Chosen to Be Democratic Candidate for Congress by Acclamation.

PEACEFUL ENDING OF THE GREAT ROW

Postponement of Friday Completely Knocked Out by the Convention of saturday-Judge Doane's Acceptance-Some of the Resolutions.

The democratic congressional convention occupied just half an hour yesterday afternoon in organizing and selecting Judge G.

W. Donne as its candidate for congress. The circumstances of the postponement of the convention by the congressional committee and the subsequent revolt of the rank and file had developed some very bitter animosities, but they were not brought to an issue in the convention. The convention was called to order soon after a p'clock by George J. Sternsdorf.

Mr. Sternsdorff said that he felt both pleasure and regret. He was pleased because he believed that this convention would name the next congressman from the Second district of Nebraska. He regretted that be had east his vote as a member of the central committee for the postponement of the convention. The sentiment was so overwhelmingly against the postponement that in the name of the committee he gladly rescinded the action of the day before. He added that the committee had been governed in its action by no motive except the best interests

And Then They Organized.

T. J. Mahoney was chosen for temporary chairman and accepted the position in a brief speech in which he eulogized Bryan and Grover Cleveland and expressed a wish that the convention would choose a worthy sucsented the district during the past two E. L. Hamilton of Washington county was elected temporary secretary and on motion the published list of delegates was declared official without any presentation of credentisis.

The temporary organization was made permanent and nominations were declared in

F. A. Brogan rose to nominate Judge W. Doane of Omaha, and the mention of his name was received with applause. Mr. Brogau said that Judge Doane had not sought the nomination. He had not dragged his judicial ormine through the mire of party politics or attempted to force his nomina tion on an unwilling party. Among the many able democrats who had sat upon the beach be was the peer of the best. He had not been the representative of any class, but of the entire people of the district.

The nomination of Judge Donne was seconded by Thomas Wilkinson for Washington rounty and J. N. Chase of Sarpy, C. S. Montgomery of Douglas seconded the nomination and moved that Judge Doane be de clared the choice of the convention by accia mation. This was carried with a whoop and Euclid Martin of Douglas county, Thoma Wilkinson of Washington and J. N. Chase of Sarpy were appointed a committee to posify of his nomination and escort him to the ball.

Committees and Resolutions. In the meantime the convention proceeded to select the following congressional com-mittee: F. A. Brogan, E. L. Socy, Lee Herdman and Edmund Burke, Omana; John S. Walters, South Omaha; Thomas Wilkinson and Thomas F. Keily of Washington county and Samuel Stortzer and R. F. Bar ton of Sarpy.

> > Arraignment of the Democratic Party to Answer to the Charge of Tearing Down American Industries-Fifth Ward

Rev. J. G. Tate Tells of the Three Issues

Republicans' Busy Night. It was a great night for republicans, and especially those of the Fifth ward. Between holding a caucus which detained many until midnight and holding a rousing republican raily they had their hands fuil. Hon, J. G. Tate and W. S. Summers were billed to speak at Erfling's hall and the announcement was sufficient to bring republican enthusiasm up to the boiling point.

Just as the electric lights were turned on the members of the Fifth Ward Flambeau club, the banner marching club of the city and the pet club of the Fifth ward, assembled at the club room fifty strong. For the first time the boys had on their new zonave uniforms. The uniform consists of a red and white fez, blue jacket trimmed with white, and knee pants, white leggins and a white sash.

Then the Thurston Drum corps dropped in, the object being to have the Flambeau club and the dram corps escort the speakers to the ball. Torches were lighted and immediately went up in a blaze of glory, just because come caroless or malicious grocer had sold the boys gasoline instead of kerosene. As lamp after lamp exploded, wild cheers split the air until the country surrounding Clark street and Shorman avenue bristled out with excitement. It was just then that the drum corps and the riambeau club took up the line of march, and lampless and lightiess they wended their way to the Miliard, being frequently cheered by crowds congregated on the several street corners. After giving an exhibition of fancy drilling the boys started on the return trip as a bodyguard for the speakers, who role in a car-riage and were chaperoned by W. A. Saun-ders, W. N. Nason and George F. Munro. Eriling's hall was crowded to suffication when the meeting was called to order. Itspublicans, democrats, independents and a fair sprinkling of ladies were there to hear the preaching of republican doctrines. The drum corps beat out its most choice selection and the audience was ready to listen to two oquent and forcible speeches.

