THEY FAVOR THE TARIFF

Members of the Douglas County Harrison Club on the Issue.

DEFENDED BY FARMERS

Men Who Till the Soil Counsel with Each Other and Agree as of Old to Stand by the Repub-Hean Party.

The Douglas County Harrison Republican club met at West Omana yesterday, with farmers from all parts of the county in attendance. The meeting was held in the car house of the Benson & Halcyon Heights Motor line.

After the reading of the minutes of the lest meeting and an interesting address by James Walsh, Mr. H. C. Barron of West Omaha was called upon and took the floor to assure the meeting that West Omaha precinct was thoroughly in sympathy with the objects of the club in uniting the various country precincts for the advancement of republicanism, and to see that the country precincts are properly represented in the conventions.

Mr. John F. McArdle of Millard delivered an interesting address, in which he stated that the club had no intention of arraying the country against the city, but simply to put the country precincts in a position to formulate their demands and place them beore the convention in such a shape that the delegates would give them attention.

He's a Calamity Howler Sure Enough. He's a Calamity Howler Sure Euough.

Mr. Fisher of Chicago precinct came to the front with a voice like a clarion and told the association that he was a calamity howler from "way back." He had had a lot of men putting up hay stacks on his big farm, and just as the stacks were about completed a big storm had come up and the result of several weeks' labor was blown to the four winds of heaven. That was one of the effects of the McKiniey bill.

Following up this as a text Mr. Fisher electrified those present with a slashing up of the objections to the McKiniey bill such as most of them had never heard before. He picked up all the principal objections one by picked up all the principal objections one by one and mathematically demonstrated in witty and forcible phrases that they were simply wind and wound up with an expres-sion of his regrets that Mr. Allen Root was not present so that he might split his oratory

Mr. Keisey of Millard, who is also a candidate for county commissioner, followed Mr. Fisher with several well told stories. He also launched out into the tariff question with facts and figures which no one present was prepared to contradict.

Pleased with Protection.

Mr. Stevens of Douglas precinct was on hand, and gave the audience an exposition of his views of republicanism.

Mr Karling of Ciontarf told the club that his precinct would work with the club, and promised that Contarf would hereafter be represented in every meeting wherever held. He also, as a practical mechanic, said that the tariff principles of the republican party were his principles.

Chairman Timme showed that this fail the country and city would be united in promoting the interests of the republican party. After several more speakers were heard the club adjourned to meet in two weeks at

Tucker's hall in Florence. There were representatives present from E khorn, Chicago, Douglas, McArdie, West Omaha, Clontarf, East Omaha and Union

FOREIGN FINANCIAL REVIEW. Influences Which Affected the Market-

Its Striking Features. LONDON, July 24 .- Discount was not in demand last week. The quotations were: Three months, three-fourths of 1 per cent; short, one-half of 1 per cent. Money continued abundant. There was some demand for gold in the open market for the continent, but it did not affect the situation, as there is no prospect of the Bank of England being encroached upon seriously. In fact, there is nothing in sight likely to lighten money for a long time to come. On the stock exchange the past week busipess was absolutely stagnant until Wednesday when there was a slight return of animacion. This revival, however, was mainly confined to investment stocks. Some spec lative stocks were merely niceled at, in vie of the fact that the market generally had a slightly more confident tone. The steady in-quiry for high class investment securities led to an advance in consols of three-sixteenths of 1 per cent. Indians and the best colonial securities also had fractional edvances. Rupee paper, in sympathy with the weakness of silver, dropped one-fourth of 1 Foreign government securities were rather stronger. Spanish bonds, under the stimulus of buying in Paris, gained 1% per cent. Brazilians were in demand and rose 1% per cent. Chilian rose 1 per cent. English railways improved on some favorable dividend announcements, the average rise being from one-fourth of 1 per cent to 1

In the foreign railway department attention centered in siexican stocks under a report of the making of building arrangements. At a meeting of the directors it was decided to await the arrival of the president of the Mexican National, who is due here on Wednesday. There is some buying of oid Vera Cruz stocks, firsts rising 2½ per cent, seconds 2½ per cent and ordinary one-half of 1 per cent. American ratiroads were more active during the week. Since Wednesday the re hat been a tendency to buy here upon better quotations from New York. The week's increases included Lake Shore, 3 per cent, Wabash preferred, 1½ per cent; port of the making of building arrangements per cent; Wabash prefetred, 134 per cent; Atchison, Wabash debentures, New York, Ontario & Western and Louisville & Nashville three-fourths of 1 per cent each; Central Pacific, Pennsylvania & Onio and Northern Pacific, one-half of 1 per cent each. Canadians were firm, Grand Trunk first preferred advanced 1 per cent, Grand Trunk seconds and guaranteed three-quarters of 1 per cent and Grand Trunk thirds one-half of 1 per cent.

