Wickham Bros, yesterday commenced work on the crection of the new Merriam building at the corner of Broadway and Sixth street. It will be two stories in height, 50x70 feet, built of brick and will be used for store purposes. Warren North, a gentleman living in a for est of sunflowers near the driving park, ad ministered a threshing to his wife last night and then ran away from home. Mrs. North complained of ner treatment at the police station and her husband was run in on the charge of disturbing the peace. Marriage licenses have been issued to J

Henry Dau and Maggie S. Bruhm of Min den, Neb.; Herman Sherman and Christic Voyel of Lincoln, Non, and John F. Lands mann and Johannah Peterson of Omaha The last named couple was married by Jus tice Hammer yesterday.

There is talk of organizing a bicycle con tingent to the Young Men's Republican Marching club. A committee is making the rounds to find out what would be the chances of success, and it is probable that the organ-Ization will be effected at this week's meet ing, so that those joining may take part in Weinesday's parade.

"Shorty," alias Jim Johnson, has been placed under bonds of $300 to appear for a hearing before the United States commis-sioner on the 30th for an examination on the charge of passing counterfeit money. Wise Payne, who was implicated in the deal with nim in some way, has also given bonds for his appearance at the same time and place.

It looked as if there was a revival meeting going on in Greenshields, Nicholson & Co's real estate office the other day. Rev. Mr. Davis, the new paster of the First Baptist church, was just closing the deal for a home on Fifth avenue. Rev. L. A. Hall of the Temple Baptist church was looking after a real estate deal; Rev. L. M. Campbell was arranging for a new residence in Lincoln; Rev. Mr. Alexander, the Methodist divine, was just signing papers, Greenshields, Nicholson & Co. having just sold his residence for him. The revival meeting seems keeping up with this live real estate firm, although it is not confined to preachers.

Our religion is to do good. Hidden deep under the soil are the buds of unblown flowers, struggling to rise into the light of heaven. So there are mortals, who, from their debasing associations and unavoidable misfortune, live in the reach of certain death. Their condition is deplorable. Our mission is to clothe, feed and educate the unfor-tunate of Council Bluffs and to that end "Class Union" will give a fine supper in the Elseman building Oct. 25, the proceeds of which will be devoted to this worthy object. Come, then, everyone, and help bring sunshine into lives of gloom. "Class Mission."

Spoiled the Plumbing. Mrs. Anna Lovi, who keeps a junk shop near the corner sof Broadway and Seventh street, was on trial before Justice Swearingen yesterday on the charge of receiving stolen goods. About a week ago a house be-longing to J. C. Debaven, at the corner of Broadway and Sixteenth street, was entered and all the lead pipe, faucets, etc., of the plumbing fixtures were cut loose and taken away. Later it was developed that Lonnie Zigler and Harry Hall, two boys about 15 years of age, had done the mischief and had sold the stuff to Mrs. Levi. The price they received for ruining a $50 job of plumbing was 53 cents. The two boys were ar arrested for larceny, and vesterday testified against the woman to whom they claimed to have sold the lead pipe. They told their story without flinching, one of them going so far as to give the court an idea, as well as his limited vocabulary could express it, of the whipping he had received at home when it was found out that he had been in mischief of a serious kind. After a part of the evidence had been heard, the case was allowed to go over until next Tuesday. Mrs. Levi has in the business of buying scrap lead before.

Administrator of William Parks' Estate Demands the Bank Deposits.

HEIRS TO THE MONEY CANNOT BE FOUND For Almost a Quarter of a Century He Claims Three Thousand Dollars Has Been Drawing Interest-Other Local News Notes.

A suit was commenced in the district court yesterday by E. W. Davenport, in the capacity of administrator of the estate of William Parks, to recover deposits amounting to $3,000 which were made by the deceased in 1870 in the First National bank, together with interest ever since that time. The petition states that the plaintiff was appointed administrator at the request of the bank immediately after Parks' death. He was upatle to draw the money, however, as some one who had no right to do so took away the valuable papers of the deceased and he has never had them in his possession since. He has made strenuous efforts to find some of the hears, but has been unable to do Recently, he says, he demanded payment but the bank refused it. He accordingly demands a judgment for the amount of the original deposits, with interest.

No bankrupt, fire-smoked, damaged furniture at Meyer's, 305-307 Broadway. Clean goods, less than any Omaha prices. Tariff Talk.

Rudolph Blankenburg, a prominent manufacturer of Pennsylvania, delivered an address on political subjects last evening at the republican headquarters. One of the largest audiences that has ever gathered in that room listened to his speech with apparently the greatest interest. Mr. Blankenburg is in the manufacturing business on his own book, and in addition to this he has had the advantage over many tariff speakers in having had an opportunity of looking over foreign countries during a recent European trip, so that his words have a greater auhority than if all he knew was what he had thority than if all he knew was what he had read in newspapers.

