Taking Time by the Forelock. The Bosten Store is doing a somewhat novel thing this week. The weather just now is not such as would remind one very forcibly of the approach of winter, but the Boston Store has de-cided to take time by the forclock and sell blankers at enough of a reduction to make it enough of an object to people who are likely to need blankets to buy Fotheringham, Whitelaw & Co. have an agreeable way of anticipating the wants of the people, and in this case, judging by the prices, those who can avail themselves of this opportunity are to be congratulated. Visitors to the store say there are just lots of bargains in other lines too. Considerable attention has been attracted by the enormous arrivals of new goods at the Boston Store this week. The sidewalk on two sides of the store has been stacked with capacious boxes, all containing new goods, most of which will be on the shelves by the middle of the week.

Test of the New Chemical. The new chemical fire engine was brought out yesterday morning and put through its paces, on north Sixth street, before an interested audience. It came up to the expectations of the firemen in every respect, and was pronounced a success. Within thirty seconds of the time when the chemicals were set at work it was flowing out of the end of the 200 feet of hose, in a stream that carried seventy-five feet. The stream was set playing on a bonfire made of tar barrels, and within fifteen seconds more the fire had been extinguished, the chemical putting a quietus on the biaze wherever it struck. The engine was managed easily by one man.

Fairmount park was a busy place yesterday. The preparations for the annual reunion of the South western Iowa Veterans association were going on, and the grassy stopes of the park were being rapidly transformed into a city of tents, which, if the fine weather of the last twenty-four bours continues, will witness one of the largest and most enthusiastic reunions of soldiers that has ever occurred in this vicinity. Colonel D. B. Dally was master of the ceremonies and under his direction squads of men were bushly engaged in putting up tents and making the other arrangements for the reception of guests. The reunion will commence tomorrow and inst until Thursday night. The Twenty-ninth Iowa infantry will hold its reunion at the same time with the Veterans association, and this will bring old soldlers from all parts of the state, although the majority of them will come from Mills, Ida, Pottawalta-mic, Monona, Crawford and Harrison counties, which compose the association. The headquarters of the Twenty-ninth will be a short distance to the right of the stand, while the tents of the others will be ranged along both sides of the road at the left. A directory will be made and the tents will all be numbered, so that any one who wants to find any particular person will know where Rudolph Toller's grocery store at 1001 Main street was entered by burglars Sunday night. Mr. Toller was at the outling at 7 p. m., and everything was safe when he left it to go to church. The money drawer had been pried loose and 15 in cash was missing. Two revolvers and lot of robacco had also been taken.

About an hour after the burglary had been reported to the police a man who peddles wienerwurst on the streets called at the police station and said that a young fellow whose name is Frank Jones had passed off counterfeit $1 on him and received 95 cents in change. The $1 was examined and found to be marked in such a way as to be easily identified as one that had been in Toller's money grawer earlier in the evening. Jones was pulled out of bed and taken to the city jail, where he was asked to explain how jail, where he was asked to explain how he came by the counterfeit money. He denied having passed any counterfeit money, but admitted that he had given the peddler a good dollar. As the wienerwurst man claimed to have taken in only $\frac{1}{2}$ during the evening, however, his story was knocked in the head. No one seemed to know positively whether or not the first Monday in September is so far a holiday in lows that any business that might be trans acted by the council would be illegal, but the councilmen gave themselves the benefit of the doubt. That they were willing to do this rather than have any uncertainty is taken as an indication that some business of considerable importance would have been transacted if a meeting had been held. The Paul right of way ordinance is pending be-fore the council and there is a strong prob-ability that the report of the judiciary com-mittee and the city attorney, to whom it was referred at a previous meeting, will be made. Has Dixon Skipped? No decision has been rendered by Judge McGee yet in the case of W. A. Brown, who shot Oscar Dixon several nights ago. The judge ordered Marshai Templeton yesterday, however, to file an information charging Dixon with assault with intent to kill. In the meantime Dixon has vanished and the officers are in considerable doubt as to whother they shall ever see him again. He is supposed to be in Omaha and the police of that city have been requested to look out for him. If he is caught, the probability is that he will be immediately bound over to the grand jury without any further examina-tion, as there was sufficient evidence brought forward against him during Brown's hearing to warrant such a proceeding. The officers are not at all surprised at his disappearance. but their only wonder is that he stayed so long as he did when he must have known what kind of a story the other witnesses would tell. AMUSEMENTS.

