State Business Men's Association Puts in a Day in Good Shape.

FOR BETTERING THEIR CONDITION

Matters of Interest to the Association Fully Discussed by the Members—How Affairs Have Progressed—Arranging for the Future.

In keeping with the name of the organization, the State Business Men's association took up the business promptly at 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

The committee appointed to arrange an order of business reported the following program for the guidance of the association:

9:15 a. m.—Address by S. S. English on "The duties of retail merchants."

9:30—Address by F. M. Roubles on "What should be the retailing of merchandise be under the supervision of the state government the same as banking and business? Is it possible?"

10 a. m.—Appointment of sergeant-at-arms to prevent any one from leaving room.

10:10 to 10:30—Discussion: "Shall this association advocate the roads act and how shall we go to it to obtain the result?"

The committee reported the following program for the guidance of the association:

THE STATE OF ILLINOIS SHOULD BE changed to eight or ten years.

The statute of limitation in Nebraska is four years on most accounts and five years on written instruments.

Secretary Hodgins offers a few suggestions. He advised the association to prepare for active work in the coming state legislature.

He believed that if the members of the association would move in harmony and all together the desired laws could be secured.

S. S. English chimed in a program to look after their own interests. Another difficulty arose out of the fact that the Knights of Labor had been opposed to the legislation needed by the business men.

The reason for this state of affairs was that the Knights of Labor who usually went to the legislative lobby were knights who never labored and very seldom rode their details.

He believed the honest, toiling masses of the Knights of Labor did not fully understand what it was that the business men wanted. They were not active in the exemption laws of the state would be a benefit to all honest men of all classes.

FOR THE ENSUING YEAR

Business Men Elect the Officers of Their Association—Other Matters Considered.

At the afternoon session of the association the committee of nominations reported.

Secretary Hodgins explained that the constitution provided that the president and general secretary of the Commercial Directory company should be the president and secretary of the Business Men's association for the reason that the Directory company handles the organization of the Business Men's association and the actual work of the association was conducted by the Directory company.

It was reported that the following nominations for the action of the association were made: President, O. J. King of Lincoln; second vice president, H. J. Lee of Fremont; third vice president, S. S. English of Eagle; first assistant secretary, Ed C. Yates, of Kearney; second assistant secretary, S. H. Colvin of McCook; third assistant secretary, C. F. Hudson of North Platte.

The report was adopted and the gentlemen proposed were elected.

President S. M. Crosby and Secretary R. T. Hodgins received their respective positions at the head of the association.

Legislative Subjects

Legislative subjects were further discussed. J. H. Hussey of Omaha discussed the desired changes in the garnishment laws.

He held that if the garnishment law which 15 per cent of a man's wages could be taken for debt would not work a hardship upon anybody.

H. C. Hansen of Hastings talked about several matters. He touched upon combines and trusts, particularly in the manufacturing of agricultural implements. The time had come, he believed, when there should be some very decisive legislation against the combines and a good many of the manufacturing agricultural implements. The time had come, he believed, when there should be some very decisive legislation against the combines and a good many of the manufacturing agricultural implements.

Mr. Vandell's Experience.

Mr. Vandell of Holdrege made some fun. He undertook to explain how the bill introduced in the last state legislature to change the exemption laws was defeated.

"That legislature was composed to a large extent of farmers and alliance men," said Mr. Vandell, "and fully 15 per cent of men were deathbeats, as I can prove. I had a petition in my store to be sent to the legislature when not enough signatures, asking for the passage of the law to give us better collection laws. One day I stepped out of my store for a few minutes and when I came back the petition had disappeared. I went to my store told that a certain man had torn it up and threw it in the stove. That man later on I learned had a horse named 'Hoops' and he was another deathbeat that took me in fine shape. He was clerk of the court on the last term. I helped to elect him and helped to dress him up so he could go down to Lincoln. I hold his notes today for $1,200, which he owes me and will not pay. He made the clearest case of the merchant world the inductive methods of reasoning Bacon gave to the method form and impetus which has grown up in the years. This new idea of induction," said Mr. Vandell, "has given new life to argument, to science, geology, astronomy, chemistry in those latter twentieth-century sciences which are the strongest truths to the Baconian method of induction."

Bacon's Influence Shown.

Miss Hattie Orcutt, a tall, willowy young woman, with pale and intellectual face, arrayed in the latest fashion of white robes at the throat, a student in the high school, read the thoughtful essay of the class, "The Influence of the Baconian Method on Science."

She noted that the clearness of the Baconian inductive methods of reasoning Bacon gave to the method form and impetus which has grown up in the years. This new idea of induction," said Mr. Vandell, "has given new life to argument, to science, geology, astronomy, chemistry in those latter twentieth-century sciences which are the strongest truths to the Baconian method of induction."

Farwell Dear Teachers.

