

THE OMAHA DAILY TRADE

Jobbers Can Throw No New Light on the Situation.

COUNTRY COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Local Conditions Somewhat Improved. While the Outlook is Decidedly Brighter - A Better Feeling Prevails in Many Directions.

Another week has passed and still the jobbers of Omaha have nothing new to offer bearing on the state of trade. It is the same old story of "trade never better."

It is not possible to imagine the condition of the jobbing trade any other than bright at the present time or to expect any brighter.

In retail circles conditions are somewhat brighter. The indications are that the lumbermen more to do and what there has been to do is being done.

AS DEN SEELER

Omaha's Local Trade Considered by an Expert in Business Matters.

W. H. Robinson, manager of R. G. Don & Co.'s Omaha office, referring to local trade.

"Lumber dealers are crowded with orders. They find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"Material men-dealers in paints, oils and glass, and manufacturers of sash, doors, blinds and millwork-tell the same story."

"The clothing trade is in a better demand. The slightly cooler weather has stimulated trade in this line."

"The grocer continues very busy and the drug trade has had a good week."

"The harness firms report trade very satisfactory and collections exceptionally good."

"The shoe trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The real estate continues dull locally, though reports of activity in good farm lands come from the older sections of the state."

"The oil trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The coal trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The iron and steel trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The machinery trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

THE SPECULATIVE MARKETS

Heaviness in Grain and Buoyancy in Provisions Tell the Tale.

EXPORTS FROM THE SEABOARD WERE FAIR

Corn Was Weak and Lower as a Result of the Big Receipts of the Past Three Days-Oats Were Quiet.

GETTING AT IT IN EARNEST.

Charges Against the Hogan Jurors Will Be Fully Investigated.

The end of the trouble in the case of James Hogan against the Omaha Elevator Company, in which it is alleged that while in their room jurors Redey and Hall told their associates that attorneys Hanson, Gurley and Marjorie, who appeared for the plaintiff were biased and prejudiced.

When Judge Irvine returned the matter was reported to him, and after hearing the statements of the jury he discharged them.

Mr. Webster said that his friends appeared as public complainants; they had made the public a party to the case and considered the law that in this case and consideration.

Mr. Webster said that he stood as a friend to the court and was ready to assist in getting the law before the jury.

Mr. Webster said that he had no desire to make the investigation an inquisition, one-sided or partial; all he wanted was to get at the truth.

Mr. Webster said that he had no desire to make the investigation an inquisition, one-sided or partial; all he wanted was to get at the truth.

Mr. Webster said that he had no desire to make the investigation an inquisition, one-sided or partial; all he wanted was to get at the truth.

Mr. Webster said that he had no desire to make the investigation an inquisition, one-sided or partial; all he wanted was to get at the truth.

Mr. Webster said that he had no desire to make the investigation an inquisition, one-sided or partial; all he wanted was to get at the truth.

THE OMAHA DAILY TRADE

Jobbers Can Throw No New Light on the Situation.

COUNTRY COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Local Conditions Somewhat Improved. While the Outlook is Decidedly Brighter - A Better Feeling Prevails in Many Directions.

Another week has passed and still the jobbers of Omaha have nothing new to offer bearing on the state of trade. It is the same old story of "trade never better."

It is not possible to imagine the condition of the jobbing trade any other than bright at the present time or to expect any brighter.

In retail circles conditions are somewhat brighter. The indications are that the lumbermen more to do and what there has been to do is being done.

AS DEN SEELER

Omaha's Local Trade Considered by an Expert in Business Matters.

W. H. Robinson, manager of R. G. Don & Co.'s Omaha office, referring to local trade.

"Lumber dealers are crowded with orders. They find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"Material men-dealers in paints, oils and glass, and manufacturers of sash, doors, blinds and millwork-tell the same story."

"The clothing trade is in a better demand. The slightly cooler weather has stimulated trade in this line."

"The grocer continues very busy and the drug trade has had a good week."

"The harness firms report trade very satisfactory and collections exceptionally good."

"The shoe trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The real estate continues dull locally, though reports of activity in good farm lands come from the older sections of the state."

"The oil trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The coal trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The iron and steel trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The machinery trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

THE OMAHA DAILY TRADE

Jobbers Can Throw No New Light on the Situation.

COUNTRY COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Local Conditions Somewhat Improved. While the Outlook is Decidedly Brighter - A Better Feeling Prevails in Many Directions.

Another week has passed and still the jobbers of Omaha have nothing new to offer bearing on the state of trade. It is the same old story of "trade never better."

It is not possible to imagine the condition of the jobbing trade any other than bright at the present time or to expect any brighter.

In retail circles conditions are somewhat brighter. The indications are that the lumbermen more to do and what there has been to do is being done.

