INCREASING TROUBLE IN THE MINISTRY

Differences Between Chancellor Von Caprivi and Herr Miguel Widening.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S SORE EAR AGAIN

It is the Subject of Discussion in the Daily Papers--The Newly Elected Burgomaster of Berlin Confirmed--German Gossip.

[Copyrighted 1892 by New York Associated Press.] Berlin, Oct. 8.--The long distance military ride is the one topic of conversation in the city. All classes of inhabitants are interested in the event, which has totally eclipsed politics and everything else. Despite the disappointment of Germans at the winning of the race by an Austrian and the better general time made by them, they are lavishing hospitality upon the Austrians. The latter have been feted and dined by the officers of different crack regiments. Today a series of great races was given in their honor. Emperor William will return Monday evening from Weimar, whether he has gone to attend the golden wedding celebration of the grand duke of Saxe-Weimar, when he will give the Austrians a dinner. He will also visit the stables where the Austrians' horses are kept.

It Was Cruelty to Animals.

Some of the horses are irreparably injured. In one stall at the stable a beautiful mare with both hind hoofs split. She is steaming and sweating and is evidently in great agony. She made the distance from Florsdorf to Berlin in eighty-two hours. Of fifty others inspected, fifteen are disabled for life. The thoroughbreds suffered the most. The condition of the animals is pitiable. Their sides are sunken in, and it seems as though their backs were twisted. Some Hungarian horses, that are scarcely bigger than ponies, seem to be in wonderfully good condition. Accurate statistics of the horses that have died in Berlin cannot be obtained. It is known, however, that eight of the Austrian animals died on the road.

A Ministerial Crisis Threatened.

While the race has regained supreme in the public mind a ministerial crisis has been quietly preparing. The differences between Chancellor von Caprivi and Herr Miguel, Prussian minister of finance, have been widened through the unheard-of action of the chancellor in completely ignoring the Prussian cabinet in the presentation of the new military bill. The chancellor, who has succeeded in overcoming the emperor's opposition to the bill, did not consult either Herr Miguel or Count Eulenburg, president of the Prussian council of ministers, in regard to the measure. It is predicted that the chancellor will dissolve the Reichstag if the bill fails to pass. Radical papers are jubilant over this outlook and express the hope that in the event of dissolution their party will make great gains. The Yossische Zeitung says, "There is no chance for the passage, and dissolution will only strengthen the opposition and compel Chancellor von Caprivi to resign. The political interests of France demand this treaty, but the ministry prefer to fail upon the Carmaux question rather than upon a radical reform policy. There is a menace just as great in the Panama canal scandal in which politicians, journalists and deputies are said to be gravely involved. The rumor of an interview between the three superiors is absolutely false. There is no change in Franco-Russian policy. The expedition to Dahomey will, it seems, have accomplished its end next week. The success of France is beyond a doubt. The excitement caused by the discovery that the Germans have been sending munitions of war to Dahomey is great. Emperor William's Ear.

The Cologne Gazette a few days ago published a denial of the reports circulated about the trouble the emperor is alleged to have had with one of his ears. It is said to have come straight from the court, the emperor being very sensitive on the subject.

Prince Bismarck's organ now proclaims that the story is perfectly true and that it is folly to deny it. It adds that the facts were well known to the intimate relatives of the emperor. The statement is scarcely likely to increase friendliness between the emperor and Prince Bismarck. Stories of the emperor's financial difficulties are again current. His father and grandfather allowed army subalterns a certain amount of money each month if they were without private means. Emperor William refuses to continue this practice and no further grants will be made, though the present recipients under the old system will continue to draw the sums allotted to them until they are promoted. The number of subalterns receiving the bounty is very small. They are mostly the sons of men who died on the field and whose families have been provided for by the Prussian service. The emperor's action in this matter has caused much gossip and it is given out as positive evidence that he is hard up.

Confirmed the Liberal Burgomaster.

The emperor's cordial message, confirming the election of Herr Zelle, who is an ardent liberal, as burgomaster of Berlin, is regarded as of great political importance. When Herr Zelle's name was first mentioned for the position it was freely predicted that the emperor would never confirm his election. Despite the old emperor's life the relations between the burgomaster and the court were very strained. Even at the beginning of the present reign things continued in the same state until Prince Bismarck's influence decided three years ago. The emperor confirmed the election of Herr von Forckenbeck to burgomaster of Berlin, but it is said he remarked to Minister Herr Puch, who pressed him to the confirmation, "Don't let me be asked again to confirm the election of a liberal burgomaster." His action in regard to Herr Zelle was looked forward to with anxiety. The message was a pleasant surprise and it is regarded as a sign that the time of boycotting political opponents of the government is over.

