FAST FLYING SIDE-WHEELERS

Mascott, Flying Jib and Guy Wilkes Meet in a Race.

NANCY HANKS' MILE IS DUPLICATED

Little Mascott Breaks All Pacing Records by Doing It in 2:04 Flat—Terre Haute's Turf Triumphs—Other Sporting News.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 29.—The world's pacing record bit the dust today as the world's trotting record yesterday further succumbed to the nimble feet of Nancy Hanks. When the judge announced the great free-for-all pace this afternoon the grand stand was packed by an expectant crowd ready for great work, and it came when Flying Jib with Starr up, Guy Wilkes, McHenry driving, and Mascott with Billy Andrews in the sulky, finished the first heat of the pacing race.

They got off to a good start, Mascott draws ahead in the first eighth by driving around the field. Guy falls back at the half, while Mascott still leads, pacing like a meteor. The beautiful Jib is pressing hard but in vain. At the three-quarters pole, Mascott leads by a length. Guy is nowhere and Andrews does not waste effort in a vain attempt. With a mad whirl and terrific whirl the pacers come into the stretch to beat Hal Pointer's time and all records. Starr in desperate earnestness plies the whip. Andrews urges his comet and they fly under the wire, a throat-latch apart, the time of Hal Pointer smashed by one and one-quarter seconds, the pacing record by three seconds, all by little Mascot. Time: 2:04. This parallels Nancy Hanks' glory. A beautiful floral horse shoe, bearing on its transverse bar "2:04" was placed above the timers' stand.

Mascott's great mile of 2:04 was made in 32½, 1:03¾, 1:33, 2:04. Third quarter 29½.

Second heat: They got off to a beautiful start. Guy broke on the first eighth, Mascott drew ahead at the quarter, Flying Jib had reached Mascott's head, both going at a terrible pace. At the three-eighths Mascott slightly led and Starr urged Jib and drew ahead at the half-mile pole. Time: 1:00½. At the three-quarters Flying Jib led by two lengths, Mascott coming hard and making an effort to redeem himself. Time: 30½, 1:00½, 1:31½, 2:05¼. The time for the first half was remarkable. More so than Mascott's second half in the first heat in 1:03¾. The second quarter in 30 seconds is the world's record.

Third Heat—This was to be a surprise. Guy went whirling off at the turn. He was decidedly ahead, Mascott second, Jib third. At the half positions were the same; at the five-eighths they were all in a bunch, but Mascott, in a little break, lost his advantage and the sea captain's horse took it. The crowd burst into cheers and cheered him down the stretch as he came in ahead of the other two, which had before led him so far. Time: 32½, 1:04½, 1:34½, 2:06¾.

Fourth Heat—Three abreast they went around the turn. Mascott broke at the eighth, and the great bay Guy forged ahead. Flying Jib came forward and went nearly abreast to the half, Mascott having again lost by a break. Guy and Jib hung close. Jib was driven first to the three-quarters, but he could not get ahead of the preacher's horse, who swept gallantly into the stretch in the first place, so Guy, Jib and Mascott came home, one, two, three, about fifty feet apart. Time: 33, 1:03½, 1:34, 2:08¾. For the fourth heat this is the fastest pace on record, fastest four heats and fastest one heat, the previous record being 2:07.

Fifth Heat—Guy won the heat and the race, Mascott second, Flying Jib third. Time: 2:08¾.

Thus closed the most exciting and memorable race in the history of the turf.

Guy was wreathed in flowers and McHenry was heartily cheered by the excited spectators.

Events of the Day.

Salisbury's Vinette won first heat of the 2:13 pace in 2:09¼ and was done up for the race, which was won by Cleveland S, who reduced his record to 2:12½. Vinette's great spurt of speed shut out the Canadian pacer, Telegram.

WILL IMMORTALIZE NANCY.

Uncle Jerry Rusk Will Put the Little Mare Into a Book.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 29.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—"The 2:04 performance of Nancy Hanks yesterday is only one more step toward what our American horse is certain to accomplish very soon, a mile in two minutes," said Secretary Rusk today.

