NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS

J. L. Peters' Alleged Assaults on Trial in District Court.

STORY OF THE VICTIM'S SUFFERING

After Being Shot and Repeatedly Beaten He Crawled a Distance of Five Miles Through a Heavy Snow to Secure Relief.

The case of the state against Ross Sayers, charged with assault with intent to commit murder, was put on trial yesterday morning in the district court.

Sayers, his two brothers and his father were all arrested last Christmas day for visiting the house of J. L. Peters, who had been appointed receiver of the farm on which they had been residing, and it is alleged, shot Peters, beat him unmercifully and left him half dead.

All four were indicted for the same offense and at the same time, but they had demanded separate trials, so that the criminal calendar will take much more time than was at first supposed. It is thought that the trial now in progress will last until tomorrow at least.

Attorney Sweet, who appeared for the defendant, attacked the legality of the indictment upon which his client was brought to trial, on the same ground that has been brought up so many times, with reference to the apportionment of the members of the grand jury between the eastern and western halves of the county. The objection was overruled by the court, as usual, and the attorney for the defendant excepted.

Peters, the prosecutor, was on the witness stand a large part of the day, and told the story about as it has appeared in the papers. He stated that he was subjected to the horrible maltreatment of his assailants by crawling five miles over the ground, which was covered with a heavy snow, to the home of William Plummer, in order to get medical attention.

An attention could be given to his injuries. A plat of the house where the shooting occurred, which had been prepared by County Surveyor Johnson, was introduced in evidence, to show exactly the path of the shots that did the injury. Early in the afternoon an adjournment was taken, and morning in order to allow Judge Thornell and Clerk Campbell to go to Avoca, where a motion for a new trial in the case of the state against J. L. Peters, was to have a hearing.

Omaha Sunday Night. All car cleaners, oilers and inspectors are eligible to membership in the Omaha Association of Car Mechanics.

Ernest E. Cullis, the young man who swallowed a teacup full of morphine a couple of weeks ago because his ex-lady, Mrs. A. Beach, would not marry him, and then recovered, has come out of the hospital with the avowed intention of making things warm for Mrs. Beach, if lawyers can help him do it.

He has retained an attorney and yesterday morning commenced a suit in the district court against Mrs. Beach to recover from her $10,000 damages, which he claims by reason of the few remarks she dropped, while talking with some of her friends.

The subject of these remarks was that Cullis had stolen sixteen bushels of potatoes from her and taken them away in the night; that he was an all-around tough, liar and a thief and the truth was not in him. Cullis claims that these remarks, which were made to Miss Blanche Mulvaney and Rev. Henry Deion, and that they have prevented him from getting any work to do, he being a plumber by trade.

Suit for $50,000 Damages.

Mrs. Nathalie Pollard, who has been spending several months in the city, filed a petition in the district court yesterday, in which she demands a judgment in the sum of $50,000 against the World Publishing company of Omaha for defamation of character.

In the petition she alleges that she is engaged in the occupation of lecturing throughout the state, and that her reputation for morality is essential to her success in her business. She claims to have acquired a new reputation for morality and eloquence, but that this reputation was sadly spotted by an article that appeared in the World-Herald last January.

The article, she alleges, was a sensational charge of embezzlement, was represented as saying a number of things derogatory to her character. She claims that the charge was untrue, and that because of the publication of the article, the mental anguish she has sustained by being held up to public contempt, and because of the injury her business has sustained, are worth $50,000, and she asks a judgment for damages in that sum.