Want the Law Repeated.

Three thousand retail traders of Cologne have petitioned the federal council and the emperor to abolish the new Sunday rest law. They assure the emperor that Sunday rest tends to make employees not more religious, but more pleasure seeking and discontented.

GLADSTONE AND HIS PRECIOUS HEALTH

His Avowed Intention of Beating the London Fog's Terrorizes His Friends, Who Seem to Foresee the Result of His Temerity.

[Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.] London, Oct. 8.--(New York Herald Cable--Special to The Bee.)--For the moment everything is thrown into the background by the death of Lord Tennyson. When the inquiry was going on some months ago into the room still left for interments in Westminster Abbey the space was shown me which has long been reserved for the illustrious poet. It is a high, vaulted chamber, just beneath the spot where Longfellow's bust stands next to Browning's grave. The coffin of a woman had to be moved a little further on to make room for Browning. She was the wife of some unknown barrister, for in the early part of the century everybody was buried in Westminster Abbey whose friends could pay the necessary fees. It was treated as a mere parish church. That has been not a stone, but even now it is difficult to keep out third and fourth rate celebrities. Their friends are numerous and a tremendous pressure is brought to bear upon the dean, with whom rests the power to give or refuse permission. Sometimes he finds it by no means a pleasant duty to pronounce a decision. Dean Stanley gave way to outside pressure more than once, and Dean Bradley had not always been able to resist it. The honors of Westminster Abbey have been claimed by many a man who was clean forgotten six months after his death. Should Stop Burials There. No one will dispute Tennyson's right to rest there and doubtless room will be found for Mr. Gladstone unless he forbids it by special directions. There ought to be no more interments within the walls. A large part of the old abbey was built upon concrete and it is no easy matter to get through it. There is an old man attached to the building who knows the whole place under ground, and he described it to me as piled with dead with the exception of one particular corner, which is a bed of solid concrete never yet touched. It would be better to leave it so and that was evidently the feeling of the royal commission which inquired into the whole subject in 1850. Some consideration for the living should now be shown.

Who Will Wear the Crown?

Next comes the question, who is to be made poet laureate? A good many candidates are in the field already. Alfred Austin desires to prove his fitness for the office by sending to the Times a yard or so of his verses on Tennyson. His verses were addressed to the prince of Wales and he began "And you, Sir," which, by the way, is far ahead of anything Tennyson ever turned out. Austin never wrote a line of poetry in his life, and his appointment would be a disgrace to letters. There is only Swinburne who could wear the laureate's wreath without setting all the world laughing, and some of his early writings stand much in the way. The best thing to be done is to let the office remain unfilled at least for a time. There is no immediate necessity for a poet laureate and we have no Wordsworth or Tennyson to succeed to it. Everybody except the disappointed candidates will forgive Mr. Gladstone if he shows the country to run along without an official poet.

By His Deeds the Frog.

The prime minister has made up his mind to keep in London all winter, but his friends are trying to change his determination. The fogs of the metropolis, of which we have already had a foretaste, would try him severely, and we would see how soon his life of 82 would be brought to a close. Of late years Mr. Gladstone has frequently given notice that he would not be content to abandon this precaution, simply because he is the head of the ministry. His colleagues are anxious that he should not incur any additional risk for, in the present state of affairs, the ministry could not hold out a month in the next session without Mr. Gladstone. He will certainly come to London to get his home rule bill drafted, considered by the cabinet and let health look after itself.

PRESIDENT CARNOT AT LILLE

Socialists Made a Demand Upon Him--An Exciting Incident. Paris, Oct. 8.--President Carnot arrived at Lille this afternoon for the purpose of attending the fiftieth anniversary of the defeat at the battle of the Austrians who, after a terrific bombardment of the town, were obliged to raise the siege. When the president reached the square, where a platform had been erected for the use of speakers who were to deliver patriotic addresses, loud cries were uttered by persons in the assemblage demanding amnesty for the socialists. Carnot who had been condemned for the share he had taken in the German dynamite explosions. These shouts were mingled with cheers and the incident for a time caused something of a commotion. Admiral Walker's Prompt Action.