Among miscellaneous securities, the principal feature was the continuous fall of brewery shares, due to the announced intention of the liberals to introduce legislation tending to repress the liquor traffic. Since the opening of the elections, Bass stock has fallen three points, Allsops five and Whitbreads three. During the past week Allsops ordinary shares have lost three.

On the Paris Bourse. Paris, July 24 .- On the bourse the past week prices were irregular. They closed yesterday, as a rule, at fractional advances for the week. Three per cent rentes showed a gain of 25 centimes for the week. Spanish bonds a gain of 114 francs and Rio Tintos a gain of 14 franc. Credit Foncier shares declined 10 francs for the week.

On the Berlin Bourse. BERLIN, July 24.—The past week was a quiet one on the bourse. About the only manifestation of real animation was the demand for bank stocks, especially those of banks dealing in land speculations, such securities have advanced in connection with the international exhibit scheme, which it is supposed is calculated to enhance the value of certain tracts of land. Russian securities were wear, owing to the cholera epidemic and reports that the traders of the affected districts are asking more time in the settle-ment of their obligations on account of the ment of their obligations on account of the paralysis of business.

The closing quotations on Saturday include: Prussian fours, 107.25; Mexican sixes, 85.60; Deutsche bank, 162.50; Bochumers, 133; Harpeners, 143; roubles, 203.70; short exchange on London, 20.41; long exchange on London, 20.30; private discount, 186. count, 1%

On the Frankfort Bourse.

FRANKFORT, July 24 .- On the bourse busiless was duli the past week. Yesterday's closing quotations include: Italian fives, 91; Portuguese bonds, 31.10; Russian fours, 80; Spacish fours, 6314; Australian silver rentes, 71.30; short exchange on London, 20.40; private discount, 1%.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Denver is Preparing to Entertain Them Grand Shape Next Month.

DENVER, Colo., July 24.-Preparations for the entertainment of the twenty-fifth triennial conclave of Knights Templar is rapidly coming to a focus, and by the time the conclave opens the city will have on its best dress. . It is estimated that the conclave will bring fully 100,000 people to the city, and this, together with the cut rates on the Santa Fe road, will add many more thousands to the population.

This great rush, however, will be amply provided for, many of the local Knights Templar, who, although now residents of Denver still have a warm place in their hearts for the eastern visitors, from which states they originally came, will open club rooms for the entertainment of Knights from their respective states. Pennsylvania and Missouri are the first states to inaugurate this custom. The probability is that the twenty-fifth triennial conclave will be the last consolidated meeting of Templars in America. For a quarter of a century the sentiment against such a large gathering has been gaining strength in the rank and file of the organization and it is the general impression that the Denver engagement will impression that the Denver encampment will conclude the series which for seventyfive years have witnessed a growth un-paralleled in modern times. The heavy ex-petse involved by the triennial roundup and the large amount of work required in pre-paring for the reception of vast throngs of visitors are objections which cannot be satisfactorily answered by friends of the time-honored custom. The question will be presented and discussed at the coming meeting, and it is claimed that bereafter the conclaves will be held with the same regularity as in the past, but each conclare will repro-only a certain portion of the country. the territory will be divided is one of the points to be considered. The advocates of the new plan claim that the interest of the order will be still further advanced by a division of the territory, and the meetings will be as large as should be desired.

DeWitt's Sarsaparilia cleanses the blood. AMUSEMENTS.

Fifteen years or so ago, when Miss Neille McHenry was starting out on her career with Salsbury's Troubadours, the pious deacons who managed the Young Men's Christian association lecture course at Elmira, N. Y., engaged that organization for an entertain ment. The unsophisticated deacons assumed that troubadours were musicians of some sort, and they had heard that these particular troubadours were particularly good. Those simple managers were the butt of newspaper gibes for months, but one cannot help contrasting the harmless farce variety of that day with the sort which passes current now. There were no skirt dancing, dresses. The frolies of a picnic party fur-nished the rather mild amusement which in that day received a doubtful reception.