The secretary has been much interested in the remarkable work done by Nancy Hanks at Chicago, St. Paul and Terre Haute, as it has an important bearing on a book he will publish before long on "The American Trotter." It will be a supplemental volume to the horse book which the secretary issued a year ago, and which was the most popular government volume ever issued. It was devoted mainly to the horse as a commercial animal, while the supplemental volume will take up the high bred trotting horse and discuss the question of speed, endurance, etc.

The performance of Nancy Hanks yesterday leads the secretary to believe that the two-minute limit will be reached in time to find a place in the forthcoming volume.

Racing at Nemaha's Fair.

AUBURN, Neb., Sept. 29.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The attendance at the fair today was larger, if anything, than on yesterday, and the management is now assured of success. The races today were the especial feature. The first event was the 2:40 trot, mile heats, best three in five, purse $300. The entries for this race were Alice E, by James Ely; Wymore Boy, Ben Johnson; Crow Wing, Moore & Dunn. Alice E won the race. Summary:

The second event on the program was a running race—mile dash—for a purse of $55, and was won by Vanity, owned by P. C. McCamas, in 1:51.

The next thing on the card was a trot—stake race—for foals of 1889, mile heats, best three in five. Church Howe entered Chit Thorn; James Ely, McElroy; J. W. Sash, Lilly Hampton. The race was won by Chit Thorn. Summary:

Chit Thorn	1	1	2	1

Surprised by Temple.

GRAVESEND RACE TRACK, N. Y., Sept. 29.—The sensation of today's racing was the winning by Temple, at 30 to 1, of the first race. His owner, Bookmaker Bennett, had so little confidence in him that he only bet $50 on him in a one, two, three book at 7 to 1. Pierre Lorillard's Kilkenny was the favorite at 9 to 10, but a bad position at the start and frequent knocking about in the large field prevented him from getting near the leaders at any part of the race.

First race, one mile: Temple (30 to 1) won, Strephon (3 to 1) second, King Mac (10 to 1) third. Time: 1:43¾.

Second race, six furlongs: Pappoose colt (4 to 1) won, Balance (13 to 5) second, Uncle Jim (3 to 1) third. Time: 1:16¼.

Horse Breeders at Mystic Park.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 29.—Another large crowd saw the races of the Horse Breeders' meeting at Mystic park this afternoon. In the 2:30 stallion race Kremlin lowered the track record of 2:13¾, made by him two weeks ago, to 2:13.

The 2:40 event, Tyro stakes, was a horse race throughout, and although the judges gave the heat and last race to Alice Wilkes, the decision was hissed by the crowd, who evidently were of the opinion that it belonged to Pansy Blossom. It was a beautiful race. Colonel J. T. Ayers' 2-year-old stallion, Ralph Wilkes was sent to beat his record of 2:18 and was loudly cheered when the figures 2:18¼ were shown from the stand.

Tomorrow the famous pacer, Hal Pointer, will start to lower his record of 2:05¼.

Stake No. 50, value $800: Madge Wilkes won, Frisco second, Grenadier third. Best time: 2:33¾.

Stake No. 55, about $3,700: Kremlin won, Constantine second. Best time: 2:13.

Tyro stakes, 2:40, value $2,015: Alice Wilkes won, Pansy Blossom second, McCurrick third. Best time: 3:23.

Bud Breaks Another Record.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 29.—Bud Doble broke another world's record this afternoon. He drove Martha Wilkes a mile in the free-for-all trot in 2:08¼. It was announced from the judges' stand that it was the greatest heat trotted in a race, the other great records having been made against time. The only other starter was Gillette. The stake was for $1,500 with $500 added in the event the record of the track, 2:10, was broken. Twenty thousand people saw the race. In each of the three races there were but two starters.

Trot for 3-year-olds, Novelty stake $1,600: Parole won, David second, Volta third, Jessie C fourth. Time: 2:20¾.

A fatal accident occurred this evening after the races. Peter Eckburg, 18 years of age, returning from the fair grounds riding a pony, met a hack returning from town, both going rapidly. In attempting to pass both turned to the same side of the road. The pole of the back struck the pony in the side, knocking him down. He cannot live longer than a few hours.

AMUSEMENTS.

D'Ennery's "Don Cæsar de Bazan" inaugurated Alexander Salvini's second stellar engagement in Omaha. The stage finds its properest function in interpretation of romance, and the very evident appreciation of last evening's audience at the Boyd was a testimonial to the predilection of the people in this direction.