AS DEN SEELER

Omaha's Local Trade Considered by an Expert in Business Matters.

W. H. Robinson, manager of R. G. Don & Co.'s Omaha office, referring to local trade.

"Lumber dealers are crowded with orders. They find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"Material men-dealers in paints, oils and glass, and manufacturers of sash, doors, blinds and millwork-tell the same story."

"The clothing trade is in a better demand. The slightly cooler weather has stimulated trade in this line."

"The grocer continues very busy and the drug trade has had a good week."

"The harness firms report trade very satisfactory and collections exceptionally good."

"The shoe trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The real estate continues dull locally, though reports of activity in good farm lands come from the older sections of the state."

"The oil trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The coal trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The iron and steel trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The machinery trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

THE OMAHA DAILY TRADE

Jobbers Can Throw No New Light on the Situation.

COUNTRY COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Local Conditions Somewhat Improved. While the Outlook is Decidedly Brighter - A Better Feeling Prevails in Many Directions.

Another week has passed and still the jobbers of Omaha have nothing new to offer bearing on the state of trade. It is the same old story of "trade never better."

It is not possible to imagine the condition of the jobbing trade any other than bright at the present time or to expect any brighter.

In retail circles conditions are somewhat brighter. The indications are that the lumbermen more to do and what there has been to do is being done.

AS DEN SEELER

Omaha's Local Trade Considered by an Expert in Business Matters.

W. H. Robinson, manager of R. G. Don & Co.'s Omaha office, referring to local trade.

"Lumber dealers are crowded with orders. They find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"Material men-dealers in paints, oils and glass, and manufacturers of sash, doors, blinds and millwork-tell the same story."

"The clothing trade is in a better demand. The slightly cooler weather has stimulated trade in this line."

"The grocer continues very busy and the drug trade has had a good week."

"The harness firms report trade very satisfactory and collections exceptionally good."

"The shoe trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The real estate continues dull locally, though reports of activity in good farm lands come from the older sections of the state."

"The oil trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The coal trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The iron and steel trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The machinery trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

THE OMAHA DAILY TRADE

Jobbers Can Throw No New Light on the Situation.

COUNTRY COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Local Conditions Somewhat Improved. While the Outlook is Decidedly Brighter - A Better Feeling Prevails in Many Directions.

Another week has passed and still the jobbers of Omaha have nothing new to offer bearing on the state of trade. It is the same old story of "trade never better."

It is not possible to imagine the condition of the jobbing trade any other than bright at the present time or to expect any brighter.

In retail circles conditions are somewhat brighter. The indications are that the lumbermen more to do and what there has been to do is being done.

AS DEN SEELER

Omaha's Local Trade Considered by an Expert in Business Matters.

W. H. Robinson, manager of R. G. Don & Co.'s Omaha office, referring to local trade.

"Lumber dealers are crowded with orders. They find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"Material men-dealers in paints, oils and glass, and manufacturers of sash, doors, blinds and millwork-tell the same story."

"The clothing trade is in a better demand. The slightly cooler weather has stimulated trade in this line."

"The grocer continues very busy and the drug trade has had a good week."

"The harness firms report trade very satisfactory and collections exceptionally good."

"The shoe trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The real estate continues dull locally, though reports of activity in good farm lands come from the older sections of the state."

"The oil trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The coal trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The iron and steel trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The machinery trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

THE OMAHA DAILY TRADE

Jobbers Can Throw No New Light on the Situation.

COUNTRY COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Local Conditions Somewhat Improved. While the Outlook is Decidedly Brighter - A Better Feeling Prevails in Many Directions.

Another week has passed and still the jobbers of Omaha have nothing new to offer bearing on the state of trade. It is the same old story of "trade never better."

It is not possible to imagine the condition of the jobbing trade any other than bright at the present time or to expect any brighter.

In retail circles conditions are somewhat brighter. The indications are that the lumbermen more to do and what there has been to do is being done.

AS DEN SEELER

Omaha's Local Trade Considered by an Expert in Business Matters.

W. H. Robinson, manager of R. G. Don & Co.'s Omaha office, referring to local trade.

"Lumber dealers are crowded with orders. They find it difficult to keep up with the demand."

"Material men-dealers in paints, oils and glass, and manufacturers of sash, doors, blinds and millwork-tell the same story."

"The clothing trade is in a better demand. The slightly cooler weather has stimulated trade in this line."

"The grocer continues very busy and the drug trade has had a good week."

"The harness firms report trade very satisfactory and collections exceptionally good."

"The shoe trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The real estate continues dull locally, though reports of activity in good farm lands come from the older sections of the state."

"The oil trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The coal trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The iron and steel trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."

"The machinery trade shows some improvement, but is still far from what it ought to be."