Forepaugh's Advance Agent Dies After

HIS DEATH MOST SUSPICIOUS.

Drinking Lemonade Prepared by His Wife. NEW YORK, Sept. 31, -Charles Reed, for many years advance agent for Forepaugh's circus, died yesterday under circumstances which call for an investigation by the coroner. He came home the night before and complained of pains in the head. His wife made him some hot lemonade and ne went to ped. In the morning Mrs. Reed awoke her sister-in-law, who lived with them, and told her Mr. Reed was dead. Before Miss Reed recovered from the snock the wife called an undertaker and had the body embalmed. Then she sent a dispatch to James Jourdan, with Forepaugh's circus at Sudbury, Pa. asking for a loan of $50, saving she would return it Monday. This message, the police say, had a double meaning. Mrs. Reed was formerly a chariot-rider in the circus. Reed left her once because of an intrigue between her and Jourdan. Recently the old trouble between the pair broke out anew, and it had been decided that they were to separate for-ever. The police, not wishing to take any hasty action in the case, are awaiting the result of the autopsy.

He Slept on the Track. Mike Conway, who works for John Dillon at the graders' camp, got paid off yesterday and got drunk. While walking out on the Missouri Pacific tracks toward camp about midnight he stopped to rest and sat down on the end of a tie. The first section of train 130 came along and knocked him into the ditch. Conway had a hole knocked in his forehead and received any number of bruises. He was taken to the Methodist hospital in the patrol wagon.

Where General Crook Was Buried. OMAHA, Sept. 24 .- To the Editor of THE BEE: I notice in THE BEE of this date that your Associated Press Washington correspondent states that General Crook's remains still sleep at West Point, and that it is proposed to remove them to Arlington cemetery to rest under the mongment, the corner stone or foundation of which was dedicated yesterday.

Your correspondent is entirely in error in this matter. General Crook was buried March 24, 1890, at Oakland, Md., at the solicitation of Mrs. Crook, who desired that his remains should rest at the home where they had spent so many happy days, and the com-mittee in charge of the obsequies yielded to her desire. Subsequently, in November of the same year, Mrs. Crook became reconciled to having the remains removed to Arlington, and they were accordingly reinterred in that beautiful resting-place, where they now are. tigated Soon CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 21.—Chairman Midgely of the Western Freight association has issued a circular letter, calling attention to a practice which he thicks should be discontinued at once. Complaint has been made to him that in certain gases roads have accepted less than carload shipments of packing house products from South Omaha at carload rates with the explanation that the shipment was only part of a lot. For example, a consignmental of 12,000 or 13,000 pounds is billed at that weight as a carload, regardless of the fact that the minimum car-load is 20,000 pounds. Another practice is to take mixed shipments of packing house products from Missouri river points con-signed to two different points in the same car billing each shipment at the carload rate. This form of manipulation has grown all too common and Chairman Midgely demands that it be immediately stopped.

A circular was issued today by Chairman Walker and the commissioners of the Western Traffic association in regard to east-bound rates on grain from northeastern Colo-orado and southwestern points. A proposition to reduce the rates in order to facilitate the marketing of the products of the territory named was recently submitted by the Burlington, the Rock Island and the Union Pacific roads. A disagreement having arisen n the Transmissouri Freight association, the matter was appealed to the commissioners for their decision. After the hearing had been held by the commissioners the proposi-tion was modified and those rates made by

There is a gigantic deal going on in these states. It will come to a head in two or three weeks and then be prepared to give out some startling information.