"What the idealistic novel is doing for the nineteenth century" was the subject of Miss Abba Bowen's essay and valedictory address. The reading of idealistic novels also raises the moral tone," was the seed thought of the essay. In the ideal novel the sufferings are minimized the joys and pleasures maximized. The ideal novel cultivates in us higher ideas, a striving after better things. If the idealistic novel does these things, it is the ideal life in others it is a failure. The most humorous career may be gloried by the match after the truth, beauty and identity. Then with delicious phrasing she spoke "the final farewell" words that have been spoken for centuries to teachers and lower classmen and which will be spoken for years. The same tender words of parting, constructed differently true, but with the same meaning words that she has heard and felt in the writing and in the saying. And the flowers which followed the young lady's final effort showed what a genuine favorite she was.

Prizes Awarded.

Dr. Doherty, rector of the school, then awarded the prizes as follows: Hawkins prize for writing, Miss Helen Yates; Yaxos prize for grammar, Miss Ella Potter; Yaxos prize in arithmetic, Miss Emma Lytle; Yaxos prize in language, Miss Louise Rheim; Chase prize in rhetoric, Miss Flora Beasley; Miss Butterfield prize for art work, Miss Elmira Graves; Wallace prize for instrumental music, Miss Mabel Putnam; Bishop

BROWNELL'S COMMENCEMENT

Eight Young Women Receive Their Diplomas From the Bishop.

STORY OF THE GRADUATION EXERCISES.

Who Participated in the Twenty-fourth Annual Commencement Exercises of Omaha's School for Girls—Award of Prizes and Medals.

The memory of that crowded school room, the array of smiling faces, summertime costumes and happy hearts, its reek of fading flowers and the glorious June air, generally comes back to a graduate periodically on the anniversaries of the commencement.

It was there he sat with a number of fellow sufferers and waited for his diploma. It was there he feebly unadvised regarding the dangers of unbridled ambition and the view of modern thought.

The eight young women who faced the crowded chapel at Brownell hall yesterday morning will look back upon their commencement with mingled feelings, but always with pride, never with indifference, for women are different from men in this regard.

It was a beautiful commencement morn, the equities were perfect, and never has Brownell looked so truly as upon the occasion, for the largest class in its history passed out from its walls with the closing of the commencement exercises.

The playing of the Marche Hongroise by Kowalski, ushered in the pupils of the school, fresh, young, girlish faces, arrayed like the birds in white, following the faculty of the school, the trustees, Dr. Doherty, the rector, Rev. John A. Williams, Canon Whitmarsh, Rev. Mr. McClrackon, Rev. T. J. Mackay and the bishop of Omaha, Dr. S. B. Rose, Dr. George Worthington, in the purple of his office.

Miss Barnes Began It.

Without ceremony Miss Pearle Barnes inaugurated the twenty-fourth annual commencement of Brownell hall by reciting in a sweet, clear voice "The Winstling Requiem" a story of the sorrow of magnolia blossoms and Annie Laurie.

Miss Maude Parsons was to have read a story, "The Intentionality," but sickness prevented the young lady's appearance. Much to the regret of her friends and classmates, Miss M. Putnam played Weber's "Grecian Idyll" on the piano.

Miss N. Everts, with delightful self-possession, told "The effect of Greek intellect upon Roman institutions," was showing that she had read with very great care the merits of Jones and the present influences which were at work upon Roman institutions for centuries until the birth of Roman jurisprudence.

It was a clear exposition of the influence of the Greek mind like the leech, attached itself to Roman customs and life and by gradual absorption wrought in the mind of the Roman mind and thought of the Latin.

Bellonchi's pretty soprano song, "An Air" was wonderfully well sung by Miss Maude Means, Mrs. J. W. McArthur, Miss Everts, Miss N. Everts, Miss Hattie Orcutt, Miss Elmira Graves, Miss Mabel Putnam, Miss Clara Miller, Miss Kate Collins, Miss Mary Heintz, Miss Hattie Orcutt, Miss Elmira Graves, Miss Mabel Putnam, Miss Clara Miller, Miss Kate Collins, Miss Mary Heintz.

After the conferring of medals came the conferring of diplomas by the bishop of the diocese, upon the graduates of the class of '22, Misses A. Murphree, H. Everts, Adge Means, Hattie Orcutt, Maude Parsons, Miss Hattie Orcutt, Miss Elmira Graves, Miss Mabel Putnam, Miss Clara Miller, Miss Kate Collins, Miss Mary Heintz, Miss Hattie Orcutt, Miss Elmira Graves, Miss Mabel Putnam, Miss Clara Miller, Miss Kate Collins, Miss Mary Heintz.

IT'S TOO HOT, ISN'T IT?

Do let up on the weather, won't you?

When it's cold you kick, when it's warm you kick, when it rains it's too wet.

Some people are never satisfied with the weather, no matter if it's just what they've been praying for.

We're not responsible for the weather, and we don't think it's fair to lay it all to the gentleman who runs the "government guess factory" up in the tower either.

He's doing the best he can, with the tools he's got. The only sensible way to do at this time of the year is to be prepared for warm weather; it always comes.

Are you prepared for it? We are.

We never had so many good things in hot weather fixin's as we've got today.