He put in a good share of his time dealing with Governor Boies and his calamity speeches, in which he had bewalled the condition of the people of Iowa in particular and the nation generally. He combated the idea that the tariff law was an example of class legislation. If the law said that all men who parted their hair in the middle, or belowing to the Banking though on had belonged to the Baptist church, or had warts on their noses, could reap its benefits, it would be class legislation, but so long as any one who had the capital or the credit could go into the manufacturing business be was as much the object of the protective law as any one else.

The speaker brought forth a number of instances to show that so far from raising the price of commodities, the McKintey bill has in reality lowered many of them. Man-ufactures had been stimulated, and the "Chinese wall" that the governor has referred to so many times is not enough of a Chinese wall to prevent the imports of the country from being over $800 000,000 and the exports over $1,010,000,000. He stated that Americans could buy German, French or Italian goods cheaper in their respective markets than the people of those countries could at home. This fact, he said, was explained by the foreign mer-chants themselves by saying that the American tariff was so high that if they did not give the lowest prices the Americans would do their trading at home. Mr. Blankenburg is evidently a shrewd business man and he handled his subject in a way that indicated that he was well up in facts and figures connected with the tariff dispute. He was frequently interrupted by the laughter and applause of the audience. New mattings, just received. Smyrna rugs from 75c up. Oil cloths in pat-terns, and linoleums, new line; also Wants $10,000 Damages. On the 18th of last May, William Grimmelman fell into a vat of not water at the Union Pacific yards, and was horribly scalded. He lingered along, and finally, after several weeks, died from the effects of his injuries. Yesterday a petition was filed in the district court by D. E. H. Grimmel-man as administrator of the estate of the dead man, demanding a judgment of $10,000 against the Union Pacific Railway company on two counts. On the first count the plaintiff alleges that William Grimmelman was employed in the round house of the company, and was not familiar with the turntable and its surroundings; that being sent out to work the turntable at night, he missed his foot and fell into a ditch, which had been sllowed to fill with boiling water immediately under the turntable, and re-ceived injuries from which he afterwards died. In the second count the plaintiff alleges that the company failed to furnish the services of a physician or take the inman to a hospital for treatment at once, and that when medical attention was given it was given in a careless, negligent

BOLD WORK OF A DAYLIGHT BURGLAR

Frightened by a t.oman He Jumps Through a Window, Taking Sash and Glass with Him.

For more than a year past the question of viaduct or an overhead foot bridge over the railway tracks at N street has agitated the public mind. An underground passage also has been talked of. Talk has been about all there has been to it, and until very recently it looked as if the matter would end with agitation.

Last evening a petition was filed in the office of the city clerk, and the potitioners want a viaduct constructed over the tracks, and pray the honorable council to take the necessary steps to have the viaduct constructed immediately. The petition is signed by C. M. Hant, the packers and the South Omana national banks, Lau-fenberg & Gould and fifteen or twenty other owners of realty fronting on N street. The petitioners represent 1,500 feet of the 3,600 feet from Twenty-first street to Twentyseventh screet. The pullioners want the viaduct to commence at the alley between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh streets and run west over the tracks to near the exchange building on the property of the Union Stock Yards company. The people who have signed the petition are the owners of property east of Twenty-sixth street, and as the viaduct would not come near them it required no very great magnanimous effort to sign the waiver of damages. Laufenberg & Gould own the brick block about seventyfive feet cast of the alley from where the starting point of the viaduet will be and J. J. McLain owns the lot directly across N street, adjoining the Hendrix block on the west. The other signers own property east of them. None of the owners of property within seventy-five feet of where the via-duct starts nor on to the west, where it

For a time it was the general sentiment that an election at this time would be more detrimental that bene ficial to the best interests of the city, and i was thought best to delay the centest until next spring. A thorough canvass reveals the fact that such is almost the unanimous sentiment today, and nearly the whole popu-lace is satisfied with Jack Walters at the helm, and there is no popular disposition to make the change at this time. Both sides, however, have the weather eye vide open and propose that no snap judgment shall be taken. In order to protect themselves each side has circulated a peti-tion, which is now safely deposited in the inside pocket of a trusty lieutenant, and in case of the filing of a petition by either side the other side will be on hand and drop drop theirs into the slot. Mayor Waiters has been agreed upon as the democratic can-B. Cheek, the B. & M. stock agent, has been centered upon by those who were the sup supporters of the late Mayor Miller, and his pe

Both sides disclaim any intention of force ing the election and claim their petition will only be filed in case any snap judgment game is attempted.

