. Graham of Cedar Falls presiding. There were 124 delegates present, every lodge in the state being represented. The morning was taken up mainly with the hearing of reports from the officers, which contained a great many interesting facts. On January 1, 1891, the membership of the combined lodges of the state was 4,283; during the year there was a gain of 1,062, which brings the total membership at the beginning of the present year up to 5,345. In the past nine years there have been 182 deaths in the order, the time elapsing between death and payment ranging all the way from 118 days, in 1884, to thirty-five days, in 1888. Of this number over 100 per cent were caused by violence, such as accidents, suicides and murders.

With reference to the split in the ranks of Grand Master Workman Graham in his report states that at least thirty of the "disloyal" lodges are knocking for readmission to the order. He has been made that as organizations they cannot be admitted, but that every member who was a member prior to April 1, 1892, who is under 50 years of age and can stand a medical examination, may be readmitted to the order. ROBBER AT 'THE COURT.' A Lincoln Man Gets a Taste of Iowa High Life. A bold robbery took place in Council Bluffs at a late hour Monday night, a young man living near Lincoln, Neb., and giving his name as H. F. Griffith, being the victim. He spent the evening running around the city, seeing what he could see, and finally took a drink or two in company with a couple of rook looking individuals at 'The Court,' a saloon kept by Frank Carroll across from the postoffice. He left the place at 10 o'clock, and as he was walking outside he was confronted by the two fellows he had been drinking with. Not waiting to ask his name, one of them grabbed him by the collar, while the other, through his pockets and made a clean sweep of all the valuables he could find. Among the stuff taken were $14 in cash, a pair of watch, B. & M. road and a pocket knife. After Griffith's new found friends had toyed with him to their hearts' content they let him go and disappeared.

Griffith reported the case to the police and swore out an information in the superior court charging Frank Williams and John Lohr, two well known gamblers, with the robbery. He did not know their names, but furnished excellent descriptions of both men, by which they were easily recognized. Williams was arrested yesterday afternoon and locked up in the city jail. Griffith was also held as a witness in order to prevent his getting out of the city like so many other victims of the gang that hangs around the saloons without molestation. The building will be constructed of wood, glass and iron, combined to produce an imposing, as well as a graceful effect. The roof will probably be of patent asphalt, painted white. Taken altogether, the Nebraska building will not suffer by comparison with those of other western states. The Nebraska commission feels that it has done as well as it possibly could, for the limited amount of money given it, and the general public will not be disappointed in the structure which represents Nebraska at the exposition.

MORE BODIES RECOVERED. Ghostly Discoveries Made in the Ruins of the Hotel Royal. NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—At 3:25 o'clock the workmen at the ruins of the Hotel Royal discovered a foot near the spot where body No. 7 was taken from. The coroner decided that it was one of the missing portions of that body and ordered it to be placed in the coffin containing it. A little distance from where the foot was found a quantity of clothing was found, it is the name of C. A. Forbes. In the basement just back of the office the diamonds of Mrs. Mattie Von Norden were found in a silver, gold-lined case. The jewels were identified by Henry Von Norden as the property of his missing wife. At 3:45 o'clock the body of a gentleman who said he was W. L. Lewis, who was reported as missing, called at the morgue and identified the body as his. The body was taken to the morgue, where it was reported as missing, called at the morgue and identified the body as his. At the corner of Fifteenth street and New York avenue yesterday a man released a cage of rats to be killed by dogs, says the Washington Post. One of the rats ran under the skirts of a lady standing on the corner, and disappeared. Instead of fainting or screaming she slightly raised her garments and gently shook the rat to the ground, after which she calmly boarded a car. The rat was killed. The incident was witnessed by an interested crowd. An Oklahoma Townsman. approving Foreman's entry of a part of the townsite of El Reno, the citizens and the property owners have determined to maintain the statu quo until the official action of the secretary of the interior is received, as it is confidently expected that he will point out a way by which titles may be confined to the owners of lots. The title has been turned over yesterday and drove stakes on all unimproved lots. The owners who bought in good faith will not contest these entries.

ITS GENERAL APPEARANCE. Detailed Description of the Design for the Nebraska Exposition Building. Nebraska's building at the World's Columbian exposition will occupy a commanding position in the northwest part of the park. It is located a few hundred feet north and west of the magnificent art building, and will be surrounded by streets on three sides. Across the street on the south side will be located the South Dakota building, while the Minnesota building will be directly opposite on the east. Nearly opposite Nebraska on the north, where the Kansas is still farther north, is a piece of elevated ground and will be a prominent object to all passengers on the Lincoln and Great Central railroads. The architect had this fact in view when he surmounted his building with a handsome dome, rising to a height of 100 feet from the ground.

The Nebraska building was designed by A. W. Woods, principal of mechanical drawing in the Haish Manual Training school at Lincoln and one of the prominent architects of the Capital city. Architecturally speaking, the design may be described as Romanesque, a style admirably adapted to a combination of the qualities of beauty, utility and cheapness. Its dimensions are 100 feet from north to south and 125 feet from east to west. Four stories of the building will be finished alike, except that the east and west sides will have a projected roof covering the veranda. The main entrance to the building will be on the east, through two large pair of double doors swinging outwards. Over the entrance is the Haish Manual Training school at Lincoln and one of the prominent architects of the Capital city. Its dimensions are 100 feet from north to south and 125 feet from east to west. Four stories of the building will be finished alike, except that the east and west sides will have a projected roof covering the veranda.

Entering from the east the visitor finds himself in a commodious vestibule from which he passes into the main exhibit hall containing the agricultural display. This is a practically rectangular building, the dimensions being 48x100. On the west side of the first floor are three office rooms, one of the largest 21x30 and the others 17x19 each. One of the smaller offices is connected with a postoffice and general intelligence office. On the first floor is also an open reception room, 20x30.

The second story is reached by two broad stairways nine feet wide. The large room on the second floor 48x100 feet in size will be devoted to the main exhibit. On this floor is an upper large reception room, 28x30, a gentlemen's smoking room 17x19, an office 21x21, ladies' private parlors, etc. Particular attention has been given to the question of light for the art and educational exhibits on the second floor. In addition to the large windows on all four sides, twenty-eight windows have been placed on the roof, thus affording an ample amount of overhead light. The building will be constructed of wood, glass and iron, combined to produce an imposing, as well as a graceful effect. The roof will probably be of patent asphalt, painted white. Taken altogether, the Nebraska building will not suffer by comparison with those of other western states. North Side Parks. At the regular meeting of the North Omaha Improvement club, Chairman Peterson of the park committee, read a letter urging decisive work to secure the carrying out of the plans of the park commissioners as submitted in the bond proposition last fall. He also stated that the committee went before the Board of Health and obtained assurances that the sanitary condition of the locality near Ames avenue and Thirty-fifth street would be at once attended to. Mr. Pratt, of the sewer committee, reported having conferred with the ward councilmen and ascertained that $30,000 would be expended on the sewer this season. Mr. Roberts scored the last administration for the reckless laying of sidewalks without crosswalks.