Pillage and plunder soon became general. Many houses were looted, and there was much wanton destruction of property. How far things might have gone it is impossible to say if Admiral Walker, acting with admirable energy and decision, had not landed a force of sailors and marines to hold the mob in check and preserve order. The sailors were warmly welcomed by all who were not themselves seeking plunder. There is no doubt that much property, and perhaps many lives were preserved by the landing of the men from the cruisers Chicago and Kennerly. Fugitives from Caracas tell me that the roads between here and the capital are almost impassable. They are filled with people who are fleeing, they know not where, and are seeking, many of them, to take their families to the mountains. Stragglers and camp followers are hurrying and scurrying to get to the seaside, thus adding to the general confusion. Have Completely Vanished. It is rumored that Palido and the members of his cabinet embarked from here and got safely on board some of the vessels that will carry them all beyond Crespo's reach. It is probable that they have done so, but I haven't been able to find anything of them. The revolution has triumphed. CRESPO HAS CARACAS. His Victorious Troops March in and Take Possession of the Capital. [Copyrighted 1892 by James Gordon Bennett.] Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 8.--(By Mexican Cable to the New York Herald--Special to The Bee.)--Caracas has fallen. The triumph of General Crespo over the government forces is complete. The revolution is thus victorious. After defeating the army of the government at San Pedro General Crespo began his march upon the capital, and 3,000 of his troops commanded by Generals Guerra, Radriguez and Fernandez entered the city last night. General Crespo with the balance of his army is at Calivera, a short distance from the city. He will enter the capital tomorrow. Had the advanced guard of General Crespo's army been anxious of peace instead of messengers of war their advent would not have been more welcome to the people of Caracas. After the crushing defeat at San Pedro the government perceived that it had played its last card, and Acting President Palido and his cabinet fled before the advancing hosts. Fate in the City. The news caused an instantaneous panic throughout the city, which grew in intensity, and as stragglers and refugees from the defeated army came pouring into the city telling the terrified inhabitants that General Crespo and his army were at their heels confusion and disorder reigned and hundreds of persons joined the army of fugitives which had started for La Guayra when the first news of the disaster to the government forces was received. Then all semblance of order was at an end. People who had been too cowardly to fight either for or against the government, and many of Palido's soldiers, took advantage of the situation to begin rioting and pillaging. Scores of houses were sacked. Those who had the misfortune to be present against such marauders were met with instant death. Many were cruelly clubbed and beaten for daring to protect their property. The rioters were no respecters of persons. When the Spanish minister ventured to re-mostrate with a gang of plunderers he was grossly insulted. Acting President Villegas Palido and the members of his cabinet took advantage of the confusion to slip out of the city. It is rumored they embarked on some ship in the harbor of La Guayra--perhaps one of the government vessels. It is impossible, however, to trace their movements at present. That they sought safety in flight is certain. Steal Everything Portable. During the three hours that elapsed between the ignominious flight of the cabinet and the advent of General Crespo's advance guard the looters simply held possession of the town. There was nothing to restrain them and they plundered right and left, seizing whatever portable property they could lay their hands on. The inhabitants, who at first dreaded the advance of General Crespo's soldiers,

OKLAHOMA'S CONDITION.

Governor Seay Makes His Annual Report--A Good Showing.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.--The annual report of Governor Seay of Oklahoma has been received in this city. It shows that the population has increased from 63,141 in 1890 to 123,100 in 1892. These figures do not include Indians who still maintain their domain. The real value of the property of the territory is placed at $1,150,000. The real and personal property of the territory is estimated at $40,000,000. The school population is given at 31,023, an increase of 10,563 for the year.

There is a growing feeling of distrust, the governor says, among the people of Oklahoma, as to whether the policy of allotting the Indians the choicest lands of the territory and making them inalienable and non-taxable for twenty-five years, is fair and just, and whether, under that policy, the future prosperity of the territory will not be seriously retarded. With a fair prospect of an early decision by the supreme court giving "Greener country" to Oklahoma, the governor says the territory will be entitled to statehood and will soon ask congress for admission into the union.

HASTINGS, Neb., Oct. 8.--(Special Telegram to The Bee.)--About 4 o'clock this morning the quiet little town was visited by burglars. They went to John Anthony's blacksmith shop, forced the door and got all the tools they needed. They then went to the postoffice where they knocked the knob of the safe off and tried to force the door with dynamite, but not succeeding they adjourned to L. W.
