Troubles of the Atlantic Canning Company Being Ventilated.

SMOOTH WORK OF AN IOWA DETECTIVE

How He Succeeded in Getting a Criminal Out of Nebraska Without a Requisition—Death of an Eccentric Inventor—Yesterday's Happenings.

Smith McPherson, the referee in the matter of the Atlantic Canning company, has taken a mass of evidence, the complications and entanglements of which will take some time to straighten out. The differences between McVade & Martin and D. W. Archer are great, the former claiming about $50,000, while Mr. Archer claims an equally large amount. Mr. Archer is equally interested in several western canning establishments, and has proved very successful. Among the contracts made by him was one by which he was to manage the Atlantic factory for a period of five years, and to have certain interests in it. Mr. Archer claims that under this contract Archer is responsible for certain heavy losses that occurred and also for damages in not fulfilling this contract. Archer, on the other hand, while admitting that there was such a contract, claims that it was annulled by a verbal agreement, and by certain acts of McVade & Martin, who insisted on running the factory in 1919, when he insisted that owing to the overproduction and the depression caused by the war, the factory should be shut down. Despite this McVade & Martin went ahead, and the result of the year was disastrous, just as Mr. Archer had foreseen. Mr. Archer claims that when he took charge of the factory the company had already lost $20,000 in operating. He succeeded to it in the form of making shape, and for two or three years the profits were large. Then the market became such that nearly all the factories shut down, but McVade & Martin were bound to go ahead in spite of him, and under their management there was a heavy loss. While there are many complications in this case, the real issue is as to the contract between the parties and the liabilities arising under it.

This is to testify that I have tested the medical properties of Dr. J. B. Moore's Tonic of Life remedy to my entire satisfaction, and most heartily recommend it to all suffering and afflicted everywhere, to be all claimed for it in the above statement. Last spring I was suffering from loss of appetite, constipation, etc., originating from indigestion and liver trouble, and that not used one bottle of this great life remedy until I was greatly relieved. My wife, also, being a very critical case, was suffering from indigestion, and by the use of this remedy has been saved from much suffering and possibly from death. I have used it for several years for several years has been very delicate. He contracted some lung trouble by taking cold with measles, which produced great nervous debility, and occasional bleeding of the lungs; he has used some four bottles of Tonic of Life, and feels and looks as though new life had been given him. If you are afflicted, try it.

Wanted for Burglary. Detective Johnson of Des Moines was in the city yesterday looking for Jim Lee, who is wanted to answer to a charge of burglary. He served a sentence in the city jail here for some minor offense. Lee was picked out by the officers at the time he was here as a man who would probably turn out sooner or later to be a criminal, and the officers were not disappointed. Johnson went to Omaha, where he found his man confined in the county jail. A rather neat little scheme was concocted between Johnson and the Omaha authorities to get Lee out of the side of the river without a requisition. For the time being Johnson played the part of a prisoner and the patrol wagon was brought to take Johnson and Lee to the motor bridge, where they were to be turned loose on Iowa soil after the usual custom. When they arrived at the middle of the bridge they were given a shove in a easterly direction. As soon as they had passed the boundary line Johnson threw off his disguise and arrested his companion. When Lee found he had been duped he raised a vigorous kick, but he had to submit to being led to the city jail. He left for Des Moines last evening.

Crain to the Commercial Trust Co. and the managers of the Grand hotel, to the Kimball-Champ investment company May 1, 1921. The plaintiff is the Franklin Savings bank of New Hampshire, to whom the note was assigned by the investment company.

A meeting of the insurance agents of the city was held at the Grand hotel Thursday night for the purpose of discussing the advisability of taking some steps with reference to the use of kerosene in cleaning cut windows. Some of the companies which have decided that all policies on buildings where kerosene was used in sweeping should be canceled, and this decision had a decidedly unfavorable effect on the insurance business of local agents. After discussing the question it was decided to draw up a circular asking the companies to revoke their order. A committee was appointed to draw up the circular, and it will be sent off in a day or two.