"A Night at the Circus." presented at the Boyd last evening, is the latest evolution of the style of entertainment introduced in this country by Saisbury's Troubadours, and two of the originals, John Webster and Miss Mc-Henry, were in the company. There are styles in theatricals, and the newest wrinkle is to introduce on the stage a bit of the circus, the more the bet er. In last night's performance it came in the last act. The of the inside of a circus dressing tent, with glimpses now and then between the flaps of the entrance of another scens representing a big audience on the banks of seats. This ac afforded opportunity for the introduction of several good specialties.

The play is full of a suggestiveness of naughtness, from which the good Elmira deacons of fifteen years ago never would have recovered, but today it passes as most amus-ing nonsense. Miss McHenry is as jolly as of old and less stout than for several seasons past. John Webster has been too prosper-ous to work very hard, but Thomas O'Brien is clever enough to make it unnecessary There are several pretty girls, and the whole company plays with a spirit that makes a play containing nothing remarkable aside from its circus novelty go with a captivating

Furious Fight Between a Stillion and

BRUIN WINS THE DESPERATE STRUGGLE

Monster Bear.

A Bullet Settles the Bear-Bloody Recor of a Man-Eating Leopard-A Colony of Snakes-Stories of Animals.

A tremendous battle between a powerful stallion and a big grizzly bear was an exciting event that was witnessed by the employes of James Mursree, at the latter's mountain ranch, on Monday last, says the Boise, Idaho, correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Old Uraus Horribius proved himself the better fighter, and, al though he was terribly injured by his iron hoofed antagonist, he might have recovered from his wounds had not Jim Maxwell, a vaquero, sent a slug from a Sharp's riflo through his body. Before the grizzly died, nowever, he played even with his human foe.

The battle royal between the two beasts commenced at about 4:30 in the morning and asted about an hour. The ranch hands saw the melee from its commencement, but so confident were they that the stallion would prove a victor they did not attempt to interfere until it was too late. Time and again old Gray Rex, as the big Norman horse was called, had in short order killed black bears of considerable size, and the men thought his early morning antagonist was nothing more than an unusually big black bear which had come to the ranch in search of a juicy shoat. They observed that the shaggy animal's method of fighting was quite unusual, but they were too anxious to enjoy a little sport

Old Gray Rox had been sleeping in his shed the previous night, and when he heard the men moving about he pranced out, neighing for his matutinal feast of grain. As he rounded the cow pen the men saw him eagerly sniff the air, his ears slanted forward and his mane stiff and bristling. Gazing over the grassy range the men saw the figure of a bear lessurely slouching off toward a heavy copse. A moment later Gray Rex, his eyes distended with rage, sharp snorts of anger and deliance issuing from his red nostrils, started majestically across the plain to offer battle to the retreating intruder. The bear heard the hostile advance of the stallion and he glanced over his shoulder, but he did not quicken his saufiling gait. He had evi-

"By George, boys, there's goin' to be some fun!" crica Cowboy Jack Spires, and the men clambered to the roof of a shed, the better to see the battle.

Dashed at the Bear.

It was not long delayed. (- ay Rex, with a plercing scream of rage, with his white teeth exposed, dashed at the bear, which, with a low, grumbling growl, jumped to one side in time to avoid the onslaught. The savage stallion wheeled, slowly approached the bear, and then, with a quick turn, he landed his hind feet upon the grizzly's ribs. The blow was a stunner, and the men who heard it thought the bear was done for. It was a surprise for the bear, but it did not disable him. With a shake of his big head and a shifting of his feet, he faced the staltion, which again rushed at him with widely opened mouth. The grizzly was ready, and old Rex received a slap on the muzzle that old Rex received a slap on the muzzle that threw him off his feet and caused him to collide with his hard-hitting antagonist. Over went both bear and horse, Rex was first to regain his feet. With a fierce scream and with terrific force he brought his sharp fore feet down upon the bear's left flank, bringing the blood in a stream. It was a fearful wound, and the bear was for a moment badly dazed. The stallion had gained a decided advantage, but he had become more wary. He was accustomed to flighting with wary. He was accustomed to fighting with bears that rose upon their haunches, giving him splendid opportunities to deliver adroit kicks, the force of which soon proved fatal. The tactics pursued by his letest opponent puzzled him and he hesitated. The ranch men noted this with surprise, and jumping from the shed they cautiously approached the battlefield. To their subsequent regret, they were too excited to think of oringing Rex heard the men approaching, and he speedily regained his waning courage. He dashed at the bear, turned nimbly and kicked him end over end. The bear did not seem to be very badly injured, but he was now thoroughly aroused. Rox was upon him in an instant, thinking to again stab the bear with his fore feet. As the horse reared for the his fore feet. As the horse reared for the blow the grizzly darted forward, and, with a tremendous blow from one of its armored paws, it ripped open the bowels of the belligerent stallion. The men saw the blood rush forth, saw the protruding entrails, and realized that Rex had at length met his match. Jim Maxwell rushed to the house for his rifle and the other men tried by shouts and sudden sorties to frighten the bear away.

