WORKING HOOSIERS

They Make a Fourteen-Inning Fight for a Game and Lose.

GEORGE DARBY'S BEAUTIFUL PITCHING

Three Hours of Hot Work in the Box Crowned by Victory-Star Struggle of the Season-How Other Games Went, Omaha, 10: Indianapolis, 4. Toledo, 7: Minneapolis, 4. Columbus, 6; Milwaukee, 4. Kansas City, 10; Fort Wayne, 4.

UITE THE STAR game of the season was that at Sportsman's park yesterday afternoon between Billy Sharsig's husky Hoosiers and Uncle David's boys.

It was likewise one of the most interesting and thrilling contests ever played on the Omaha diamond, and, best of all. Omaha won.

But cracky! how she did have to sweat and fume to do it, and at divers junctures in the great battle it looked as if she must go under, but a stiff upper lip and several big hickory clubs landed her safe at last.

It was in the fourteenth inning, after having collected tweive large horse collars in an unbroken row, that the big trick was turned. Darby, the boy from the San Joaquin valley, was in the box for the White Sox, and oh my! oh me! what a reticulation of curves and convolutions he did weave about the Blue Jays' necks. He had enough steam on to run a saw mill, and at critical stages the Indianians were but infants in his hands. For three long hours he snot them over like bullets from a gun, and at the close was as fresh as one or two motor car conductors who might be

But the Californian was not the only man in the fray, for Sheibeck was there or thereabouts, and so was Moxie Hengle and Uncle, too, despite an egregious muff. Eddie Haves was the side of a barn behind the plate, while King Kel and and the boy from the Bellevue house handled the stick as if they had been brought up on it. On the coaching lines reliable old Joe Visner snone forth with a refulgence that was dazzling.

For the Sharsig people Jerry Denny Quinn, whose father fought, bied and died on Braddock's gory field, was the bright particular luminary.

He only accepted eighteen out of nineteen chances offered, and the majority of them were narder than Gunther's skull, which is saying volumes. He fairly gorged himself on base hits, and at the finale was a bigger man than old Cleveland.
It looks, from the way the boy is cavorting about Old Hick Carpenter's corner, as if th veteran would never be recalled. Fatty O'Brien was also on hand, and Berger made a couple of snatches and throws that would have knocked Herman Long into a fit. Kid Madden did the best stick work. Another surprising feature about the after-noon performance, was the big crowd that witnessed it. Everybody thought that the game, owing to the counter attraction at the fair grounds, would be played to empty benches. But the biggest week day crowd of the senson was on hand, and the noise it made would have shrunk the din of the sham

Gunther, the man with the cast iron gall, He was there to umpire the game, and be fore he could be induced to leave the field Uncle had to send in a call for the fire de-He was going to have them turn the hose battle into insignificance

Finally, after the opening of the game had been delayed fully twenty minutes. Uncle made a reach for his hip pocket and Mr. Gunther jumped over the grand stand. Russ McKelvey umpired the game, and made an artistic job of it.

But here's what you're waiting for: OMAHA.

MANY KILLED AND INJURED

Forty-five Bruised and Mangled Victims of a Falling Bridge.

PINNED DOWN BY TONS OF TWISTED IRON

Workmen Crushed and Drowned-Weak ened by High Waters the Bridge Under Construction Across the Licking at Covington, Ky., Gives Way.

CINCINNATI, O., June 15 .- A casualty, such as throws a pall of sorrow over a community and sends a thrill of horror throughout the civilized world, happened on the Licking river between Newport and Covington, Ky., this forenoon. A wagon and street railway bridge was in process of construction between tne two cities. . The banks of the Licking are very steep at the point where this roadway and street railway bridge is to cross. Their slope is at least fifty degrees and they are very high. The contractors for the ironwork of the bridge were the Baird Brothers, Andrew and Robert, of Pittsburg. They both went down to death with their two score or more o workmen.

The bridge was a strong wrought-iron structure. The great stone piers on each side of the river were finished, as also were the approaches to them. The iron work of the approaches is very massive. The span between the two piers looks to be 360 feet. The height of the truss, which was to form the bridge span between these piers, was sixty-five feet above water. False work, piling and timber had been constructed in the river. On the top of this false work the construction of the iron truss began, exactly midway between the two piers, and the work was pushed from the middle both ways.

