assured. Would it not be if the ladies would leave their hats at home or take them off in the ladies' reception room in charge of an attache of the house, so that an unobstructed view of the stage may be had? It may be impossible for some ladies to do this, but those who do will have the pleasant consciousness of having contributed materially to the enjoyment of those who may be behind them in the house.

The Dansant at the Garrison.

Society may excuse rudeness, may even pardon boorishness if there are thousands back of it, but it will never forgive an illy proportioned function, whether it be a din per, tea, kensington or reception, for the "open sesame" to the hearts of swell people is the perfect entertainment, well considered and tactfully managed. If Mrs. Frank Whenton, wife of the com-mandant of Fort Omaha, had no other claims for social distinction, her charming manner of entertaining would be quite sufficient to win her a place in the social world no matter where the orders of the army might call the general in the time of duty. But in addition to a most charming hostess Mrs. Wheaton can trace the family tree back to old colonial days and then beyend, so that all the require ments of social distinction are hers.

In sceeping with her recognized place in Oxclusive army circles the reception which she tendered Colonel and Mrs. J. B. Parke and Miss Nightingale Thursday from 3 to 7 at the commandant's residence in the garrison was as graceful and as pretty as the mos exacting "L bly desire. butterfly of pleasure" could possi-

The house is large and very comfortable for Uncle Sam is generous to his aides engaged in the preservation of peace. It is very remniscent of an old colonial mansion, wide hallways, airy rooms and grand stair-cases giving it for all the world a bygone atmosphere that is restful in these days of conglomerate architecture that passes cur-rent for Queen Anno, Italian, Renaissance, et cetera. On this occasion it was made ad-ditionally attractive by stands of arms, innuditionally attractive by stands of arms, innu-merable crossed swords, each with a his-tory of some prominent engagement and campaign, while innumerable flags were draped over dcors, on the sides of the walls, in niches and everywhere that a national banner might hang. Myriad pandles and prettily shaded lamps added to the picturesqueness of the scene, which, with the gay uniforms of the officers and brilliant costumes of the women made a never to be costumes of the women made a never to be forgotten picture. Mrs. Wheaton was not content with the delightful surroundings, however, but added a number of the surroundings, however, but added a number of new fea fures that gave the house the appearance of a Fashing Thursday. General and Mrs. Wheaton, Colonel and Mrs. Parke and Miss Nightingale, in whose honor the reception was given, received in the drawing room to the left of the wide hallway. Mrs. Wheaton was tocomingly and very elegantly attired in a black moire gown, low cut bodice, finished with point d'alencon.

Successful Leap Year Party. The Young Ladies' club, one of the many social organizations of the city, gave, on Tuesday evening, at the hotel Dellone, a thoroughly successful leap year party, which will be pleasantly remembered for a long ime to come. The entire management of the function was in charge of the ladies and the delightful evening testified to the amility of the promotors in arranging for such an affair.

While the decorations were not elaborate, they were exceedingly pretty, roses and smilax adding color to the scene and much of the success of the occasion is due Miss Maggie Swift, Maggie Riley and Rose Brady, who successfully planned and carried out all the pleasant details of the affair. They were also assisted by an able reception committee -Misses Brady, Koesters, Swift and Dwyer, while the floor committee, whose aim was to have no "wall flowers"-Misses Riley, Mullen, Lowery, McManon, Paul and Shan-non-were indefatigable workers in the cause of "woman's prerogative" in this year of 1892. who is visiting in the city. The first part of the evening was taken up by a musical pro-gram consisting of piano solos by Misses Daisy Higgins, Adle Simmons and Grace Daisy Higgins, Adle Simmons and Grace Williams. The striking feature of this was the part taken by Miss Simmons. She played a plano solo with a whistling accom-paniment, which could be excelled by none in sweet melody. A series of games was then played to see who had nerve to bid fourteen and then make it. It resulted in Miss Simmons receiving the ladles' prize, a handsome hand-painted cop and saucer, and Mr. Miller the gentleman's prize, a pack of celluloid cards with a hand-painted cover. ### The Ribbon Cotillon. Mr. Charles Wilson was the leader of the ubbon cotillon Monday evening at the Paxton and his thorough knowledge of the requirements of the position, which is an enviable one to say the least, contributed greatly to the pleasure of the evening. Under his leadership six direct and eight indirect figures were danced, the favors being confined to ribbons, which were exceedingly pretty and nicely gotten up. There was little attempt at floral decora-There was little attempt at horal decora-tion, aithough plants were distributed about the cafe of the Paxton, the room used for the occasion. The orchestra was entirely hidden from the guests by a portiere, the band oc-cupying the small ballway on the south side of the pretty apartment, which was beauti-fully illuminated for the occasion. And this seclusion of the orchestra was one of the pleasantest features of the cotillon, much commented upon by those who danced and those who looked on. A punch bowl also on the south side came in for pleasant notice, for it proved a very inviting shrine before the evening had materially lengthened. Mrs. Yost, Mrs. J. N. H. Patrick, Mrs. J.

J. Brown and Mrs. Poppleton, as patronesses of the cotilion, received the guests and gave reneral supervision to the progress of the german.

There were eight direct and sig indirect figures danced, Mr. Wison having been com-pelled to curtail the program owing to the inte hour when dancing began. Among the popular indirect figures danced were the Maypole, the Umbrella, small japanese um-brellas being given for favors, the sash fig-ure, men on the inside of a circle, the ladies throwing over their heads sashes and thus favoring their partners; the basket figure was particularly pretty, as was the "grand right and left," which gave endless enjoyment. Miss Stella Hamilton wore a beautiful cafe au lait silk with plattings of the same

Der Deutsche Club Dance.

I would be hard to imagine a more thor oughly enjoyable dancing party and banquet than that given by the German club Thursday evening at their club rooms, Eighteenth and Harney streets. These annual balls of the German club are mile-stones in the lives of the members, their wives and lady friends. they are looked forward to with the liveliest anticipation, for they are universally pleas-ant and charming. Heretofore the annual banquets of the club have been preceded by a bal masque or fancy dress party, but this year the committee having the function in charge decided to change the entertain-ment to a simple dancing party, and the success of the evening proved the wisdom of the genuemen who arranged the affair, Messrs. Fred Metz, jr., Juhus Peycko and Arthur mith.

Sixteen numbers were danced, the guests present sitting down to refreshments at 11:30 clock.

The costumes of the ladies were particularly handsome, and the scene from the bal-cony was an inspiring one indeed. Mrs. Fred Metz wore a lovely costume of
