THE ORIGINAL THIRTEEN. A Small Part of the United States as It Now Extata. It is so usual to think of the United States as a continental country, extending from ocean to ocean, and from the great lakes to the gulf of Mexico, that it is not easy for us at this date to appreciate its comparatively small beginnings, says a writer in the Yankee The thirteen original states extending along the Atlantic coast embraced, it is true, more territory than those same states include today. When the independence of this country was first acknowledged by Great Britain our soil extended no farther west than the Mississippi river, and not a foot of our territory was washed by the Gulf of Mexico. But it must be remembered that only a narrow strip of this territory along the Atlantic was inhabited by civ ized man, and most of even this thin strip was but sparsely populated. The entire population of the country was only about 3,000,000. The at present great and populous states of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia were unreclaimed from the wilderness or settled by a few straggling pioneers and hardy frontiersmen. greater part of what is now the United States, and which lies beyond the Mississippi, then formed no portion of our domain, but was parceled out among several foreign powers. Its resources were entirely unknown to anybody and its extent appreciated by but few.

As time went on, and what was then called "the west" began to be settled, the government of the United States commenced to appreciate that the country labored under a great disadvantage in being shut off from the Gulf of Mexico. The citizens of the union who lived west of the Alloghanies were discontented and irritated to find a foreign power shutting them off from connection with the gulf, and thus practically destroying all opportunity for commerce, except through an alien, and sometimes an unfriendly territory.

This unhappy condition of affairs was solved, to a great degree, by the farseeing statesmanship of Thomas Jefferson. Napoleon, hard pressed by his numerous wars, had expressed a willingness to part with the French province of Louisiana. After a shrewdly concluded negotiation, this territory was purchased by our government for a little over $11,000,000. The Louisiana which Jefferson purchased of Napoleon consists of a far greater area than the present state of Louisiana. It included, besides the present limit of that state, the great state of l'exas, Arkansas, Missouri, the Indian Territory, Iowa), Nebraska, Minnesota, Dakota, nearly all of Montana, and parts f New Mexico, Kausas, Colorado and Vyoming. This was the greatest purchase of territory in all history. region today includes some of the most fourishing sections of the country, and ts wealth and greatness is not yet one-half developed. This purchase gave us control of the reat Mississippi and Missouri rivers rom their sources to their mouths; Spain still owned Florida, which then consisted of its present terri-tory and a narrow strip of land south of the thirty-first parallel of latiude and extending westward to the Mississippi river. But this was given to the United States in 1819 in exchange for Texas and a part of New Mexico. But this Texan territory was again reannexed to the United States in 1845, an act that was the direct cause of the Mexican war. The Oregon country, embracing the present great states of Oregon and Washington, was long claimed by both Great Britain and the United States. But this entire region was finally un-Great Britain in 1856.

fornia, Nevada, Utah and Arizona was ceded to this country by Mexico in 1848. The great region of Alaska, of over 500,000 square miles, was purchased in Russia in 1867. Thus the United States has grown from a narrow strip along the Atlantic coast to continental empire reaching from coast to coast. Of all this territory, with the possible exception of Texas, not a foot has been gained by conquest. All new territory was ab-sorbed by its own consent, obtained by treaty, or else purchased outright. Sailing Ships Are Coming.

The record of shipbuilding in New England for 1891 showed that the sailing ship is by no means a thing of the past even in this country. In England the returns for the same year are even more suggestive, the tonnage increase of 8 per cent being all in sailing vessels. Sailing vessels, moreover, constituted

25 per cent of the total construction of 1891, against 9 per cent in 1887. The obvious lessen is that a profitable field still exists for sailing ships, and that under certain conditions they are expected to compete successfully with Gladstone and His Grandchild The lady who wields all power at Hawarden at present is little Miss Drew, Mr. Gladstone's 2-year-old grandchild.

The first intimation we had in the next room was a peal of laughter on Mr. Gladstone's part at the obvious necessity of capitulating to that daring invasion, as musical and hearty as ever came from human lips, for his laugh is one of his greatest attractions. "Presently the grand old man and the little child, separated by eighty years of time, came hand in hand together into the drawing-room. Mrs. Gladstone runs to the piano and strikes up a lively waltz tune, and in a second the two partners are dancing together, the grand old man putting into his pirouettes a lot of funny, old-fashioned little steps, learned of our great grandmothers seventy-five years ago, which it was impossible to view without delight and applause, though so much pathos mingled with comedy in the touching scene.

