It was only after a long, tedious tramp, with heavy hearts and everlightening pockets, that we came upon the advance party. They welcomed us with what grace they could, which was not much; but our arrival mattered little, for others quickly came along our trail, now in companies and again singly, until there were fully fifty goldseekers of almost as many nationalities upon the ground. All of these remained, not one went farther. There was no need, for the bed of the gold had Acres, half acres and lots on electric motor road. mission of the keeper of this saloon, there will be preaching here next Sun-day afternoon, and I mean to practice that which I preach." A hum of excited voices now drowned the speaker's words. When it ceased he had gone. Judging from the conversation which followed, it seemed probable that the parson, if he should attempt to carry out his intention, would encounter a lively opposition, the camp not being an assembly of saints, not even latter-day But something occurred that night which entirely altered the situation. A sharp word spoken by Togue's son to a rough Yankee led to a rapid unmuz-zling of "bulldogs," with the result that the barkeeper's son, who was a general favorite, was shot through the shoulder. Camp opinion ran high against the perpetrator, who was even threatened with lynching. When the tumult was at its highest.

the parson came back and quickly made himself master of the condition of affairs.

"Hold, unhallowed men!" he exclaimed in those low, earnest tones of his. "would you add sin to sin? Let this man go, and your forgiveness shall be his groutest punishment." "Stand aside, Mister, this ain't no critical condition of young Togue. He then further urged the inappropriaten in a ness of those destructive weapons being ttering brought into the house of the Prince of Peace, stated his personal dread of such, r even and concluded an earnest appeal by in looksisting that all who might attend his all the ministrations should deliver up their weapons to the saloonkeeper on enterup his large The gaunt miners looked foolishly ion for sheepish, laughed, demurred, and then, ie barwhen they saw that the man meant what nse and he said, handed over their irons into the custody of Bert Togue. igging

Togue took charge of all these, placing them in the box which served as a pulpit, so that the parson trod the carnai weapons under his feet.

Several weeks passed, and the influ-ence of Parson Joel, as he was familiarly called, began to effect a marked improvement in the camp. Duels became less frequent, irregularities less pro-nounced; the weakest found that they which had some chance in the battle for wealth and life. The Sunday afternoon preaching became an extraordinary success; not a man among us would have missed nd low it upon any consideration, the parson had such a winning way with him. Togue, junior, too, began to improve the accumulated precious metal to the bank. Parson Joel had been with us three months, finding plenty of work, both in instructing and nursing his rough flock, more than one member of which it had been his melancholy duty to consign to the anriferous dust. During this time he had increasingly endeared himself to all, so that more than one nugget had been pressed upon him for acceptance by rough fellows who could conceive of no other means of showing their grati-tude. These were invariably decided, with the remark that he had enough for his personal needs, and sought not theirs, but them. All this increased Parson Joel's reputation for goodness; he became idolized of all.

Once in every month an armed escort came from 'Frisco, and conveyed Frisco

About this time the pirates of the prairio became increasingly during, and there were rumors that a band of them had allied with the road agents, forming a camp in the hills, under the leadership of a daring female named Bess, whom they had constituted their

The rumor acquired force from the fact that a man who had recently joined us was found shot dead in the scrub. This occurrence served to make us increasingly careful; but no one apprehended serious trouble, such as an attack upon the camp, which by this time numbered 100 souls all told, men whose hands could keep their head.s The month was drawing to a close. The Saturday night saw the last bag of dust deposited; and the honest brokers retired, holding fully 15,000 pounds' worth of the minors' property, which would, all being well, be en route for 'Frisco on the following Monday. On Sunday morning the honest, quictgoing miners remained reading or smoking in their shantles, or wandered aimlessly down the gully, while the rougher sort scattered around among the various bars which had sprung up

When the hour for service struck, every one, except the brokers and young Togue, who, with the willing consent of Parson Joel, had gone for a stroll, was in his place.

Togue, although vastly improved, was his own doorway, shot through the heart. The other broker had fled. With a wild cry for vengeance, we turned and snatched such weapons as were convenient, then, throwing ourelves upon our horses, dashed away in swift, relentless pursuit.

The fugitive evidently observed this, for, putting his steed to its fullest stretch of speed, he rode recklessly over every impediment; and his retreat ap peared secured, for he distanced the foremost of us at every stride. In another quarter of a mile he would have gained the shelter of the ranker scrub, where pursuit would have been less hopeless; but, before he could do so, a puff of smoke floated out over a distant reef; this was followed by the report of a rifle, which reached our ears as we saw the galloping horse stumble, throwing the rider heavily over its head.

A man-it was young Togue-came eisurely across the rocks, carrying a still smoking rifle in his hand. He was making directly for the scene of the catastrophe, but some of the riders reached the spot almost as quickly as

The aim had been true. The horse, a nagnificent sorrel, lay dead in its tracks, ten yards behind, its hanless rider, who was bruised out of all semblance to humanity. A coarse red wig had fatlen from his head, and a rich wealth of blood-draggled gelden hair traited out over the stones.

Young Togue stopped, wiped his weapon and coolly remarked: "I thought something had gone wrong, that's why I fired. Sorry I wiped the fellow out though.

"By the jumping Jehoshophat, it's our Parson Joel; anyway all that's left of him," murmured some one.

Togue stepped forward, a light of recognition flashed into his eyes, and he fell upon his knees, tearing away the rough coat in his frenzied endeavor to discover whether the heart had ceased to beat. He had scarcely done this, when he sprang to his feet with consternation depicted upon his face, crying, "Boys, by all the powers, it is a wonan!

We were still standing, baffled and angry, around the corpse, when a band of horsemen dashed up at a hard gallop. As the leader sprang from his horse, he half-pushed, half-dragged a vittainouslooking rufflan to the front.

"Here, you honest fellows, he called out in tones of command, "do any of you know this rapparee scoundrel? caught him galooting around three miles below, and as he couldn't give a good account of himself, took the liberty of bringing him along with us."

A dozen men sprang forward to look into the captive's face as he glared defiantly, daring them to do their worst,

Then the fellow's gaze fell upon the body of Parson Joel. In a moment the strong man was bowed with anguish, his fortitude forsook hin, he fell upon his knees, gently raised the battered head in his grimy hands, and, passionately kissing the pallid brow, wailed: "Oh! Bess, Bess! Good Heaven?"

Then we all knew that Joel Baidwin, parson, sick-nurse, trusted friend and gold robber, was none other than Bess, the notorious queen of the pirates of the prairie and the villainous road agents, who had for so long been the scourge of California. For one t rief moment afterwards we felt and at heart.
