The rear coach was pientitully decorated with flags and streamers and a large picture of Abe Lincoln appeared on each side, surrounded by the national colors. SHORT FISH STORIES.

There are fifty species of electric fish A fish recently found at Port Oxford, Ore., has "legs and toes, a long tail, a spiked nose, and no scales." Columbia river contains trout with large red spots. They have called it the "Dolly Varden" trout.

As a man was sailing on the bay near Snakalum, Wash., a salmon trout fourteen inches long jumped from the water and landed in the boat.

Fins for swimmers are said to be a recent invention. The individual has artificial imitations of fins attached to his arms and legs. These contrivances open and shut automatically as the legs are extended and withdrawn.

The Boston Herald wou'd like to have the European custom of selling fish alive in the markets introduced in this country. "Our fashion of selling fish in the market," it says. would fill a Ger-man with disgust. In the German cities fish is almost invariably sold alive."

Workmen at Baltimore & Ohio elevator "C" in Baltimore, saw a fight betweep a crab and a rat the other day. The rat went down a stringer to get a drink when a crab caught him by the head. A flegce tug followed, the rat apparently having the better of it for a while, as he could steady himself by his foothold. The crab used his method of propulsion with energy, and churned the water about him. The rat's power of endurance finally gave way, and he fell overboard, but he still did his best to release himself. He struggled hard, but the crab held on until the rat was drowned, but was so exhausted by the fight that when the rat floated to the surface the crab swam away.

The Konnebec Journal describes what t calls the "king of all cels." He was aken in Maine, was forty-four inches long and weighed four and one-half pounds. But he is not the king. A few years ago two eels were taken in a stream at Sag Harbor, L. I., one of which weighed nine and one-half and the other more than eight pounds. Their skins were kept for some time nailed against a shed, but the measurements have not been preserved.

A box turtle has been caught in Rhode Island that is supposed to be 150 years old.

A Doctor's Experience.

Some time ago an eminent Cincinnati physician said: "When I began the practice of medicine a young man whose constitution was even more powerful than my own started in the practice with me. His pet theory was that a man couldn't have too much fresh air, that he wanted it to circulate inside and outside of his body, and to that end when the rigors of winter came on he spurned thick clothing, which I insisted on wearing. If we rode together the heaviest garment he had on was an ord nary sack cost. I wore mufflers and a greatcoat buttoned up to the chin. My young and ambitious partner has occupied a narrow home in the cemetery a great many years, placed there after a long and painful wrestle with consumption. He stuck to his thin clothing and became a martyr to his pet theory. I stuck to my heavy clothing when the weather demanded it, and I think the graveyard is a good many years from me still."
