

WHY HAD THE SOLDIER BEEN SHOT?

Explanation of the Salvation Army Tragedy by the Wounded Captain.

WOULDN'T CHUM WITH MISS BEIDLER

Strange Story of One Girl's Infatuation for Another and Jealousy that Led to Attempted Assassination and Self Murder.

Captain Hattie Smith of the Salvation Army has told her story of the tragedy at the Salvation Army building in Omaha, last night when she was shot by Nettie Beidler, who, after committing the deed, took her own life.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

The tragedy caused a profound sensation at the time. Many of the features of it were peculiar. The Beidler girl, prior to her double crime, gave no intimation of her intentions that were considered worthy of a headline in all efforts to show a cause for her crime were futile.

Captain Hattie Smith has recovered from the effects of her wound and at a Salvation Army meeting at Des Moines, Ia., the other night gave her version of the affair. It was a strange story. That woman should fall desperately in love with a girl who is a common player; that a male lover should decide to kill his innamorata because she refuses to marry him on account of the fact that she is simply "opening the chestnut burr"; but that one woman should become infatuated with another, that rather than to live without her, she would kill her and then herself, are things which the Beidler girl tried to do.

teaspoonfuls of sweet milk and warm water and as I was about to leave the hospital he said, 'I fully confess it is something higher than any power that has been used upon you, captain. To God be all the glory.'

"The only cause of the terrible event, was that Miss Beidler was partially insane."

PLATSMOUTH IS READY

Some Talk About the Team Which Will Enter the State League.

PLATSMOUTH, Neb., March 20.—Special to THE BEE.—Ever since the formation of the State league the enthusiasm of our base ball cranks has been on the rise until now it has reached the status of claiming the championship.

Manager T. M. Patterson has already signed eight first class players and has wired the following players sure and their names are a guarantee that we will have winning ball this year: Maupin, catcher; Reeves, pitcher; Parsons, pitcher; Miller, pitcher; First base and change catcher; McKibbin, second base; Porter, third base; Kennedy, third base; Clark, short stop; Miller, outfielder; and Sam Peterson, left field.

Maupin, our catcher, is one of the best known players in the state and one of the best known men in the league. He is a fine player and has been in the famous Lincoln Giants and of our local team. In addition to his magnificent catching qualities he is a fine player in the field and has been in the famous Lincoln Giants and of our local team. In addition to his magnificent catching qualities he is a fine player in the field and has been in the famous Lincoln Giants and of our local team.

George Yapp, when in condition, is one of the best pitchers in the west. He is a right handed pitcher and he is also a good fielder. He is also a good fielder. He is also a good fielder. He is also a good fielder. He is also a good fielder.

Allice Mitchell and Frances Ward, pitchers in the recent Tennessee tragedy, were wealthy and had social prominence. Hattie Smith and her would-be murderer had the same species of insanity made victims of both.

Recounting her story, Captain Smith said to the army: "I am very glad to be with you tonight and to be able to tell you the truth of this terrible event which happened a few months ago in Omaha, Neb."

"In the first place this Miss Nettie Beidler, who committed this terrible crime, never had any connection with the Salvation Army in any way other than to simply attend our meetings, as any other disinterested person might do."

"The first time I ever saw Miss Beidler was in July last, when the Salvation Army held a series of special meetings in a tent there. I had charge of the Council Bluffs corps of the army at that time. I saw Miss Beidler in the tent and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

"I saw her several times during that series of camp meetings and often she would try to try very hard to get her to consecrate her life to God, but all in vain. After the camp meetings were over she attended our meetings and she was very friendly and so I went to her and asked her if she was a Christian."

"No," she said, "but I would like to be." "I told her if she was willing to give up her sinful ways and to serve God I would forgive her of her sins and enable her to live a Christian life. But she said, 'Not now, and I left her.'"

CHILI BLACKS CASH

Depleted Condition of the National Exchange the Object of Much Solicitude.

PATRIOTIC RESOLVE OF THE CABINET

Montt and His Advisers Will Work Hard to Rehabilitate the Country.

SAENZ PENA RESIGNS HIS ERMINE

Certain of the Presidency, He Leaves the Argentine Supreme Bench Voluntarily.

