NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS

Organization of Rev. Mr. Hall's New Church is Not Yet Completed.

COUNCIL OF LOCAL BAPTISTS CALLED

Will Discuss the Matter and Determine I the "Temple" Congregation Shall Be Recognized as a Separate Baptist Church or Not.

There was a large attendance at the Tem ple hall Baptist church yesterday, and the pastor, Rev. I., A. Hall, was at his best. It was expected that formal steps would be taken toward organizing the new courch, but owing to the fallure to complete all the arrangements the contemplated action was not taken. It has been decided to hold a church council next Saturday, and for this purpose a number of letters have been sent out to the various Baptist churches in this immediate vicinity asking them to send delegates to the council. The council will determine whether or not the Temple Baptist church will be organized, or recognized if an organization is perfected. If the delegates so deade, they will remain and take part in the recognition services which will follow the meeting of the council. About a dozen churches have been included in the invitation, and it is expected that quite a gathering of rominent Baptists will result. In the morning service Rev. Mr. Hall drew a vivid picture of the scene of Christ's parable of the coming of the bridegroom. The main point of the lesson Christ taught by the parable was to provide for the future The scriptures say nothing against providing for the future, but everything about not providing enough. Provide for the coming of Christ. You do not know how low the lamp is burning. He had heard people say that they could accept Jesus any time, but it was a terrible mistaks. You cannot be a Christian as easy at one time as another. There are times when it is easier to be a Christian than at others. There are times when we can hear God's voice, and there are times when the spirit decays, the soul is dead, the light has gone out. You cannot go and meet the bridegroom with borrowed light. Better receive Christ now when the sensibilities are tender and are drawing you.

The discourse abounded in strong and per-tinent illustrations and the lessons enforced with eloquent argument.

At the opening and closing of the service a beautiful solo was rendered by Mr. Hypes

At Boyd's opera house, commencing next Thursday, for three nights only, "The Power of the Press." The elaborate character ofthe production has attracted general attention, and the excellence of Manager Pitou's company has served to enhance the good work done by the authors in the prin-cipal scenes of the play. It has been most gratifying to have the prominence given to the influence of the daily press so heartly approved at each repetition of the lines touching upon the subject, and the results thus far have been most satisfactory for both sides of the curtain.

Miss Gale, who is well known as the leading lady of the Booth and Barrett company, will play a week's engagement at Boyd's new theater, commencing Monday evening next. She will be supported by Mr. Creston Clarke and an excellent company, including the principal members of the late Booth and Barrett company. Miss Gale will present the following repertoire: Monday evening and Saturday matinee, "Romeo and Juliet; Tuesday evening, "Ingomar;" Wednesday and Saturday evenings, "As You Like it;" Thursday evening, "The Lady of Lyons," and Friday evening "Much Ado About Nothing."

NEW BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

St. Nicholas for April contains the usual number of entertaining short stories and serials. Charles Frederick Holder of Pasadena, Cal., tells in his most charming way of "The Famous Tortugas Bull Fight." Charles F. Lummis contributes his third article on "Strange Corners of Our Country," in a graphic description of the snake dance of the Moquis. Mary Halleck Foote describes the great Colorado canon in November. The il-lustrations and other features are fully up to the usual high degree of excellence which has made St. Nicholas a universal favorite among the young people.

S. R. Bottone has just given to the world a handy little compilation under the title of "A Guide to Electric Lighting for the Use of Householders and Amatours." In another of his works, "Electric Bells," the author has treated of the application of electricity to signaling purposes; in "Electric Lighting" he has clearly demonstrated by what means electricity can be made subservient to the purposes of illumination and the trans-mission of motive power. It is profusely illustrated and is made as readable as a work on such a purely scientific subject could be expected to be. Published by Macmilian & Co., New York.

Emile Souvestre always writes interestingly and "Man and Money," a translation of which has just been made by Mary J. Serrano, maintains his high reputation as a talented novelist of the modern French school, Published by Cassell Publishing company, 104 and 106 Fourth avenue, New

"My Conjuring Tricks" is an amusing account of the experiences of an amateur conjuror. "More About Uncle John's Cucumber Frames" is a garden story that all who know "Uncle John" will want to read. "The Rev. J. Sturgis' Finds" is an illustrated story, while "About Trams" is an illustrated sketch that will find a sym pathetic audience in all who depend upon these ships of the streets for getting to and from their piaces of business. Allen Eastman Cross contributes a fine tribute to Cardinal Manning in the April New England Magazine. It is based upon a newspaper paragraph, which in noting his beneficence said that at his funeral the best thing said of him was: "'He was good to the noor.' This alone is a voble epitaph." Mr. Cross takes this for the title and central idea of his poem, which all lovers of Manning will cherish. Mr. S. B. Whitney, the organist and choir master of the Church of the Advent of Boston, furnishes a good descriptive article on "Surpliced Boy Choirs in America," and Edward G. Mason of Chi-America," and Edward G. Mason of Chicago furnishes a scholarly and valuable paper on "The Early Visitors to Chicago." The poets cannot complain of not getting a show in this issue of the New England Magazine. There are, in addition to the very fine poem by Allen Eastman Cross, other very creditable poetical effusions by C. lia P. Woolley, Gertrude Christian Fosdick, Charles Gordon Rogers, Minna Irving and James G. Burnett. The thousands of admirers of James Whitcomb Itiley will turn to Walter Blackburn Harte's generous estito Walter Biackburn Harte's generous esti-mate of his poetry with a great deal of pleasure. Harte calls Riley "the Burns of contemporary American poetry."

