SWELL CIRCLES' DULL DAYS

What Fociety Found to do in the Past Seven Days.

GLOOMY OUTLOOK FOR THE FUTURE

Marriages of the Past Week-Entertainments Throughout the City-Preparing for the June Exedus-Movements Here and There.

Had it not been for the reception at the garrison on Wednesday, two church receptions Thursday, a dinner or two at the clubs and the performance of Grace Furniss' clever farce comedy, "Tulu," by amateurs last evening at Germania hall, the week past might have been said with entire propriety to have gone to seed, socially. The one or two supshiny days of the past seven gave promise of a revival of social interests, but just when we were all congratulating ourselves that the season was to be rounded in proper form, down came the rain with as much ease as if it had not rained at all during the past twenty days.

Like the weather, society has had a be draggled, dampish suggestion, and May days have been reminiscent of lowering skies, wet streets, frigid temperature and general revulsion of feeling.

The Woman with a Box Coat has arrived! The Woman with a Eox Coat has arrived! And what a spectacle sheis! The first sight of her on Farnam street was a greater been to the crowd than the arrival of the first circus of the season. It happened on sunny Thursday when the town was out for its hebdomanal parade. So close were the streets that locomotion about Sixteenth and Farnam was exasperatingly slow, and the toiling promenaders seemed to take notice of little that was in sight—saving and excepting the Woman with a Box Coat. She was by long odds the most conspicuous, the most criticised, the most observed, the most outre, and the most self-approved person in outre, and the most self-approved person in the throng.

How her woman's heart must have fluttered and leaped and thumped with the joy that always springs from woman's discovery that she has something unlike the possessions of all other women in sight. She had shrewdly chosen as her promenade chum a demure little woman with a Quaker-like modesty of apparel and an air of shrinking timidity. The contrast was assertive. Nobody could have failed to notice it. Up, down and across Farnam street they moved, followed everywhere by those for whom the coat seemed to possess a baleful and irresistiple fascination

The Coat kept herself persistently in evidence until darkness settled over the city, and then with slow and reluctant march, like the long lingering twilight of a summer day, she faded into shadow and was seen no more. Union College Alumni.

Tuesday evening Hon. John L. Webster and Mrs. Webster gave a dinner at their home, 578 South Twenty-fifth avenue, to President Marsh and the alumni of Mt. Union college, Ohio. The tables were profusely decorated with La France roses and freighted down with good things. It was an evening of feasting, of reminiscences and of toasting and was thoroughly enjoyed by thirty-two persons, who in the days gone by were connected with Mt. Union college. A detections menu of ten courses was enjoyed by those present, after which came a still further feast. Mr. Webster in a few appropriate remarks welcomed the guests, who were so pleasantly drawn togother by the fraternal bonds of their Alma Mater, to which Dr. Marsh, president of the college, responded, outlining the work done by it and giving very pleasant remuniscences of many who had been of its children. Further remarks full of interest were made by Hon. Lewis Miller of Akron, O., president of the board of trustees; Judge Lawrence of Bellefontaine; Dr. C. W. Smith, editor of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate; Dr. Hamilton of Boston, Dr. Conner of Johnstown, Pa., were connected with Mt. Union college. Passing of a Pioneer.

A correspondent from Tioga, writing to The Agitator of Weilsboro, Pa., of Mrs. De Pui, who died recently in this city, says: "Mrs. De Pul was born in 1810 at York, Pa. She received the best educational and social advantages the country afforded at that day. Her father, Thomas H. McGra h. was a man of high social position and enter tained many distinguished mun at his hos pitable home, his accomplished family having the benefit of much cultured society. Mrs. Do Pul always retained a lively impression of the personality of the different person-ages connected with her father's memory, and loved to recall the prestize of her younger days in the home life. "She was married to Major Vine De Pui at her father's house in York in December, 1887. They made the weiding journey by packet boat and slage coach from York to Tioga in five days—a distance of 150 miles. In the following spring they went to house-keeping at the old homestead on the Do Pui farm two miles below town, a picturesque and quaint house built and occupied by the parents of Vine, who was the first born of ight childres in that then new home. The house was thirty-two years old when Mrs. De Pui entered as a bride her future home. Seven children-six sons and one daughter were born to her, all of whom located in dif erent parts of the west. Two of the sous have died George, a lawyer of promising ability, in Newville, Iil., and James in Seda-ita, from an injury on the cars.