FOR CLOSER COMMERCIAL RELATIONS

Argentine Republic Wants a New Treaty with the United States—Interesting News From the South American States.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.] VALPARAISO, Chile, (via Galveston, Tex.), March 19.—(By Mexican Cable to the New York Herald—Special to THE BEE.)—President Montt and his new cabinet have given a meeting to the commission conservadora, which supervises the acts of the government during the recess of congress, has been called for March 22. It is said that it will consider the advisability of favoring an extraordinary session of congress early in April for the discussion of the financial status of the country and other important questions.

Both the head of the conservadora and the Huancair have received additions to their rapid firing guns. Reports from Iquique state that the nitrate mines will be reopened April 1.

Very sweet event. The first big social event that has occurred since the triumph of the congressional party was the wedding here today of Captain Munoz of the Esmeralda and Soñorita Teresa Arlegui, daughter of the late minister of the interior.

Mercantile circles express great confidence in Augustin Edwards' conduct of the ministry of finance.

Inquiry into the Careros case has been turned over to the fiscal. The evidence confirms what I have already cabled you in regard to the matter.

The court of appeals has admitted the members of Balmaceda's cabinet to bail.

Program of the Government. In the official program the new cabinet aims that President Montt desires to prove by deed as well as word that he would govern Chile in accordance with public opinion, freely expressed and represented by its legitimate organ—congress. The cabinet pledges that it will adopt a course of moderation and act in accord. It adds that nothing is to be gained by partisan intrigues. Vacancies will be filled by competent men, irrespective of politics. The finance question it says is paramount, and the national interest require that the expenditures be minimized.

Notes from Argentina. BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, (via Galveston, Tex.) March 19.—(By Mexican Cable to the New York Herald—Special to THE BEE.)—Saenz Pena, the leading candidate for the presidency, has resigned his office as judge of the supreme court.

The gas company of Bogotano has notified the municipal authorities that unless within five days they pay four years' arrears it will cut off all the lights.

News from Asuncion, Paraguay, is to the effect that the government is expecting from day to day a revolution. The general feeling among the people of the cities and country is therefore long there will be a most serious outbreak against the present rulers, whose course has given the greatest dissatisfaction.

Rumors were current last night that Admiral Walker will shortly present a defensive and offensive alliance treaty between the United States and Argentina. The comments of the papers are extremely favorable to the idea if terms can be satisfactorily arranged between the two countries. The Argentine minister at Washington, it is said, has been ordered to return to Buenos Aires relative to the treaty, so that he may fully inform his government as to opinions at Washington in regard to the matter.

Worn has been received from San Luis that fears are entertained of an uprising among the soldiers. From San Juan comes rumors that plots to assassinate government officials have been discovered.

Local outbreak quelled. Lo Paz, Bolivia, (via Galveston, Tex.) March 19.—(By Mexican Cable to the New York Herald—Special to THE BEE.)—General Gonzalez is authority for the statement that complete peace has been restored in the province of Aredez, and that all of the hostile Indians have been dispersed with the exception of one band, which has retired to a fortified position in the mountains of Letapo. The government troops are on the march to attack the Indians.

Dr. Mariano Baptista, now Bolivian minister to Argentina, has informed the national party of his intention to return to Bolivia immediately for the purpose of running for the presidency.

ENGLISH CONSUL

Bits of Chat About Persons and Things Now Before the Public.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.] LONDON, March 19.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to THE BEE.]—London reports that the country would make quite a Beauséjourian coup de theatre for Lord Salisbury.

He'll Take in Texas. Among the fellow-passengers with the duchess of Marlborough on the Majestic is Lord Delevall Beresford, a brother of Lord Charles Beresford. He is on his way to Texas, where he owns a large ranch. Delevall is one of the best horsemen in England. A few nights before sailing he was dining at the Savoy with a party of Americans. After dinner all entered the courtyard, where stood a brougham occupied by an elderly woman and her daughter. The coachman was standing at the horses' heads. Suddenly the horse shied, jumped the air and made a dash for the street. Lord Delevall, who was in evening dress, rushed forward, executed a leap that would have