D'Ennery's drama may not be of the highest class, but it is very interesting, and makes a capital dish to set before a not overly critical palate. Its presentation last evening was commendable. Of course, the interpretation of the title roll attracted greatest attention. It has been seen in Omaha before, and little difference can be noted from Mr. Salvini's performance of two years ago. From the moment Don Cæsar, the roystering reveler, vinously exalted and full of the ardor of fight, swaggers into sight in the public square of "Grave Madrid" to the minute when he bows himself into the spectator's latest memory as the new governor of Granada, the actor attains and maintains an intensity of speech and action that to the audience approximates pain. It is certainly an admirable bit of acting throughout; the conception is definite and is consistently projected in appropriate action from beginning to end, but now and again a passing thought of Pistol will intrude itself. Mr. Salvini has all the graces of form and feature necessary to the perfect exposition of "romantic" character, and yet one might without excess of diffidence predict that the son of one of the greatest tragic actors of any or all times will make whatever fame awaits him in the higher realm of tragedy. Mr. Salvini has had "advantages;" three generations of noted historians have left him a valuable legacy. Those who know the elder Salvini's "Othello" would not fail to note in the fourth act of "Don Cæsar" how like the younger was to the elder in action, speech and look. Mr. Salvini is all action; his enunciation is imperfect and his sense of the value of emphasis somewhat limited, but his gesture—increasing, quick, living and exquisitely expressive—is Italian and admirably elucidative. The very prodigality of gesture, even in such a part as Don Cæsar, is wearing to an audience accustomed to the emotional repression that rules on the American stage. But, when all is said, Mr. Salvini's Don Cæsar is an admirable performance and one that can be enjoyed more than once.

Miss Judith Berolde, as Maritana, had to pitch her part to meet the note of Mr. Salvini's, and the strain was evident. The other members of the company act indifferently well. The play was well stayed.

LEE'S CHOLERA TREATMENT

He Explains His Methods to a Newspaper Reporter.

HIS GREAT SUCCESS WHILE IN RUSSIA

Simplicity and Effectiveness of His Treatment—Will Experiment in Hamburg—He Does Not Believe in the Efficacy of Inoculation.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.]

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to THE BEE.]—I have just interviewed Dr. Elmer Lee of Chicago, whose successful treatment of the cholera in St. Petersburg has attracted some attention. He speaks in enthusiastic terms of the kindness he met with in Russia, and trusts, perhaps rather optimistically, that he will find similar courtesy in Hamburg when he reaches that city to continue his experiments.

"My method of treatment," said Lee, "is based on physiological experience and common sense. I simply apply to my patients a cleansing system which Koch, and other scientific men, would like to see applied to towns and houses. In short, I wash out the deadly stuff which encumbers the intestines of cholera subjects by means of common soap and water and an irrigator. Here," he continued, "is a sketch of a man under treatment. As you see, the whole thing is very simple, and, I think, very rational. By irrigation I remove the cholera poison without weakening the patient. I keep him well nourished meanwhile to sustain his strength. In twenty-four of the twenty-seven cases I have had confided to me I have been able to report cures. To convince myself scientifically of the value of my method I should like to experiment on at least 100 more cases. I believe I am on the right track. If we remove the cause of the disease we cure the patient. The people whom I treated at St. Petersburg had reached various stages of the cholera. The results of my observations are embodied in a consular report to the United States government."

"Do you believe the theory that comma bacillus is the cause, not the effect, of Asiatic cholera?"

"I have not been able to convince myself on that point yet," said Dr. Lee. "I may add that neither have Dr. Nenck, professor of bacteriology at the Imperial institute in St. Petersburg, and other Russian authorities."

Skeptical in Regard to Inoculation.

"Do you believe in the efficacy of anti-cholera inoculation?"

"I should not like to speak too positively," was the reply, "but I am disinclined to believe it."

"Will you kindly put your reasons into writing?"