Of all the many publications issued spec-ially for the edification of the young it would be difficult to select a better or more instrucbe difficult to select a better or more instruc-tive one than "Historia; an illustrated monthly magazine of historital stories." The number for April is full of excellent papers, There are "The Story of Macbeth," by Elmer Harr "Tales from Josephus Abso-lom," by Frank G. Soule; "The Great Railroad Raid of the Civil War," by Myron E. Farley and "She Dieg for France," by Albert f. Sawyer, besides the continuation of several serial stories. NEW GIGANTIC FOSSILS.

Late Discoveries in Northwestern Nebraska

Which Puzzle Scientists. Irwin H. Barbour in Science, Febru-ary 19, 1892: While on a collecting trip the past summer in the Bad Lands of northwestern Nebraska and southwestern South Dakota my attention was called by Mr. Charles E. Holmes (Yale, 84) to some gigantic fossils abounding in the extreme northern corner of Ne-braska. At that time I secured one large specimen, and noted and sketched several other forms, intending to return later and complete the work in that highly interesting field. These fossils seem altogether so re markable and of such imposing size and peculiarity of form, that I have felt great hesitancy in offering any suggestions as to what they are or in describ-ing them at all; and what I now venture to publish is proposed tentatively, till I can return to this same spot and com plete the work cut short last season. Not less than two genera and three spsies of family were noted, and, because of their similarity to ummense corkscrews, we dubbed them "Devil's Cork-screws," and I offer for them the provisional name Daimonelix. At least two gigantic and one small species were observed. They are almost mathematically exact and regular in form, and suggest a great three-inch vine coiled with strict uniformity of pitch about a four or fiveinch pole. However, the vine and pole, as the cut will show, are just as much one as are the thread and screw which they so strikingly resemble. At the bottom of all is a transverse piece, indefinitely long and about ten inches in diameter, rendering the appearance of the whole like that of the veritable

Just what this great "rizome" is, remains to be learned. In the meantime, suffice it to say that, as far as observed, it consists invariably of a small obliquely descending portion and a large obliquely ascending one. The latter, as shown by all that have been dug out, at least seem to curve upward gradually and ultimately reach the surface. The great "underground" stem of my own specimen was followed from the wall of a small butte some ten feet straight into its interior, and then the work of further excavating in rock so very soft and crumbling, yet so peculiarly difficult to work, had to be abandoned. In the two remaining forms especially noted, one gigantic, the other small, the coil had the form and pitch of the common open corkscrew.

They covered an area of several miles, where I saw large numbers of them, all standing in the incom-pletely lithitied sandstone as erect as so many titanic hop poles with so many titanic vines coiled upon them. I estimated that many could not be less than thirty or more feet in height; at any rate, we frequently saw in the vertical walls of small canvons or draws fifteen feet of exposed corkscrews, while an unknown amount had been wreathed from the top and an indefinite amount was still buried in the rocks below. Then again, I dug out the basal portion of one specimen fully thirty feet below the surface, where the tip-ends of others were exposed. These strange forms seem to be casts, no structure being visible to the eye, or under the glass. The gray matrix readily weathers away from the specimen, which on fracture shows a spongy, friable, white wall, surrounding a core or matrix; though of chalky apearance, the wall is strictly silicious. White reminding one forcibly of some monstrous fossil bryozoan, it seems improbable that it is such, neither is it a plant nor a mollusk as I believe. Possioly it is the case of some ancient worm. have shown the specimen to eastern as well as western geologists and botanists, besides sending drawings and descrip-tions of it to others, who pronounce it entirely new to them. As far as my own experience goes, I have neither seen anything of the kind in any of our large eastern museums nor have seen anything published relating to it, and feel reasonable confidence in offering a notice of what I believe to be a new paleontological specimen, trusting that, f nothing more, it may elicit information on the matter from anyone who has

Doctors! Pshaw! Take Beecham's Pills. Facts About Europe's Rulers.

According to the Almanach de Gotha for 1892, Europe numbers at present forty sovereigns. Of these the longest on the throne is Queen Victoria, whose reign has lasted fifty-four years. After her come the Duke Ernest of Saxe-Co burg, who has reigned forty-seven years; the prince of Walleck, forty-six years, and the emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, forty-three years. In a matter of age Pope Leo XIII. is the oldest, he being the only ruler who has passed 80. There are seven sovereigns who have passed 70, these being: Queen Victoria, Christian II. of Denmark; the Grand Duke Frederick William of Mecklenburg-Strellitz, Grand Duke Adolph of Luxembourg. prince of Schaumbourg-Lippe and Duke

Ernest of Saxe-Coburg. The five youngest sovereigns are: William II. of Germany, 32 years; Carlos I. of Portugal, 28 years; Alexander I. of Servia, 15 years; Wilhelmina of Holland, 11 years, and Alphonse XIII.

of Spain, 5 years.