From time to time the endless ebb and flow of plays and players in Omaha is varied by the inrush of some work, some company, some artist. As we sit and watch the move ment of the mimic world we see something brighter, pobler, loftier than the dull tide of current drama, and hope springs perennial in the heart that something more enduring than "tar-ra-ra-boom-de-ay" will result. But the season's close shows up more plays of the latter kind than the former and hope

Last evening new impetus was given the local stage, and the theatrical season opened auspiciously by the appearance of Mr. Robert Downing and company in Sheridan Knowles thoroughly well balanced play, "Virginius," which has been the piece de resistance of almost every tragedian in a generation.

Mr. Downing's portraiture of the Roman father who murders his child to save her from the lust of Appius Claudius is a fine bit of acting, not particularly subtle, but worthy of a place alongside the impersonation given the character by the lamented Mc-Culleugh. So wonderful has been Mr. Downing's advancement in the his ronic art that one cannot help but ask, Is not this carnest young worker in the line for the mantle of Mr. Booth? He has learned the fine art of repression, of subordination, and the character has been made potential to the man, lessons of infinite value to the actor. His forum scene was s rong, almost virile, his best work being seen in the cell of Claudius and over the dead tody of the latter. It was a fine dramatic climax.

latter. It was a fine dramatic climax.

Mr. Downing's company, however, with the exception of Mr. F. C. Mosley, Mr.
Mark Price, Mr. George Macomber and Miss Eugenia Biair, is not as strong as a striving artist deserves, and then the Roman populace and the Roman lictors were very matter of fact boys who knew little of what was expected of them and less of Rome under the decemvirs. But that is usually true of all Omana mobs and soldiers who are clothed for a night in the panoply of a bycone civilization.

Mark Price made a fine Appius Claudius, reading with intelligence and classical interpretation. There was no faltering here, but a thoroughly sustained study of a Roman citizen elevated above his associates. Mr. Mosley, one of the best leading men in Shakespearean rolls on the stage, and always a painstaking and con-scientious artist, is not seen at his best in the role of Icilius, a counterpart of Romeo. Mr. Mosley does not play lovers well. He needs a more subtle part like that of Cassius or Brutus, or Antony, to bring out the long training hebas had in support of all the eminent tragedians since the war. What a beautiful picture of youthful grace and loveliness does Miss Eugenia Blair present as Virginia! And she brings to the part an intelligence and a voice which are quite the rivals of her beauty and grace. It would be hard to conceive of a more tender, more bewitching Virginia, and the impersonation tacks none of the essentials to make it stand out a classical study as well.

REVIVAL SERVICE OPENED.

Interesting Meetings in Progress at the First Christian Church A revival service was maugurated at the First Christian church, Twentieth street and Capitol avenue, last evening under the direction of Evangelists Boyer and Mc-Clusky. The church was well filled long before the opening service of song was con cluded. After a prayer by Rev. Mr. Cramblett, Mr. McClusky sang a solo in which he displayed an excellent paritone voice. The sucject of the meeting and of Rev. Mr. Boyer's sermon was "The Way to Get on in the World." The speaker said that this was a question for every one, for no one wished to fail. While there was only one way to succeed there were 10,000 to fail. There were two sources of power in the world, one from the flesh and the other from the spirit. The latter was the only power by which success could be assured subject for the meeting tonight will be "The Kingdom of Satan and the Way Out."

Contracts for Heating School Buildings Awarded After Some Discussion - Funds on Hand-An Interesting Batch of Routine Business Disposed Of,

There was a large lobby at the meeting of the Board of Education last night. Janitors and contractors and men of various walks in life thronged into the rooms to see if the board would turn the stone so as to grind their little axes in a satisfactory manner. Mr. Irving F. The Smead bid was $1,670 for each building. Some members of the board hinted that the Smead system had been tried in the schools of Chiago and had been thrown out. Dr. Spalding declared that the Smead sys-

He said it was the old Ruttan system, with a part of the Smead patents attached, and the effect was disas-Morris Morrison asked some very pertient questions as to bow it came that the Smead company had asked over $5,000 for the heating apparatus for the Kellom school and now came in and offered to heat the Windsor and Saratoga ouildings for $1,600 each. H thought that the Smead company had robbed the board on the Kellom contract or that it was the intention of the company to do a slipshod job on the new buildings now under consideration Mr. Smyth held that the Fuller & Warren
