"The courts having deprived me, under the law, of all practical control of the police force I cannot, in justice to myself, assume any responsibility for the work of the present force. Nearly all its members hav-ing been appointed without my consent and emphatic protest it would be a mere farce for me to attempt to control or direct their, actions. I trust that they will do their duty in a satisfactory manner and that a fair minded public will place the credit or censure, as the case may be, with the authorities who control them."

At the last meeting of the city council an ordinance was passed providing for the cleution of a president of the council, and defining the manner in which the presiden shall be elected. As it was originally drafted, the ordinance provided that "the mayor and city council shall elect," etc., but before the ordinance was passed the words "the mayor" were stricken out. object of the amendment was to prevent the mayor from voting upon the election of a president in case of a tie. Mayor Weir today announces that he will veto the ordinance, for the reason that the statutes provide that the mayor shall have a casting vote upon all questions upon which the councilmen are equally divided. The Boston Saturday Evening Gazette tells a story showing that an ignorance of Latin is sometimes a disadvantage. A young business man of Boston had a slight sore throat early in the winter, and meeting his cousin, a physician (and also something of a wag), he asked him what to do for it. "Oh, I'll write a prescription for you," was the answer. He wrote it, and the gentleman glanced at it before taking it into the druggist. It read something like this: "Aqua pura—ounces; chloride sodium—ounces. Shake before bottle.

using, and gargie with it every half hour." "How much is it?" queried the patient, as the druggist handed him the "Two dollars," was the reply. Last week another sore throat asserted itself, and, remembering the efficacy of his first treatment, he took in the bottle to be filled again. Another clerk waited on him, and when he inquired the price he was astonished by the cheerful answer: "Oh, we don't charge anything for salt and water!" He had paid $2 before for a bottle of water with two tablespoonfuls of salt dissolved in it.

He would have the band out at ā o'clock in the morning and the last thing in the evening. One day when the narrator's regiment had just come into camp General Custer ordered and re-band out. The men were tired and re-ported that they had lost the mouth-ported that they instruments, "Very well," said the General. "you may take pickaxes and shovels and help repair the roads. You may find the missing mouthpieces while you are working. It is unnecessary to state that the band played soon after.

CHARMING GARDEN SPOTS WHICH ABOUND

Sweet, Scented Flowers in Their Settings of Green-Pleasure Derived from the Cuitivation of the Rose-Lovely Grounds and Dooryards.

"The flowers that bloom in the spring" have not bloomed at all comparatively speaking. It is not the fault of the flowers nor the "tra-la," which is usually at the end of spring the way that Mr. Gilbert would have it. Spring itself is the only one to blame for the flowers not blooming. Had the beams of Oig Sol been more refulgent and had the sun laid a warmer touch upon the cheek of Mother Earth the flowers and this season's buds would have weeks ago made their debut in fragrant tailor made costume and a box coat in the numerous front yards, beautiful lawns and little romantic parks. But no, the tender buds have been compelled to remain in the box coats in the hot-house under the care and cultivation of their chaperon. A few that were out last season and attracted so much attention on account of their highly cultured achievements will again come out in the same circle with the buds as soon as their chaperon of the green house can trust them to the care of Jupiter

Pluvius. season and has held everything back, but within a fortnight you will see many buds of opening tulips. When they do finally appear and spread their showy petals in the sun they are the heralds of early summer. Those who are fond of flowers and have a taste for their cultivation will not begrudge the care they require, and yet a bed of early tulips means more labor than a bed of pan-

When the Tulios Bloom.

Late in the fall, when the last hardy aunual has drooped it nead and succumbed to the autumn frosts, the tulip bed must be brown bulbs that bave been hidden in the cellar during the summer. The soil must be judiciously enriched for the nourishment of the bulbs which lie quiet until the first warm days of early spring. When the flowers ap-pear, if they are protected from the sun by a light canvas, the period of bloom will con-tinue three or four weeks. The colors are generally better, however, if not suaded at all, though in this case the bloom is soon over. Sometimes a single day's hot sun will soon spoil them, though they ordinarily last from ten days to two weeks. As soon as the stem turns yellow and the leaves begin to dry, they should be put in a cool, dry place in paper bags, ready for planting out again next October.

