Replying to an address pre-sented to him, Prince Bismarck said that the ovation was such as no minister had before received, and he rozarded it as a tribute to his work. The endeavors made to bring about the German union in 1848, he said, were premature, and those made in 1866 had no lasting result, while in 1870 all wielded ham-mers, striving in unison the anvil on which the government was formed. Friends had advised him to keep siteat, but he would not allow his mouth to be closed. He concluded by joining in cheers for the emperor.
