DASTURE FOR CATTLE AHORSES, T. MURRAY A RACE OF LIBERTY LOVERS

President Harrison's Ancestors, Like Hinself, Great on Field and Forum.

AS A LAWYER, SOLDIER, STATESMAN

The Brilliant Stirring Life of the Republican Standard Bearer, Who Will Succeed Himself-Interesting Facts.

Benjamin Harrison, nominated for a second term in the high office of prestdent of the United States, has been a life-long member of the republican party and an uncompromising champion of union and liberty. The one conspicuous characteristic of the house of Harrison, running back 300 years, has been unwavering adherence to constitutional principles and the advancement of republican institutions. It was this steadfastness of purpose, this championship of the people's rights against the prerogatives of kings, which led the first noted member of the family to give his life in their defense. This first General Harrison was one of Cromwell's trusted lieutenants. Inspired with the integrity which has always been a lending trait in the blood the great protector appointed him one of the board of commissioners to try King Charles, and with the unalterable loyalty to party principle and friends the first General Harrison signed the death warrant which consigned the weak and vacillating Charles I to the headsman's block. The political reversals of succeeding years brought General Har-rison once more to the front in English history and for the last time. By order of Charles II, the personal friend and lieutenant of Cromwell, the champion of the people, was sentenced to be hanged, and on October 18, 1630, he met death unflinchingly on the scaffold. The revengeful bitterness of the Stuarts left little in the way of prosperity or comfort to be expected by the Harrison family, and so it came about that in less than a generation later the family emigrated to America as Virginia colonists. It mattered little whether in monarchial England or colonial America that the hand of tyranny or oppression was stretched above their heads, the Harrisons, father and son, through succeeding generations, fought against its power.

Benjamin Harrison was born in the house of William Henry Harrison, at North Bend, O., August 20, 1833. was just 7 years old when his grand-father was elected president in father was elected prosing the "hard-cider-and-log-cabin" the "hard-cider-and-log-cabin" paign. The president-elect took the lad on a visit to Cincin-nati, his first experience in a city. The country boy saw a familiar object in the apples on a street stand, delightedly filled his pockets with them and went on his rural way. He was greatly surprised when the president-elect had to pay for them. Nobedy charged for a pocketful of apples at North Bend.

His father was John Scott Harrison, who was twice a successful candidate for the suffrages of his fellow citizens as county clerk. He was a farmer, too. and brought his sons up to be farmers. But Ben was taught at home, sent to the district school regularly, then to Cary's academy near Cincinnati, and at 10 was matriculated in Miama university, Oxford, O., where he began to learn rapidly. In January, 1852, he was graduated from that institution fourth in a class of sixteen.

Studying Law. For two years "Ben" Harrison studied aw in the office of Bellamy Storer in Cincinnati. Before he was 21 he had married and been admitted to the bar. He was a good student. In March, 1854, Mr. Harrison settled in Indianapolis. with the small fortune of $800, inherited from the estate of a deceased aunt, Mrs. General Findlay of Cincinnati. He first entered the office of John H. Rea, clerk of the district court of the United States, and while engaged there was invited by Major Jonathan W. Gordon to ssist in the prosecution of the celebrated "Point Lookout" burglary case, being pitted against Governor Walace, who represented the defense. Governor Wallace was impressed with his perseverance and energy, and invited him to a partnership. These qualities have led him to success at the bar, where other more brilliant, fascinating and eloquent men have failed of his financial reward. A friendly pen writes of him in those early days: "His was not an imposing figure at that time. A little slender fellow, with a smooth face, a big, towwhite head, no neck to speak of, and only the rather incredible fact that he had a wife saved him from being mistaken for a schoolboy. He was poor, too, and for a long time lived in three rooms in a little old house, still standing in Vermont street near Alabama. Yet he was successful almost from the start. One of his earliest employments was by the democratic governor, Joseph A. Wright, in the governor, Joseph A. legislative investigation, wherein he displayed much ability. Then he was displayed much ability. Then he was so fortunate as to be selected for assist-ant prosecutor in the case of a woman charged with poisoning a man at the old Ray house—a case which excited a great deal of public interest. His success in that brought him clients, and of them he has since had no lack. Indeed, he has for ten or fifteen years been one of the foremost lawyers in the state, and, now that the Hendricks firm is broken up and ex-Senator McDonald largely out of the taw, he may be said, with the possible exception of John M. Butler, to stand at the head of his profession in Indiana." Talks Well When He Wishes.

Of his method it was said: "In a case at law he brings a moral force to bear upon any crooked work or conceal-ment that is as powerful as any skill in handling it. His scorn and sarcasm has an 'ugly honesty' in its expression that will skin or scalp the victim, according to the degree of his culpability. speaking he has a high, shrill voice, urplessant to the car for the first few moments, but a great clearnes of enunciation soon absorbs the sense in the subject. His manner is very carnest and at any proper point sweeps on like a cavalry charge. He has an aggressive streak in his nature, as his square, firm jaw and the 'clench' with which he shuts his mouth indicate. He has abundant pluck in the use of it, and with an aroused conscience is no re-specter of persons."