The tulip bed in your garden serves double purpose, for now it is ready to be worked over for replanting and you may fill or devote it to the growth of blooming plants, geranium, fuschia, fever few, begonia, heliotrope and ever-blooming roses of the tea variety Pass by or through any of the green bouses and the florist will tell you that the lovers of flowers are just now thinking about the flower gardens and the general beautification of their plat of ground, be it small or

The cultivation of sweet peas with their delicious perfume has within the last few years enjoyed a wide popularity. They are the most satisfactory plants an amateur can grow, and are found in every color but yellow, and this it is now the aim of the florist to produce. "We have had the striped pansies," remarked a Dodge street florist to a BEE representative, "and now the yellow sweet peas and blue roses will probably come some day. Every one who expects to have a row of sweet pea climbers this summer has already planted the seeds so that blossoms may be picked all summer. Seeds planted in April will bloom about the last of June. This is the average period of fruition, aithough the days after the seed was sown. When you plant your peas plant them deep. When the little shoots are one and one-half inches above ground mulch them well and bring the earth up close about the roots. One of my foremen at the Twenty-fourth street green house says this is one of the surest ways of securing good colored, profusely blooming plants. Another important point to consider is strong bushing. This means brush at least seven feet high. Sweet peas require more water than almost any other flower that is grown in the garden, and dur-ing the dry season they must be regularly and freely wet. One other thing, after you plant is in bloom, pick the blossoms every day if you wish your flowers to last, and sacrifice the pods as fast as they come.

The Essence of Refinement. "Don't you know that the love of flowers is the essence of refinement? One of the early thoughts in planning an ideal home is the space for a flower bed or conservatory One of the first movements of a property owner is a consultation with the landscape gardener, and one of the constant aims of a municipality is to institute a system of parks and boulevards that shall be the lungs of a city, toward and through which the veins and arteries of a busy thoroughfare shall

"It is often the case, however, in cities, where tenement rows are more frequent than grass plats, that the only place where a woman can exercise her love for plants is in a window box. She fills it full with running, climbing, spreading bloom, and luxuri ates in the bright coloring just outside her

"There is one point, however, that cannot have failed the notice of those who have tried cultivating a window garden. No matter how beautiful the boxes are in June, or how well they appear in July, about August they begin to grow yellow and the blossoms dry up. They are faithfully wat-ered and carefully freed from weeds, but nehow the most watchful attention not prevent those plants from looking as it a miniature cyclone had blasted their growth. What is the trouble! Just this. There were a good many of them in the first place, for you had an ambition to have your particular box the prettiest on the street, and you made a liberal selection; but as the week went by and the roots grew stronger they required more nourishment, and the earth in the box that had never been enriched since the day it was put in had lost all the good ness it ever possessed. That is the secret of your yellow plants. Give them plant food, give the earth something to vitalize the roots and your flowers will be restored in Some of the lawns have already been ornamented with beds that are undergoing process of fertilizing for the reception plants that will be set out a few days later They Cultivate the Rose. Among the most beautiful flower yards i

On the Writing of Ads.

New York Commercial: "The gentleman who twangs his lyre in praise of the patent soap and scatters rhythmical pearls abroad in the interests of pills, said the business manager of one of the big magazines yesterday, "is a much scoffed at individual, and the gentle American humorist writes many funny stories concerning him. But he doesn't mind these particulary. The knowledge that one has captured a broad and extensive good thing aids one to stand a large amount of guying with it, and that as far as I am able to judge is the position of the clever writer. "While his more aspiring literary friends are indulging their ideas he puts his ambition in his pocket and corrals the almighty dollar with ease and dispatch.

"The demand for effective advertising is so strong that the slightest nov elty is snapped un with avidity and very well paid for. Here are some instances: "There is one young girl in town who does brisk and unique full column cuts for a number of clothing firms, She turns out three a week as a rule and hitches them on to some odd but appropriate sub-line. "Her income is extremly close to $5,000 a year, and she holds contracts that will asure her this amount annually for some time to come. "The man who originated the famous phrase which is used in connection with a certain camera received $1,000 for that alone, and was engaged for five years on the strength of it. "There are twenty men writing rhyth-mical ads whose income ranges from $3,000 to $4,000 yearly, and some of them are quite competent to take a literary fall out of Swinburne and acquire the prize in almost any kind of an intellectual cake walk "But they prefer individual obscurity and a dropsical bank account."