"Mrs. De Pui was a wonderfully bright and attractive woman and singularly adaptive in her nature. Having been reared on the borders of slavery, where servants were pleuty and cheap, it was a great change for her when she came up into this northern part of the state and found the ways and methods of domestic management so different: "here" searce the mathematical and reent; "heip" scarce, the mothers and daugh ters doing their awa work mostly, with per-hups one servant for the heavier part; set shy cheerfully threw her spirit into the 'mtricacles" of the situation, and with a win-ning grace and pleasantry she passed through an experience of several months, made bear able by her deep devotion to her tusband, whose kind consideration and sympathetic endeavors to mosify the quality of her cares.

Her second son, George, was born at her home in York, and when she came back to Tior a she brought two colored servants with her, who remained until her children were nearly grown. "The family removed from the farm to town in 1852, so as to be nearer the schools, and went back in 1860, where they remained until the death of Major De Put, which took place in 1869. Four years later Mrs. De Put went west to live with her daughter. Mrs. Nichols, whose devotion to her mother all these years was semothing beautiful to wit-

"It is a singular fact that Major vine De Pur's death was the only one that occurred in that old house during its occupancy for 61 years by the De Pur family."

Mrs. Samuel Burns and son Robert leave next Tuesday for Mount Auburn seminary, Cincinnati, to attend the graduation exercises of the class of '92, of which Miss Mac Burns is one of the brightest members, Later, Mrs. Burns, Miss Burns and Ropert will return to Chicago, where they will as-sist in installing Mrs. Nellio Burns Eastman in her new home, returning to Omaha about June 15. Apropos of Miss Burns' graduation the following will show what school girls will think of: "A very unique hotel banquet was given by the graduating class of Mount Auburn institute, near Cincinnati, Friday night.

The hall of the Young Men's institute had only space enough to contain the happy assemblage who were present to enjoy them-selves at the event of the third spring socia-ble of 1892. They fully demonstrated the fact that every succeeding entertainment under the aupices of the Young Men's institute raises the esteem to a higher plane of popularity. To describe the merits of the sociable it can only be expressed by the voice and sentiment of those present, which would be the unanimous assent to the question that for mirth, merriment and enjoyment Young Men's institute is unsurpassed. The Young Men's institute is increasing in members very rapidly, and if the present prospects are a forerunner of the future, it will have 500 members on its roll by fall. Young Men's Institute Athietic club has already ought swinging rings, climbing rove, strik ing bag for boxing exercises and other para-phernalia to complete their gymnasium outfit. Considerable interest is manifested by the nembers in athletic sports, and in judgment of the progress they are making, it is perfectly in order to say that some of the best atmetes of the city will be the result of their energy and painstaking.

Miss Yost, in honor of Miss Markham, gave a decidedly novel function Friday evening. In the dressing rooms reposed large paper bags, which were found to con-tain, when opened below stairs, untrimmed hats in those carried by the men and silk with which to fabricate necktics in those of the girls. The dining room was transformed into a temperary millinery stop, with hats, flowers, slik, etc., while walls hung with the latest Parisian plates met the eyes, and then the fair hostess made known that the sewing ability of the company was to be tested be-fore a severe tribunal. With more energy fore a severe tribunal. With more energy than skill the men trimmed hats while the girls made neckties. Dainty prizes were awarded to the most successful, and after the most delicious of refreshments a very unique and enjoyable evening was brought to a close. Those present were Miss Markham, Miss Mary Poppleton, Miss Hoagland, Aliss Laura Hoagland, Miss Nash, Miss Brown, Miss Sherwood, Mr. Hail, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Gannett, Mr. Sherwood, Mr. R. W. Patrick, Mr. John Patrick, Mr. Offutt, Mr. Drake, Mr. Henry Wyman.