MUST THE CORSET GO? Some Sensible Reasons for Discarding It-

How to Begin.

The question of discarding corsets is agitating the brains of many young women nowadays. The slim, shapely beauties do not so much object as do the fat and pudgy women, who seem to think that a trim waist is all that is necessary to carry them through life. A woman is reported in the San Francisco Chronicle as saying: "When you come to realize the freedom of having no stiff, hard, tight squeezing affair holding you, as it seems sometimes, as though you were in a vise, you begin to get a little real enjoyment from life. At first there is a feeling as if a strong support were taken away from you—as i you could not sit up straight alone, and I confess, too, to having had a feeling of weakness in the sides and back. When you come to think of it that to think of it that was natural enough. and there is no doubt that, had I laced tighter than I did, I would have felt still weaker and still more in need of support. Nothing in the world would tempt me to wear a corset again, now that I can feel the delicious comfort of being stayless and stringless about the waist; nothing but obesity. Were I to get fat, of course I would have to wear the hateful old things. A fat woman without a corset looks like a stall-fed

A physician said: "With some women I am told the main object of wearing a corset is that they shall have fine busts, but, as a matter of fact, corset wearing is accountable for the lack of develop ment that one sees in many young women of the day. Were they to throw away their corsets they would find that in a short time the longed-for development would come, and unless they were uncommonly or in poor health they would not have so very long to wait, either. In all the photographs of wild women that one sees, whether they are Sioux, Sumatras. or South Sea Islanders, one observes that a lack of bust development is the exception and not the rule. Nature is nature every time, and natural woman is healthy woman, under ordinary cirumstances and conditions. I may state that it is not always well to be too precipitate in this matter of throwing aside

"The best way for a woman to rid herself of corsets is to first loosen them up and wear them that way for a few weeks, This will in itself give her great free-dom, and will prepare her for the greater comfort which she is sure to enjoy later when she shall have finally cast off her tightly buckled shield and made of herself a wholly free woman. Then let the strings be let out still further and reservedly ceded to this country by | further, until the ribs of the corset give actually no support to the back, when you will see, there is no exception to the rule that radical and extreme measures suddenly applied often result disastrously. It is better to take the reform in hand with a determination not to pursue it too hastily. Yes, I have no objection to what are known as 'waists. They are all well enough, if the women must wear something to keep them in shape, as they call it. There is a great deal of difference between the reeds and bamboos in the 'waists' and the steel and whalebone of the corsets. Compared with the corsets they are indeed quite harmless."

Wanted to Be on Hand, There are some droll Irishmen in ongressman O'Neill's district, according to the stories he relates in the Washington Star. An old fellow who had scraped together $25,000 or $30,000 wanted Lawyer O'Neill to draw up his will. When the document was appar ently finished the lawyers asked if there was anything clse he wanted put down.
"Oh, yes," said the Irishman. "Fifty dollars to be spent on the boys when I am taken to the cemetery on the day of my funeral." Cavalry cometery, in which all the Catholics of St. Louis are buried, is several miles beyond the outskirts of the city, and there are numerous road houses at which "the boys" are in the habit of stopping for drinks on their way back from a funeral. Mr. O'Neill said to his client: "I presume you wan the $50 spent on the way back from Cal-"Be jabers, no!" exclaimed the client

HISTORIC GROUND.

Speeding in Modern Coaches by the Spots Where Crook and Custer Fought,

Hon, John Finerty of Ghicago made a tour of Montana recently, and writes entertainingly in the Chicago Tribune of the famous Crook anh Custer fields, as seen from the Northern Pacific road, and the wonderful changes wrought in sixteen years. Mr. Finerty was with Crook in the capacity of correspondent throughout the Sioux war of 1876, and his reminiscences are particularly interesting. He says: The Northern Pacific spans the river just four miles north of what is known as Custer's Crossing, and I could see from the windows of the Pullman car the tops of the amphitheater of hills amid which General Crook's brigade encamped in the dreary fall of 1876, tentloss, rationless and under a pelting rain which converted the whole country into a veritable quagmire. The contrast between my wretched, muddy bivouse of that time and the comforts of civilization on wheels as now experiof sixteen years had passed since that unpleasant vet stirring event.

