A Railway Man's Opinion.

It really is something of an experience to make a trip on the Empire state express of the New York Central road, the "fastest regular train in the world" on "America's greatest," etc. etc. The experience, of course, does not include any definite sensation of speed for everyone who has traveled at all has probably traveled as fast in "spurts."

And no one who has traveled as fast has done it feeling the speed less; for the track is as straight for most of the way and the roadbed so excellent that it is not easy to realize the speed. The experience lies chiefly in the more consciousness that you are assisting at the breaking of records—just as there is delight in seeing a trotting record broken, though no man can tell by his eye whether a horse is moving two seconds to the mile faster or slower. And the fact that no stop is made from New York to Albany—that there is no interruption in the steady, rapid rush for all those 143 miles—is in itself a pleasure. Decidedly he who has not traveled by the Empire state express misses one of the supreme experiences of this day. It may be the supreme next year or next month. It may be eclipsed and "fallen from its high estate," but at present it holds the field and a man alights from the cars very self-satisfied and says "I have traveled."—The Railway Age, April 15, 1902.

Freight Rates from the East Are Not Properly Adjusted.

Omaha's manufacturers are complaining about the unjust discriminations in railroad freight rates. They claim that factories here cannot begin to compete with Chicago and St. Louis concerns on account of the difference in rates and classification of goods.

Manager Lewis Ley of the Omaha Tinware Manufacturing company, in conversation with a Bee reporter yesterday afternoon, stated that the discriminations were mostly in classification rates. He said Chicago manufacturers of tinware could ship their products to Sioux City as cheaply as Omaha tinware men could put their goods into that city.

There is a difference in distance in favor of Omaha of 493 miles. St. Louis manufacturers also get the same rate to Nebraska City as do Omaha dealers.

"From Chicago," said Mr. Ley, "the manufactured tinware is classed in freight lots as one class for double first class. The other class, whereas from Omaha the railroads divide the product up and class it as cans and pulls. On the latter article rates are high. We should be charged but a 2-cent rate per hundredweight on tinware, but are obliged to pay 37 1/2 cents on first class and often 75 cents for double first class. The other day on a car load of lard cans we were charged 75 cents to Sioux City—double first class. This is unjust, and the classification is all wrong. Manufacturers can't stand it. No wonder factories here can't compete with Chicago and St. Louis.

"We have to pay the same rate as they do and they have four or five times the distance to come. The difference in rates would soon make a man rich. On one car to Sioux City the classification rate was $11.36, which we were obliged to pay for 15,300 pounds of tin cans. At the 30-cent rate per hundredweight it would have been $4,590. This is the amount that should have been charged to us but we were required to pay $29,610 in excess of the rate on account of classification. You see this is an unjust discrimination against Omaha manufacturers—one that they can't stand.

"I shall try to get the rate adjusted, but I don't file my complaint with the classification committee at Chicago, I suppose, will get no satisfaction as that committee generally says it can do nothing in changing the classification."

This matter of classification will be taken before the Omaha freight bureau just as soon as that body is thoroughly organized.

DANGEROUS CROOKS CAPTURED. Quite a Number of Pickpockets Behind the City Jail Bars.

Ten of the gentlemen for whom Omaha is the latest Mecca and who are known in modern police vernacular as "dips," are now sequestered behind the bars of the county jail. The latest acquisition is John Morrison, who has his hand in a lady's pocket on Farnam street last night, when Detective Savage knocked him down, much to the surprise of the lady.

The detective force has been indefatigable in its mission out there, in this some contingent, and since Saturday has succeeded in bagging such a galaxy as is seldom secured at one time. Every man of them has a record and most of them have served time in various penitentiaries. The victims who have reported losses have not been very numerous, although the police have no doubt that many have been caught. One case which was hushed up at the request of the victim was that of a woman who had lost $200 in a pocketing line. He was in Omaha during the last holidays and tore the town from stem to stern.

A colored crook carrying to the postoffice corner of "Haver" street is another valuable catch, though he does not operate in the pocketing line. He was in Omaha during the last holidays and tore the town from stem to stern.

CIRCUIT COURT NOTES. Why Kate Summer Lost Her Position Near Fort Omaha.

Over in the criminal court the case of the state against Kate Summer Camp is on trial. The woman, who was the head jester in a beer garden opposite Fort Omaha last summer, is charged with having retained liquor without first having secured a license. The information charges that Nora Dooley was the person who sold the liquor to the state.

Judge Irvin has granted a temporary injunction, restraining the sheriff from selling the leasehold interest in the lot on which is situated the store formerly occupied by C. A. Stonehill, who went to the wall a few days ago. When Stonehill failed some of the creditors attached this leasehold. The sheriff advertised it for sale, the public auction to be held Friday afternoon. Now Gerald L. Stonehill has stepped in and under oath says that he purchased the leasehold from C. A. Stonehill on May 12, long before the failure. Saturday morning Judge Irvin will hear the arguments.