"Certainly," said Dr. Lee, suiting his action to his words. "In the first place you cannot exclude the causes of cholera by inoculation. You cannot close the mouth through which they enter, consequently you cannot keep them out of the stomach and bowels. Next, if the poison is once in the intestines," here I may remark that Dr. Lee seems to look upon cholera as a kind of pyremia, "it becomes subject to the same laws that other materials do, and will be absorbed. When absorbed it enters the blood and results in blood poisoning. It seems unreasonable to suppose that inoculation can materially influence the normal laws of physiology. The theory of inoculation against cholera is opposed to physiological reasoning."

Dr. Lee did not explain how irrigation could cure pronounced pyremia.

"From what you say, I suppose you conclude that inoculation is useless. An inoculated person who exposes himself to cholera, for example, drinks infected water, touches dirty clothes, etc., is in peril?"

"Not necessarily. It depends on the stomach."

"How do you suppose cholera is transmitted?"

"Don't know," said Dr. Lee.

WAKING UP AT LAST.

German Papers Beginning to Discuss the Ballot Reformation.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.]

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to THE BEE.]—The German press, which is not quite as quick to reflect the thoughts and movements of the hour as its English or American rivals, has at last awakened to the fact that an attempt to tamper with the universal suffrage system of the kingdom has been manifest of late in high places. You may remember, then, that ten days ago or more, I drew attention to this matter in the Herald. The Boersen Courier, liberal organ, now takes up the tale. It has just discovered that the principal of universal suffrage has foes in the empire.

The Coelnische Volks Zeitung, mouthpiece of the Rhenish Catholics, gives much space to the question in a lengthy and suggestive leader on the threatened abolition of the present mode of voting. The Volks Zeitung remarks: "It would mean nothing less than enslaving the working classes. Really, disguised in the fashion of the nineteenth and stwentieth centuries, the consequence would be revolution, real, living revolution. Institutions like universal suffrage may be introduced, but once they have struck their roots in the land, they cannot be abolished. Workingmen can never be deprived of their higher vote, and only the most arrant fanatics imagine that such plans can be executed without a disturbance of the peace of the empire." MELTZER.

WON'T GIVE UP HIS RELIGION.

The New Lord Mayor of London Will Remain a Catholic.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.]

LONDON, Sept. 29.—[New York Herald Cable—Special to THE BEE.]—A bitter scoffer once said that a praying Englishman was the most odious sight under heaven, and intelligent foreigners who get a glimpse of the bangering correspondence from Lord Mayor Evans to Alderman Knill, who was today elected to that exalted post, will probably come to the conclusion that Dickens' portrait of the English pharisee in Chadband was true to nature. The lord mayor asked Knill, who is a Roman Catholic, if, should he be elected lord mayor, he would sacrifice his religious convictions for the sake of political emolument by conforming to the rules of the Church of England and attending the service of the Established church in the capacity of lord mayor. Knill replied that he would do nothing of the sort, but, if elected, would appoint a locum tenens to represent him at church functions. He will also forego religious scruples at state banquets by permitting grace to be offered by an Established churchman, but for family uses he will have none other than a Catholic priest.

ARGYLE REPLIES TO GLADSTONE.

The Duke Claims That the Grand Old Man Answered Himself.

LONDON, Sept. 29.—The duke of Argyle replies in the Times today to Mr. Gladstone's North American Review article.

"That article," he says, "instead of refuting, furnishes a valuable confirmation of my argument. That argument is not addressed to American politicians but to friends of quite a different class. I know the influences guiding American politics, and therefore attach no importance to the opinion of the American ballot box. We are not going to remodel our constitution in deference to the opinion of American politicians."

The writer proceeds to argue that although he had at the time of the American civil war full sympathy with the north on the question of slavery, the question at first did not turn on slavery but on the right of secession, upon which he had doubts until Mr. Motley convinced him that no part of the union had the smallest right to secede without common consent.

"Mr. Gladstone," he contends, "clinched the argument against himself by claiming that the people of Ireland never assented to the act of union, and that Ireland is therefore entitled to call herself a nation—a title never hitherto given to any of our greatest colonies and never acknowledged as belonging to any of the states of the union. He has gone the whole length of denying that there is any obligatory force in one of the few organic statutes existing in our constitutional history. Nothing could have better served my purpose than to have drawn the illuminating flash from the thunders of Hawarden, which will direct attention to other zigzag and forked lightning when we are more accustomed to the glare and roar."