"Are we out of Dakota yet?" inquired a stout man, one of a party of four engaged in playing whist across the aisle in the sleeper.

"Pretty nearly," I finswered, as I saw the well remembered crests of Sentinel Buttes-the outlying pickets of the mighty battle line of the Little Missouri bluffs—rising only a short distance away on our right. Crook's scouts had a skirmish there with a body of Indians in the memorable Slim Buttes campaign. On our left I could see distinctly the two razor-backed bluffs through which the brigade, all bedraggled and disgusted, had defiled toward the Little Missouri in '76, and the remembrance of many a brave comrade now no more caused a feeting of sadness to steal over We had camped on Andrew's me. creek, and on Beaver creek, called also the Indian fork of the Little Missouri, at the period to which I have referred, Crook's soldiers were mustered in the valley of the latter stream, according to the bi-monthly custom. I wondered how many of those brave and stalwart men would now respond to roll call on this side of eternity. But though the old campaigners have mostly passed away, the valleys remain and they are among the most fertile to be found in the great cattle ranges of east ern Montana. Night had fallen as we passed rapidly--for the train goes fast on that section of the road-Glendive, O Fallon, Blatchford, Powder River crossing, and Miles City-all famous in Indian history, the latter being on the site of General Miles' cantonment of 1876-177, when he inflicted such heavy blows upon the bostiles in that region

A number of soldiers of the Twenty-second infantry, a regiment long and gloriously associated with the frontier, got on the cars at Miles bound for their post at Fort Keogh, only three miles westward. We stopped at the Fort depot to let them off and heard the challenge of the sentinels and the rattle of arms as, one by one, they passed in. A short, compactly built officer came upon the platform as we were leaving, and thought I recognized in him my old friend Major W. H. Powell, distin-guished in warfare against the savages. The last station I heard called out was Rosebud. Sixty or more miles north, near the headquarters of the stream, Crook fought his big battle with the combined Sioux and Cheyenne tribes on me 17, 1876, and up thr and winding ca...on General Custer marched at the head of the Seventh cavalry less than a week later to the point where he to the point where he turned off to the Little Big Horn, where he forfeited his life for his daring in the midst of a roaring flood of angry hostiles the 25th of that "month of battles." It is a strange outcome that the Northern Cheyennes, who fought against our troops more desperately than any of the other tribes, have their reservation established on the Rosebua near the field where Cook fought, and within sight of the Custer battlefield. They are a brave and spirited tribe-the Spartans of the Indian race—and are held in more respect by their white neighbors than any other breed of savages. Poor fellows! Pinched with hunger as they have been, they have refrained from breaking the law, and many a generous ranchman has given them an occasional beef to "make their hearts feel good" during the hard times which seem ever to remain with this proud, gallant and justly renowned tribe of native Americans. Under favorable conditions the Cheyennes would sustain the pen-pictures of Fenimore

A Fine Statue of Sir William Wallace to Be Presented to Baltimore. Scotchmen all over the country will be interested in the colossal bronze statue of Sir William Waliace, to be presented to the city of Baltimore by W. W. Spence. The statue will be placed on a pedestal representing a series of crags, which will be thirteen feet six inches high and will occupy a prominent position in Druid Hill park. The figure represents Wallaco clad in a suit of mail and brandishing his sword. The left hand rests on a shield, part of which is con-cealed behind the figure. A Scottish horn, like the one with which Wallace summoned his clansmen, is swung at the side. The bearded face bears an expression of determination and courage. The whole figure is full of spirit. The statue is an exact reproduction of the national monument to Wallace's memory which stands on Abbey Craig, a mass of rugged stone near Stirling, Scotland. It was designed by D. W. Stevenson, in whose studio in Edinburgh Mr. Spence saw it before the unveiling in 1887. Mr. Spence has commissioned Mr. Stevenson to make the reproduction for Baltimore. The following inscription will be placed on the pedestal:

"Wallace-Patriot and Martyr for
