SCHOOL EXHIBITS DESIRED

Correcting an Erroneous Impression Concerning the Columbian Commission.

ADVICE OF STATE TEACHERS REQUESTED

Not Only Agricultural But Education Interests Must Be Thoroughly Represented at the World's Fair-Myron Pratt Not Expected to Live.

Lincoln, Neb., June 13 .- | Special to The Bur. |-F. A. Barton, who was recently appointed superintendent of the educational department of Nebraska's World's fair exhibit, started for Chicago this morning on business connected with the exhibit. He issued a general circular today, in the course of which he says:

I ask for the full and hearty co-operation of all interested in this exhibit; and I particularly soiled the advice and activity of the schoolmen and schoolwenen of the state, to the end that Nebraska, of whose progress and standing we are justly so proud, may worthly appear at Chicago in 183, as not only an agricultural state but as an educational one, her school exhibit demenstrating that we have good reasons for our standing as the state having the lowest percentage of illiteracy within its borders. A great agricultural state Nebraska is acknowledged to he; we can demonstrate that she is equally as great educationally.

An impression has been abroad that the Nebraska Columbian commission is not particularly interested in the educational exhibit. There is no ground for such an opinion, for the members of this commission have done and are doing all in their power to forward the interests of this department, recognizing the fact that without a high place educationally among our sister states Nebraska cannot long maintain her high standing in all that goes to make up a great commonwealth. The state press, directed as it is by men with educational ideas and educational spirit and of pride in educational advancement and standing, is one of the most potent factors of our progress, and in the line of interesting the people at large it can do a work possible to no other power. Its co-operation is earnestly solicited. Let those who receive this circular see to it that the local papers have an opportunity to publish it and that the press of the swork.

A detailed plan will be sent out as soon as the particulars can be arranged. This will be the people at the state of the state read on the particulars on he arranged. This will be the people of the state of the

A detailed plan will be sent out as soon as the particulars can be arranged. This will be followed from time to time by other circulars and letters of information and directions. In the meantime suggestions will be thankfully received.

Myron Pratt May Die.

Myron Pratt, the gray haired murderer of Margaret Sperry, is very low with brain fever and nervous prostration and the doctors express grave fears as to his recovery. Since his incarceration he has grown very morose, and early last week he manifested symptoms of illness. His condition gradually became worse until yesterday his wife and children were summoned to his bedside. His physicians say that his illness is the natural result of remorse. His crime has weighed heavily upon his mind and he has long since lost the air of bravado which he assumed for several days after the tragedy.

"Dick" Thompson is Not Dead. St. Joseph, Mo., June 13 .- To the Editor of THE BEE: On the third page of THE SUN-DAY BEE, June 16, I find a dispatch from Hastings announcing my death. I presume the telegram will be read with considerable interest by my friends in Nebraska, but as to the outgrowth of such a report I have no knowledge whatever. As far as it relates to my demise there certainly is no foundation, and when one stors for a moment to consider and give the corpse time to reflect over the possibility of 190 pounds lying in state, cold and stiff, it is no wonder that he is vexed, and stiff, it is no wonder that he is vexed, not ever being allowed to wink his big too at the sultry clouds that hover above, or be permitted to turn over for a moment and write his farewell obituary, with no one to. identify his lifeless form.

No, sir; Dick Thompson is not dead, and he does not intend to be sidetracked thus early in the game. With best wishes for my numerous friends in my beloved Nebraska, I am very kindly yours.

Dick Thompson.

OMAHA'S NEW HOSTELRY.

The Mercer Throws its Doors Open to the Traveling Public. The opening of the Hotel Mercer gives another magnificent hostelry to Omaha, and one that is much needed in these busy times when the metropolis is the center of conventions, conferences, encampments, imperial councils and other forms of meetings of a national character. Dr. S. D. Mercer, one of the public-spirited citizens of the city, realizing the needs of Omaha from a hotel point of view has built and furnished from top to bottom this new and magnificent structure at the corner of Tweifth and Howard streets in the heart of the wholesale and jobbing trade of the city, within easy access of the retail houses, the piaces of amusement, churches and other attractions which guests most desire to patronize. And the promoter of this greatly needed enterprise has placed in charge, as manager of the Mercer, Don H. Porter, a hotel man of wide experience, who has catered to the best classes of hotel patrons, both north and south. A live, wide-awake manager is Mr. Porter, and although the house was only opened for histographs. was only opened for business last Thursday the register shows in what regard he is held by the traveling public. Behind the dosk in the daytime will be ment will be conducted.

But as to the hotel proper. In many respects it is the best equipped hotel in the city, the builder resting only when he felt that it was complete in every respect. The office on the first floor, opening on both Twelfth and Howard streets is particularly bright and airy. Furnished in hardwood and richly decorated in a neutral tink with art the flooring it is one of the hardwood and rich decorage, it is one of the handsomest rooms in the country. On the west of the office is the gentlemen's reading and writing room, complete in every respect, and still further on the west is the bar room, which is not yet opened, but will be in the which is not yet opened, but will be in the course of a few days. It is a particularly large room and attractively fornished. On the north side of the office is a ladies writing and reading room reached either from the street or a rear stairway from above stairs. The dining room is particularly cosy and comfortable, and large enough to accomodate 333 guests very pleasantly.

A very pleasant feature of the main drawing room is the absence of the conventional red carpet of the hotel, a pretty moquette with a gray ground having a flower in high relief, being a feature of this pretty apartment. Another feature that will commend itself to the ladies is the retunda on the parlor floor, which has been provided with a billiard table for the fair sex and the children, and from this rotunda, which is surrounded by a balcony on the third floor line, a private stairway on the third floor line, a private stairway leads to the dining room and office exclusively for the use of women. Other rooms on the parior floor are furnished with imperial velvets and as the furniture is all upon an elaborate plan the rooms could hardly be equaled except in some millionaire's home,
