

NEBRASKA MANUFACTURING

Factories That Are Seeking for Locations in Larger Cities.

MIGHT BE EASILY BROUGHT TO OMAHA

The Need of Some United Effort Looking Toward the Location of Eastern Manufacturing Plants in Omaha.

General Factory News.

Almost every day word is received that this or that manufacturing establishment is seeking a new location. These factories are for the most part institutions that are located in some state a little east of Nebraska. They now find themselves fixed in some small town which has ceased to grow while the centers of distribution have moved away from them.

A prominent local manufacturer commenting on this subject remarked that if there were some organized plan to assist in the removal of such factories Omaha could easily secure a number of them. The speaker stated that he would add several thousand to the city's population. The speaker expressed himself as opposed to the bonus system of awarding such a sum to the city.

W. O. Taylor, manager of Bradstreet's, says that if there were a number of such factories west of it has left it sidetracked in a small town and it is only a question of time when it will be moved.

The Robinson & Stokes company are preparing to enlarge their plant by the addition of a boiler house. They will at the same time put in another boiler house, and will materially to their steam power.

The Omaha box factory will soon have a new 125-horsepower boiler to take the place of the sixty-horsepower boiler that they have been using.