The number of monarchies in Europe has increased by one during the past year, the duchy of Luxembourg having become a sovereign state by the death of the queen of Holland.

Sherman's March.

Fred Emerson Brooks, a California poet, tells this story: He visited General Sherman two years ago when the latter was in San Francisco and asked the privilege of putting into verse the story of the march to the sea, something after the style of T. Buchanan Read's "Sheridan's Ride." The general replied. "Mr. Read came to me with the same proposition himself, my dear young man, on two occasions, and I begged him not to make the effort and to be satisfied with the fame the Sheridan poem had made for him-but as you spring from far western soil, it will be pleasant for me to give you the ideas you desire, not that I come for the im-mortalization in verselso much as I do for a voice from this far western count y speaking for the brave soldiers who carried their guns all that long journey and made Lee surrender, a conclusion reached without the shedding of blood." This was the last General Sherman heard of the poem, says the Indianapolis Journal, until Memorial day at Bistonthe year before he died—when Mr. Brooks, who had been chosen to read the poem of the day, walked down the platform, impersonating a blind soldier in search of Sherman. The story in the poem was of a simple soldier, full of love patriotism and devotion, and at its complotion the aged general was weeping like a child.

AN IDYL OF THE PACIFIC.

In an Island White with Skeletons of an Extinct Indian Bacc.

On the lonely wind-swept island of San Nicolas, eighty miles off the coast of Ventura county, California, where, as far back as the memory of man runs, hundreds of grisly white skeletons have dotted the valleys and hillsides, local archeologists are now busy gathering the relic of a strange, extinct race, says the San Francisco Examiner.

The island is ten miles long and oval in shape, being four miles across at the widest part. Strange utensils of ser-pentine, sandstone and stetite are found here among the human bones, and the island and its erstwhile inhabitants have history so curious that it is difficult of comprehension.

In 1835 the padres of Santa Barbara, earning that there were but sixteen of the strange Indian race then living there, determined to rescue them from the island. They went over in a sloop and succeeded, as they thought, in get ting all on board. At the last moment an Indian woman returned for her child, and one of the frequent storms of the Channel island springing up, the sloop was driven away without her. The sloop went on the rocks of Point Conception and all on board were lost Sixteen years later Captain George Nidever and two men went from the coast on a sloop to hunt otter off San Nicolas. On looking they were like Crusoe, astonished to discover human footprints on the sand. They saw no one, however, and a storm compelled them to nut to sea.

It was two years thereafter that the adventurous captain, revolving in his mind the sight of the scotprints in the uncanny island, determined to go and discover and bring over the woman of whom he had vaguely heard Men accompanied him and at lenghth they saw on the surf beaten shore a woman with long tawny hair dressed in a queer garb of colored birdskins and scraping with a bone knife the blubber

They surrounded and approached her steadily, and although suddenly confronted she did not appear in the least afraid, but smiled, and then falling on her knees prayed to the sun. The wild woman made no objection when by signs she was made to understand that she was to go with them in the boat. They reached Santa Barbara across the rough sea, and the first thing the Indian woman saw was Dr. S. L. Shaw, now 80 years old, and yet living there, riding a horse. She had never seen or heard of any object like it, and thought the man and horse were one, and she knelt on the shore and offered her devotions to it. Two weeks afterwards the last inhabitant of the rock-ribbed tempest-tossed San Nicolas died from eating food to which she was unaccustomed, furnished by her rescuers, and the curtain fell on ier strange race forever.

Wild dogs had eaten her child. Her dress of red and blue feathers, a wonderful creation of barbaric hands, was sent to the pope of Rome. Relic hunters have morture postles oline steatite canoes and other curious things there for some years past and shipped them to various eastern and European universities. Skeletons and of skeletons have also collected in large bers, but today the bones of thousands of Indians are scattered about there. Some lie face down, indicating that they have fallen in battle. There are so many human relies there that San Nicolas is known as the "Isle of Skulls." The lonely island, whose highest part is but 1.040 feet above the sea, is noted for the high artistic class of many of its relics. Had the woman rescued, then 52 years old, not died, a story passing strange would no doubt have been told of the race so long hemmed in by the waste of waters about. As it is, much of the strange story is shrowded in mystery forever.

Mrs. H. C. Gording, Evansville, Ind., says: 'i have tried Bradycrotine for headache and have always found relief."

Death of a Veteran. Major John Fay, an old army and naval veteran, died at Pueblo, Colo., last week. It is related that he was the hero of a very interesting incident in the fight between the Merrimac and the Cumberland. He was on board the Cumberland. Just before the ship sank her colors were shot away by the Merri-mae and Fay caught the flag, or what emained of it, as it fell, and, climbing he ropes with great rapidity, he raised he colors near the musthead just as the umberland went to the bottom, so that he went down with colors flying.