Mr. Summers upon being introduced by W. A. Saunders, said that it was not often that a member of the republican parly was obliged to send a substitute to the front. However, he said, he appeared as a substi tute. It was intended that tion. George H. Hastings should be with the Fifth warders, but that it was absolutely necessary for him to address a meeting in Nuckons county, Mr. Summers said that he was not bried for a speech, as the Hon. J. G. Tate was the general in command. The campaign was one of education. While some unboly alliances might be effected. Nebraska would go back into the fold with its old-time republican majority. An effort was being made to place Gro ver Cleveland into the presidential chair via the J. B. Weaver route. There had been a marriage between the democrats and the allimice people; they were as one now, but after November 8 there would be divorce proceedings brought, and the charge would be fauure to support. This brought out a hearty round of applau e. Every American, he said, should stand up for an American policy. The people of Ne-braska had no more use for a party that re-iled upon the misfortune of the country than a potato bug had for paris green; they had use for a party that was trying to tear down American industries. Mr. Summers' remarks were concluded amid a hearty round of applicate which gained in strength as it swept through the rendered one of its choicest selections and then Hon, J. G. Tate was introduced. As he arose he was cheered to the echo until his reception became a perfect overtion. Mr. Tate said that the avenues to success were open to every man, woman and child The distinguishing element entered into the discussion of the campaign. There were three things that entered into the discussion, free trade, free coinage and free ballot. The independents had said that they were in favor of free trade, free coinage, and it had been asserted that they were in favor of a free ballot. The democrats were in favor of free trade and free coinage, but they had not been in favor of a free bailot. "Take the force bill," he remarked, "and it will be found that the republican party said that every man should have a free ballot, let him be white or black. If I could have my way, I would see that every man had a free ballot and had it honestly counted if it took the whole United States to protect it.' Mr. Tate said that it was worth a great leal to be a citizen of the United States. It had cost him the licutenant governorship of the state of Nebraska, "but," said he, "I would rather be a citizen of the United States than to be Heutenaut governor for lighteen years."

In the early '60s, said the speaker, while America was enguifed in a civil war and American factories were in their infancy, the furnaces of England were burning brightly; men were working full time and were re-ceiving good wares. Then American capital decided that from rails could be inade from the metals of the mountains of Pennsylvania. The result was that in a short time a protective tariff was placed upon iron and steel rails. The furnaces of England began to ourn low, and as each one went out one was lighted in America. As a result, English workmen were cut from six to five days and then to four per week and this was the result of the American protective tariff.

England's Aid to the Rebels.

In 1861 England again torgot her honor and sent the Atabams to defeat the government. It was not to further the cause of slavery that led England to do this, but it was that she might become the mistress of the seas and place her free trade wares upon the marts of this country. It was a shame that any American should cry out "down with 'If you want free trade," said Mr. Tate, why in God's name don't you go where it

In discussing free trade he said that it was good deal like choiera. If it was to be had. was better to let some one else have it.
"William McKinley" said the speaker, and then there was a deafening cheer, "I regard as the American of America, and four years hence I hope to see him the standard bearer of the grand old republican party. England was a manufacturing nation oc-cause she could not be anything else. With America it was different. She had the minthe world und have a fortune left. The whole population of the world could be placed in Texas on half-acre lots and still there would be a million lots left to sell to angels. With all of this the democrats would have it frittered away-sold for a mess of free trade pottage, Governor McKinley was, Mr. Tate said, the most unpopular man in the world with England. Why? Because when he drafted his bill he punctured it with American ideas and clauses intended to help Americans. was why England haten McKinley and very hair of his head.

"Stand by the grand old flag," said the speaker. "Let it be America for Americans."
The people of the United States and confidence in the republican leader, and when November's rolled around they would cast would not east them for the man who changed his 225 pounds of raw material in the chair and said nothing while the American fishing smacks were fired upon by Eng-