It Was Nearing Completion. Five bents or sections of the ponderous iron work had been constructed. Each bent or section was thirty feet long, making nearly half the span. On the top of this was an apparatus known to bridge men as the traveler, which is used to extend the structure from the ends. This traveler rose some thirty feet above the main structure. It was full of men at 10 o'clock this morning, and some of them near the top of it were nearly 100 feet above the water. The timbers of the false work were beams about sixteen inches square. They were old and weather beaten, and had evidently been used before. However, in bulkiness and to outward appearances they were strong. The facts show they were not strong enough for the immense weight they were required to bear.

Not a Warning Came. It was about 10 o'clock this morning when hirty-four men were on the traveler, and not one alive can tell how many men were working below when the awful calamity came. It came, too, like a bolt from heaven No warning came from those overtaxed beams of sturdy pine. Suddenly, as if broken by some resistless, invisible force, hey buckled, broke and crashed down into the river below, a mass of ruins, under which a score of human lives went out. The debris filled the deep stream from bank to bank. People filled both shores, but from the configuration of the wreck aid was most easily rendered from the Newport side. The stream was soon full of skiffs and the work of rescuing the living began and went on bravely. This work was kept up all day and is still going on tonight. The police of the three sister cities wer soon at the scene and rendered noble service in caring for the dead and removing the wounded to homes or hospitals. Story of a Survivor.

At the hour of the accident there were few At the hour of the accident there were few workmen on the bridge. Bruce Thomas, who was working on the bridge, says: "I was sitting in a sling working a racket. The first thing I knew I was falling. I heard no cracking of timbers, no outcry, I only knew I was going down. I had hardly time to think when I found myself at the bottom of the river, about twenty feat from the shore. I areas to the surface feet from the shore. I arose to the surface -I don't know how. Then I heard cries for help. A young man near me whose name I don't know shouted: '1'm killed; I'm brused a little on the legs. I saw several others who escaped, I don't know their names."

Work of a Hero.

Charles Wilkerson is a hero. His nome is 630 East Main street, Louisville, Ky. He says the timbers of the faise work buckled down stream and everything went down in a heap as quickly as a stone. Wilkerson saved many lives of the wounded, then went to divmany fives of the wounded, then went to diving for the dead. The first dead man he got was James J. Johnson of Havre de Grace, Md. This man had a brother injured at Canova, W. Va., who has become insane from his injuries while working for Baird Brothers. He had sued the Baird brothers Brothers. He had sued the Baird brothers for $10,000, and was here on the bridge looking up testimony from men engaged on their works. The next man Wilkerson recovered by diving was Andrew Baird, one of the contractors, who arrived here this morning and was engaged with his brother Robert in-specting the work. He intended to go away tonight. Robort has been here all along, superintending the work. These Baird brothers, by the way, were engaged on the great bridge at Memphis and have had much experience in bridge building.

Wikerson, after telling his story started with the superior of the superior for the river, saying: "I am going to keep on diving," and at sunset be was zealously keep ing his word. It Was Frail and Weak. There is one point in which all testimony agrees and that point was that the fall was in the twinkling of a. eye with no warning. A point on which there is no testimony is what caused the false work to give way. There are conjectures that the piling was not criven deep enough in the river, but the structure did not sink; it snapped. One thing is clear, it was not strong though it

The wounded were scattered all over the three cities of Cincinnati, Covington and Newport and surgical attendance was prompt, efficient and amply sufficient. List of the Dead.

They were attired in dark clive green uniforms, trimmed with gold and white, with a half shake surmounted by white plumes. They were loudly cheered when they passed th reviewing stand in company front, and were much noticed along the line of march. An hour after sunrise a big bank of black clouds appeared in the west and rapidly nenced to rain and the spirits of the soldiers fell. It continued showery until after guard mount, when the sun again showed its face. Then most of the companies were called out for a short drill, but as a general thing everyone took things easy in order to be in shape for the hard work of the afternoon.

At reveille yesterday morning there was a simultaneous opening of tent flaps, a unison in the appearance of heads from each open-ing, a common call for "bring that bucket, will yer! and hurry up," and a parade of dusky servants in snow white jackets up each company street with a pail, a case of laundry soap and a towel.