During the past four years Mr. Harri-son's reputation as an orator has been vastly enhanced. He has talked well both in public and private. During the cele-brated tour which he took through the south and to the Pacific coast ne made many apt and well rounded speeches, each particularly pleasing to the people to whom it was addressed.

How Harrison Joined the Army. Brevet Brigadier General Harrison's war record is officially given as follows:
"He was commissioned in July, 1812, as second lieutenant of Indiana unteers; raised company A of Seventieth Indiana volunteer infantry, was commissioned captain, and on the organiza-tion of the regiment was commissioned colonel; in August went with the regiment to Kentucky and served until mustered out in June, 1825; was bre-vetted brigadier general in February, 1866; in October, 1834, while in the field, was re-cleeted reporter of the su-pressed out. preme court.

this interesting way: In July, 1882, just after a repeated proclamation for troops was issued by President Lincoln, Harrison felt that the call was a personal appear, and it occasioned a strong conflict in his breast as to what course he should take. He had just obtained a fair start in life; he was the holder of a comfortable civil office-reporter for the supreme court-the husband of a young wife and father of two little children, and the owner of a small cottage not more than half paid for. His course was decided by the following incident, recorded in his own words: "I went one day to see Governor Morton with Mr. Wallace to seek an appointment as lieutenant for a young man in the north part of the state. After getting through with th's business Governor Morton invited me into an inner room. He there spoke of the call and of no response being made thereto. The governor seemed quite discouraged at the apathy of the people and, pointing over toward the Gallup block, where men were dressing stone, remarked that men were more interested in their own business than in the safety of the nation. I said right there: 'Governor, if I can be of any service to my country I am ready to go.' He said: 'You can; you can raise a regiment in this district.' He went on to say: 'You have a good office and it would be too much to ask you to give it. would be too much to ask you to give it up, but you can get up the regiment and we can find some one else to take it to the field.' I said: 'No; it I make a recruiting speech and ask any man to enpropose to go with and stay as long as he does if I live so long. 'Well,' said the governor, 'you can command the regiment.' I said: 'I don't know that I shall want to. I have no military experience; we can see about that. After this conversation Mr. Harrison proceeded up the street with Mr. Wallace and bought a military cap; they got handbills for a war meeting at Masonic hall, hired a drum and fife and hung a flag out of his office window. Mr. Harrison took out a second lieutenant's recruiting commission and raised and took the first company (A) of the Seventieth regiment into camp, and in less than thirty days from the date of the first recruiting commission he was in Kentucky with 1,010 men. This was the first regiment in the field under that call.

General Harrison was not wounded but, says one of the men. "In the charge at Resaca his regiment held the post of honor, where the battle was thickest.' 'Our colonel was right with us, too, says Moses McLean, who was wounded in that charge. "He came right up behind us when we captured the four guns there—the only guns, I believe, that were taken in the Atlanta campaign. We had to withstand a murderous cross fire, and as the gunners discharged their pieces we fell to the ground and allowed the shot to pass over us. Then we rushed up, scaled the works and took possession of the guns. The boys tell a story of the general which I guess is true. They say that when we went into the works Harrison was with us, and that he grabbed a rebel gunner by the beard and yanked him out, exclaiming: 'Come out of here you blank blank rebel!' " A Brief Political History.

Mr. Harrison has been in political life ever since 1856, when he took the stump for Fremont. In 1850 he did the same thing for Lincoln. In the fall of 1860 he got his first office, that of reporter of the supreme court of Indiana. During his term of office he got out two volumes of reports, fifteenth and sixteenth, and had nearly completed the seventeenth when he entered the military service. In 1864 he was reelected reporter of the supreme court and served until 1868. After the war he was associated in the practice of the law with the firms of Porter, Harrison & Fishback, and Harrison, Hines & Miller-Mr. Miller being the present attorney general of the United States. Almost from his first appearance in the state he was taken into the counsels of the party and the local politicians. He made many political speeches, assisted in the management of the state committee and gradually grew in prominence until, in 1876, Godlove S. Orth, having withdrawn from the republican nomina tion for governor, Harrison was put in his place by the state committee, made a big fight and was badly beaten by the historic "Blue Jeans" Williams.

In 1878 he again led the republicans in their contest against greenbackism. Two years afterwards he was chairman of the Indiana delegation to Chicago and threw the vote of that state to Garfield. That year he was at the head of the two campaigns in his state. In 1879 he was appointed a member of the Mississippi river commission. the Indiana legislature elected him to the United States senate, where his career, if not particularly brilliant, was eminently respectable. March 3, 1887, his term of office expired and he made an unsuccessful attempt at re-election. David Turple was chosen to succeed him in the senute, and that august body refused to disturb Mr. Turple's tenure in spite of the shricks of the Harrison men that a gigantic fraud had been perpetrated on innocent Hoosierdom.

So two big fights of Mr. Harrison's political career of thirty years were against "Blue Jeans" Williams for governor in 1876 and for re-election to the senate in 1886. He was unsuccessful in both. He won the greater contest when he defeated Grover Cleveland for the presidency.

His apple trees commenced bearing in five years. His grove is a beauty. His corn on that worn, well drained land is well worked and presents a fine appearance.
