The average man would fare very well if he were as well fed and as well cared for as the avarage pug dog. But there are two pugs, owned by a North Omaha young lady, which fare even better than the majority of their pug brothers and sisters. They are sleek and fat and petted from morning till night. Their mistress washes and combs them each day and curls their tails, according to the latest fashion. Each afternoon, when the weather is fine, she takes ber charges out for an airing. But suddenly these afternoon promenades ceased, and it was all on account of the eternal small boy. The particular small boy lived a few doors from the young lady with the pugs, and one afternoon was out in the yard playing. His mother was watching him from an open window, and every few minutes he would call up to her just to see that she had not gone away. Just then the young lady with her pugs came marching along. The youngster stood for a moment with wide open eyes be argued against this treatment that and gazed at the procession. Chewing Gum to stop smoking.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Says A. T. Collins: "After over a dozen attempts to quit smoking I finally succeeded by aid of chewing gum. Every time I have sworn off previously the temptation has been greater than I could stand, but on the advice of a friend I commenced chewing gum this spring every time I felt a special longing for a cigar. The argument advanced was that half the time a man smokes because of a nervous, irritable feeling which makes him anxious to do some thing to occupy his thoughts in addi-tion to regular work. Acting on this idea and following up the treatment closely I found I could do without a Havana nearly every time I craved for one, and in a few weeks my swearing off proved effectual beyond my most san-guine expectation. It might, of course,