Engaged in a Desperate Struggle. But it was now too late. The animals were at it tooth, hoof and claw, engaged in were at it tooth, noof and claw, engaged in one final struggle. It was a terrible conflict. Both animals were bathed in blood, poor old itex's color appearing only in Irregular spots. He fought like a demon, striking, licking and biting. Again and again with his gleaming teeth he tore patches of hide and fiesh from the body of the bear, and nearly every time he tried to land his feet he succeeded. But the bear was as savage as the horse. He had been crippled fore and aft, but he was full of fight, and great raw patches upon the stallion's sides, breast and head showed where his blows had struck. The bleeding animals did not pause a moment. They fought like tigers, the borse shrilly screaming and the grizzly growling

Presently the bear saw a chance to deliver a blow with one of his tremendous paws. It fell with murgerous force upon the stallion! Who he arose he was dazed. It was evident that he could not see the bear, for he commenced to trot here and there, apparaments and the could not see the bear. ently in search of his foe. His entrails were dragging upon the ground. He stepped upon them every time he moved, but he did not betray the intense agony he must have suffered. Presently his eyes fell upon the bear, which was savage and expectant. With a fearful cry of rage the horse rushed, or rather staggered, toward his red-eyed antag onist, and again he essayed to strike with his fore feet. But he was too weak. He gave his foe an opening, and a moment later he sank to the earth dead, with a broken

Just at this minute Jim Maxwell fired. The bullet pierced the grizzly's body. With a sharp yelp he turned to flee, but he suddenly wheeled, dashed at the men, struck Maxwell upon his left hip, breaking the bone, and then falling forward across the form of the prostrate man the grizzly died with his face

DOES IT PAY TO BE RICH! Interviews with Famous Millionaires

About It. How happy are millionaires? Is "big money" worth the labor and anx lety which it costs?

is the owner of $50,000,000 really worth any more than the owner of $1,000,0001

To find a solution to these questions a re porter of the New York Recorder inter viewed several well known millionaires-Cornelius Vanderbilt, Russell Sage, Chaun cey Depew, Leland Stanford, Elizabeti opson and others.

Thompson and others.

It was a week or two ago that I called on Mr. Depew at the Arlington, where he paused while deciding whether to be Mr. Harrison's secretary of state or not. At the end of the business which induced my call I asked: "Does it pay to be very rich?"

"I don't know," said Mr. Dopew; "I have never been it; but I should imagine it did, or folks wouldn't want to be it, would they?"

Mr. Depew is worth only a pairry million or two, and he is not "very rich," according to metropolitan standards.

or two, and he is not "very rich," according to metropolitan standards.

"However," he continued, after a minute, "they may think it is going to pay, and after ward find themselves mistaken. Man never is, but always to be obest; perhaps that's what you mean."

"Is a fortune of $100,000,000 any greater than a fortune of $1,000,000." I asked.

"Yes," he said, "it requires more care and

tires a man more to keep it, but it will not buy any more of the things a man wants. Whether it bringsany greater enjoyment—weil, probably mor. Riches do not generally confer happings or necessarily even comfort. It depends on what a man does with his money. I know a man who has an income of just about $100,000 a year and gots a heap of satisfaction out of it. He spends it all—on others, of course, most of it. Enlightened selfishmess. He gets his pleasure from making others happy. But it must require a great deal of time and talent. To know how to give away money wisely a man needs to be inspired. It is about the most difficult trade there is—that of philanthropist. A great many more prople would work at it if they were certain that their money would do good,"

Poor Cyrus W. Field has passed away, would do good,"