A Timid Burgiar. Yesterday morning about 10 o'cleck some one entered Fred E. Pearl's house, at Twenty-fourth and P streets, 'The uninvited guest came in through the front door and was ransacking the drawers and hauling over papers when he was suddenly frightened away by a noiso made by Mrs. Pearl, who was in the kitchen. The fellow made a dash for liberty and jumped through a win-dow, not taking time to raise the sash, but carrying with him the sash and the screen Mrs. Pearl got a good look at him and furnished the police with an excellent description. She describes him as being of medium height, slight build, light complexoned, a dark mustache and wearing dark clothes. Robbery was the cause of the housebreaker's visit.

People's Party Raily. The people's party had a rally last evening with Van Wyck and Shrader as the leading attractions. It required the combined efforts of a brass band and the local 'enders to get a crowd of 150 men and boys congregated at Pivonka's ball. Shrader was the first speaker and he kept up his unenvied reputa-tion as a shricker of calamity. Van Wyck's address was but little better and he awakened no enthusiasm, whatever. Rev. Wheeler wound up the speechmaking with a short address. The rally was a very tame affair and was even a little more so than the recent democratic fizzle, at which Bryan did the republican cause so much good.

VICWA. GENERAL SICKLES' SPEECH.

An Authenticated Version Prepared and Published. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Giobe-Democrat says the fellowing is the closing part of General Sickles' address, delivered on the occasion of the Grand Army encampment, which has created such widespread attention in both political parties. The part of the address here given has been revised by General Sickles himself. It is followed by a note over his own signature, which renders the report authentic beyond cavil:

"Comrades, we missed one of our number yesterday. An imperative do-mestic duty constrained him to be absent from the capital and deprived him of the pleasure of meeting you and extending to you a soldier's welcome from the head of the nation. Now tonight he has the happiness to see his beloved consort in her home, somewhat relieved. as we are happy to learn, from her suf-Yet it is impossible for him to open his doors to you tonight, as I am sure it would have been his pride and pleasure to have done if possible. has not forgotten you; let us not forget him. He is a soldier and a comeadrthe president of the United States. I know he is a good soldier, for I saw him lead his regiment in the assault on the redoubt at Resaca. [A voice—"And he didn't send a substitute either." Cries of "order, order."] I know he is a true comrade, because he has never refused a just request made by the men who wore the blue. [A voice—"And he hasn't sent back any rebel flags either. "Now, Mr. Chairman, I move, as the

cers of this meeting be authorized and requested to express to our comrade, the president of the United States, our sympathy in his affliction, and to extend to him our sincere wishes for the speedy convalescence of his beloved wife. The chairman having put the question on this resolution it was adopted by a rising vote with the greatest enthusiasm, and followed by three cheers for Comrade Harrison, and three more for Comrade Sickles. When order was restored General Sickles proceeded as fol-"I suppose you sometimes hear among your neighbors more or less growling about the large sum annually voted by congress for soldiers' and sailors' pensions. These appropriations stand upon the same ground as the money voted to pay the public debts of the nation You and your comrades are public creditors. The nation owes you all you get and more besides. Let us look at

legat principles. In war when an enemy's ship is captured the officers and crew of the captor receive in shape of 'prize money' the value of the captured vessel. Now, you and your comrades brought back to the union all the states that seceded from it. How much are they worth? Figure that up, say to your cross-grained critics, and we will tell you how much 'prize money' -how much a year in pensions we should have. [Applause.] By the law of nations and by the law of every commercial country, the officers and crew of a ship that rescues and saves another ship in distress and danger is entitled to 'salvage'—that is to say, the value of the imperiled ship and her cargo is appraised, and in proportion to the risks incurred by the salvors so the reward given to them. This law is universally recognized. True it is that humanity prompts every sailor to go to the aid of a shipwrecked mariner; and it is just as true that patriotism led you to volunteer to save the union, but the law awards, all the same, to the brave crew who peril their lives for the rescue of a sinking ship in midocean a large share of her value and of the worth of her cargo. This is 'salvage.' You found our ship of state in danger. was drifting to destruction; the winds of rebellion howled; the tempest of secession broke over her; she was sinking; you and your comrades came to her res cue; you saved her with all her precious cargo of untold value to the American people now and for coming generations. Who shall estimate the 'salvage' carned by the men who saved the republic? It is yours, and until the sun goes down over the grave of the last one of you, my comrades, never give your suffrages to any man for a post of honor and power who is not the friend of the soldiers who saved the union, and who does not ac cept our pension laws as the expression of the public sentiment of this country. and who does not recognize in them the established policy of the government.

