SHE CAUGHT HIM ON THE HIP

at Long Branch.

How a Woman's Dislike for Doctors Was

Cured-A Gag that Failed-Treatment of Children's Allments-The Fall Fashions.

A correspondent teils of a strange woman who appeared at Long Branch recently.

She kept her business and her identity veiled for several days and then requested half a dozen ladies at the hotel to accompany her to her room. Here they were shown a dozen snapshot photographs of a man apparently 30 years of age, who appeared to be much interested in a rather good looking woman at his side. They were both lying on the beach. "That man," said the woman, "is my husband. The voman beside him is a scheming widow. Three weeks ago I left

New York, going with my mother to Newport, A week ago I was told that my husband was having a delightful time at the Branch with a strange woman, Of course I disbelieved this, but when I took a run home and found him gone I thought it strange, so took a run down here, where I found him constantly in the company of that woman. My maid is something of an adept at photographing, and I got her a kolak and had her show me how to use it. Those photographs are the result of my work, and they speak volumes. Not wishing my husband to see me here, I always

With this simple explanation the woman put the tell-tale snap snots in hor trunk and left for the city. The mysterious woman would not tell who she was, and said that the reason that she did not confront her wayward husband when in the company of the woman was on account of not wanting to wore the veil "

cause a scene on the beach.

Do not, however, put your trust in the numerous so-called "sarsaparillas" with which the marfet is flooded.

Sarsaparilla bark is not a medicine, it is a flavor ing, nothing more. The action of many of these decections comes from mineral poisons they contain, such as mercury, arsente, strychine, bismuth, lodide of potasium, and the like, and any druggist will tell you, if he tells you truly, that this is so. Kickspoo Indian Sagwa and other Kickspoo In-dian medicines contain only the product of the field and forest, nature's own vegetable growth of roots, barks and herbs, and of necessity are free from all mineral poisons whatever, because the Indians have no knowledge of them, depending wholly upon nature's laboratory for their resources, and upon their skill, born of centuries of exper-

I have one regular treat-ment for the various summer troubles that I have hardly ever known to fail. At the first symptom of disturbance of any kind in any of my children (their ages, by the way, range from 6 to 20), I stop their food at once, and for a couple of days or longer, if need be give them nothing but scalded mits with a little whisky or brandy in it, from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful, according to the age. A glass of milk in the morning, another at noon and another at night, is all that is necessary for sustenance. If there seems to be decided digestive trouble I precede this treat-ment with a dose of castor oil, the quantity given being also regulated by circum

Thus, a skirt of cream and blue homespun is made with a waist of dark blue satin surah over a whaleboned lining. The surab is lapped in plaits in the back, show-ing no seams. The fronts are drawn down without darts, leaving a deep V-space for a without darts, leaving a deep V-space for a plastron of cream color covered with horizontal stripes of dark olue silk braid. A short frill, like a Verlugadin puff, of the surah shows below the waist, giving breadth to the hips. A girdle covered with the braid encircles the waist above the frill or puff. The collar and wristbands of the full sleeves are also of the braid. For the street a princesse jacket is added of the wool of the skirs lined with silk like that of the blouse.

The wife of a well known physician tells an amusing story of one of her early ex-periences soon after her marriage, says a writer in the New York Tribune. "When I was a girl," she said, "I had the greatest dislike of the medical profession, and always said that I would never, under any circum stances, marry a doctor; and, of course, it was my fate to fall in love with a medical was my fate to fail in love with a medical student, who was simply absorbed in his profession. After a rather long engagement, during which time Dr. S. had graduated and established a fairly good practice, we were married, and I moved to my new home in Y—, where there was quite a flourishing medical college, the head of which was an intimate friend of my husband. My dislike of the profession in general still continued, and whenever the two mea were shut up in the library together I always imagined that they were discussing 'horrors,' as I flippantly called their scientific researches. One afternoon, when Dr. S. was off on his rounds, a small when Dr. S. was off on his rounds, a small boy presented himself with a curious tooking oblong package with my husband's name on the wrapper. 'Dr. B. sent this,' said the imp, 'and I was to say it oughter be put on ine immediate. 'Good gracious,' I thought, 'what is that oreadful Dr. B. sending to my hasband that ought to be put on ice at once?' and as 1 took the package I felt a thrill of instinctive terror run through my frame, for it was not firm and comfortable like an ordinary bundle, but felt flabby and yielding. Like a human arm! I suddenly thought, and with a cry of fright I dropped the thing on the hall floor.

With shrinking fingers I picked it up by the cord which was around it and carried it over to the table; and then, growing bolder, 'how absolutely silly I am.' I said to myself; 'as if Jack would have legs and arms sent to him in this casual fashion!' Taking out a hairpin (that universal woman's implement), I scratched a little hole in one end of the bundle. Horrors of horrors! It was flesh! I gave a loud screech which brought the two maids and my husband, who had just driven up, all on the band, who had just driven up, all on the scene; and then I distinguished myself by going off into my first and only profing off into my instead of the parties. After much difficulty, Dr. S. ascertained the cause of my fright; then laughing heartily, opened the suspicious-looking oundle, and held up to my mortified vision an uncommonly fine—fish.