Poor Cyrus W. Field has passed away, honored and pitied by all. He lived to see his ammense fortune squandered by a knavish son and the fortunes of several of his relatives engulfed also, immediately after the death of the two who were dearest to him in life. Five years ago he was worth $5,000,000 I asked him about that time several of the questions that stand at the head of this

"The value of money can easily be exag-"The value of money can easily be exag-gerated," said Mr. Field. "It is really worth only what it will bring in the things that we want; and for that purpose $10 a day is worth just about as much as $1,000 a day. In addition to this, there is only the gratified pride which arises from having made what men generally call a great suc-cess. No doubt Mr. Gould has about the same sort of satisfaction that his paighbor. same sort of satisfaction that his neighbor General Grant had—the satisfaction of having beaten—the satisfaction that the boy has who swims the farthest, or the girl who stands at the head of the class. That's all

Mr. Field was cheerful then, and even jovial. He lounged upon the leathern sofa and chatted and laughed, and perhaps he thought less of money than of the plaudits of the world showered on him in 1858, when the first Atlantic cable niccoughed its feeble but significant benediction.

A friend of mise stood the other day at Mr. Field's bedside, and he speaks of his state being pitiful indeed.

"My life is a wreck," said the sick man, bitterly. "My fortune gone, my home dishonored—oh, I was so unkind to Edward when I thought I was being kind. If I had only had firmness enough to compel my boys to earn their own living, then they would to earn their own living, then they would have known the meaning of money!" And the broken-spirited man repeated over and over again his desire to die. His visitor remanded him of the many things remaining to live for, of the great honors paid him by all countries for his work for civilization which moored the continents together, of the fame which he had won and would never lose. All in vain; he was sure he had nothing to live for, and the decorations given him by sovereigns and now hanging on the wail were neaningless baubles to him.

I called and asked Russell Sage about this matter. It is no more difficult to get at him today than it was before the dynamite crank sought to effect a loan without security. He is worth a good deal of money, and they say he has recovered that $10,000,000 he lost in that scrample in the street one morning ten years ago. Probably he could foot up $59,-000,000 or $60,000,000-it isn't worth while be too exact.

It was a very warm day when I called, and he had his coat off and wiped the high receding front of his business occiput with a red silk handkerchief as he handled the marked envelopes of puts and calls on a little table before him and replied "yes," "no" to the cierk who came in every minute or so and asked him a question in figures and symbols which were all Greek to me.

"You seem to work hard to seen ahead of

"You seem to work hard to keep ahead of the boys, Mr. Sage," I said. "There is a prevalent idea that millionaires don't have to work at all." He uttered a significant, but inarticulate sound of disapproval from the upper part of his throat—a kind of chuckle strangled in its birth—and added: "They have to work, I guess, if they keep anything. Everybody clutching to get it!"

"You have enough money, haven't you?" I asked. "As much as you can use?"
"Yes, as much as I can use," he answered, turning toward me. "Yes, I have as much as I can use, k suppose." as I can use, ksuppose."

"Then, why don't you stop work?" I boldly continued. "You haven't a schild in the world; you are 75 years old; you are worth, they say, $75,00,000 $1,000,000 for every."

He interrupted me once more with the same old sound of dissent and repeated, ironically: "They say!"

After a mement he added: "You ask me why I don't stop work. I'll go it if you will why I don't stop work. I'll do it if you will at that will do as much good and give me as much satisfaction? Well, you can't answer it. Nobody can. I have thought it over. This is my trade. Another thing; every man ikes to excel. He likes to prove to be worth as much as folks say he is worth. Hardly any man sold out suddenly would measure up equal to his reputation. Men take the same pleasure in accumulating that boys do in running races and climbing trees shouldn't be happy if I left the street. And there are 1,000 men depending on me for work—what would they do!"

As I took my leave the old gentleman turned and said "No" to an offer to purchase a "privilege." It then occurred to me that his face had not taken on a wrinkle in ten years, and that his clothes had improved— the latter fact perhaps indicating a weak-ness of his financial ability. Nearly fifty years ago, when he was not worth $5,000, Russell Sage, M. C., advocated the passage through congress of the bill to purchase Mount Verson. Now he is worth scores of millions, and he does not spend a hundredth part of the interest on it; he never saw his money and never had it, and, excepting a bare pittance, it is wholly in the hands and coffers of others, used by them for their own benefit! But he thinks that fortune is his.