Houd and prolonged applause. I Following is the note referred to. It is written at the bottom of the printer's proof, bearing General Sickles' own marks of correction:

"Note-I have written out the above report of my recent speech in Washington, in compliance with the request of many comrades, because it have attracted an unlooked for amount of attention. Among the criticisms made there is only one I care to notice. It has been suggested by those who have been misted by inaccurate reports attributing to me much that I did not say, that it was improper to discuss the mer its of rival presidential candidates at a Grand Army meeting. My answer is I did not address a Grand Army of the Republic meeting; nor did I discuss presidential candidates. I addressed a meeting of veterans of the Third army My speech was a plain, unpro meditated talk to my soldiers about matters that concerned them. They usually allow me to say what I choose They were satisfied, and so am I. "D. E. Sickles."

SECRETS OF THE PERFUMERS' ART How the Manufacturer Gets Hints from Nature and Beats Her.

As may be said of many other indusries, secrecy characteriz he manufacture of perfume. In many instances the heads of the firms, it is said by the New York Herald, themselves clandestinely prepare the principal parts of their compounds. This has resulted rather disastrously. The few really good compounders in this country have been unable to furnish a sufficient supply to meet the demand, and many tenders have entered the field. In this way the American article has come to be looked upon with distrust and the French brand has the call.

Take the delicate beliotrope for instance. It gives a fragrance resembling the aroma of vanilla combined with the sharper scent of the bitter almond. The heliotrope itself is both scarce and unprofitable to the maker of perfumes, while the two latter substances are easily obtainable. Taking advantage of the idea suggested the manufacturer adds to vanilla tincture a small portion of bitter almond attar, and sufficient rose and orange flower essence to give sweetness and a floral character to the compound, and thus easily makes what is really an excellent "extract of helio-

Sweetbriar is also a fashionable and much sought for odor. The perfume of the sweetbriar itself is so fleeting, that no means yet devise I can isolate or other flowers modified it, and a dash of verbena created the artificial essence. But inventive art reaches still further. It creates perfumes by compounding odors which are unknown in nature. Almost everybody is acquainted with "Jockey Club," "West End," "Mousse-"Millefleurs" and many other line," scents. Yet none of them has a counterterpart in the flower gardenor the spice grove. The most pleasing perfumes are those that are distilled from the living flowers or the flower essences. But the public demands at the same time that they shall be lasting. These two conditions will not mix naturally, and the manufacturer finds himself compelled to get the lasting quality artificially. accomplishes with musk. In fact, musk is one of the most essential as well as most costly materials used in the manufacture of perfumery, and could not well be dispeased with. It must be used sparingly, however, as it has powerful medicinal properties. Too much of i will induce headache and cause nervous prostration. Musk is a secretion derived from an mimal-the musk deer. This secretion is anything but pleasant to smell in its crude state. It is impossible to associate ich a foul odor with the fragrant smell of distilled perfume. But it is only one of the many peculiarities of nature.

Another expensive ingredient needed in the manufacture of performe is attar of roses. It comes in copper canteen which hold about twenty ounces. They are valued at $100 apiece. Ac cording to Hindoo tradition the attar was discovered by a princess of that country who, while waiking in her garden, through which ran a canal of rose water, observed some oily particles floating upon the surface. These drops were collected and found to possess se delightful an odor that means were de vised to procure supplies of the precious liquid. The present supply of attar is chiefly derived from a small tract of country on the southern side of the Balkan moun tains, in the Turkish province of Rou-melia. The principal seat of the trade is the town of Kizanlik, and the damask rose is the flower grown. The pensants plant it in rows in gardens and fields During the month of May the flowers are gathered by boys and girls in sacks and close baskets. The flowers are daily distilled that they may lose none of their odor by delay. It is said that about 7,500 pounds of flowers are required to produce two and one-quarter pounds of pure attar. It is doubtful, however, if any of the absolutely pure article ever leaves the Turkish ports. Its high cost offers such strong inducements for adulteration that little or none passes the hands of the dealers without an admixture of some les roostly liquid. The number of handkerchief essences in the market is almost unlimited. Some of them enjoy the distinction of being famous, while others are comparatively unknown. The Ylang Ylang extracts are credited with being the sweetest and most delicious of all perfumes The Millefleurs bouquot is a delicate and favorite mixture which has long been highly popular. Mousseline water is quaint and very recherche. It was suggested by the peculiar odor of In-dian muslins which attracted so much attention on their first appearance in

The extract of new mown hay, or, as its French prototype was called, the bouquet of the field," has always been a favorite with lovers of the pastoral. Its body is tormed of tonka tineture that gives a good imitation of the scent
