BRIEF SKETCH OF A BRAVE SOLDIER

Fighting Record of the Commander of the Columbian Guards-Death of General R. H. Jackson-A War Relic-Formal-Ities Dispensed With.

About the saddest thing I ever encountered was a pathetic little incident on the battlefield after the siege of Atlanta, said Major William R. Hodges to the Globe-Democrat man. It was night and I had been ordered to go out and work on a casement near the enemy's lines. They knew we were there for they kept up a continuous ping, ping, ping of minie balls, now and then warying the amusement by sending a hot ten-pounder, scorching the ground and playing havoc with the bushes unpleasantly close to our cais. As I was running about, suddenly one of our boys rushed up and said, "There's a dying man wants to see you, captain. You'd better come quick for he's got a hole through his head."

I hastened in the direction he indicated and soon found the poor fellow. He was being propped up by a corporal, but by the way he acted and talked I knew he was settled for.

"They've got me this time, captain," he said slowly, the blood choking him as he spoke.

He'd been wounded a couple of times before, and was a brave man and a good one, too. I said what I could in the line of sympathy telling him that it was the fate of war, and that all his old comrades would follow him sooner or later. It was only a matter of a few days, anyhow.

"I want you to do me a favor, captain," he said, the death sweat on his forchead shining like beads in the fitful gleam of a candle we had lighted.

"Of course I'll do it, my boy," I said. "There's my knapsack and canteen," he choked pitifully; "take them or send them to my poor old father and mother up in Vermont. Tell 'em that their only son died like a soldier on the field of battle. Tell them that I died thinking of them; and-and-and there's another matter, another ---- "

Here a stream of blood gushed from his lips, and his eyes took on a look of horror that almost frightened me.

"Another matter," he gasped, "an-other matter. Reach down in my blouse and get a picture that is there. I did as directed and saw in the faint light that the card bore the face of a young woman. "It's-it's the girl I was going marry!" sobbed the dying man. "Tell her that-that I died with my lips on hers! Put the picture to my lips, Captain, that I may-m y kiss it?" He kissed the senseless cardboard over and over again, and though I turned my face reverently away caught a glimpse of the love-lit eyes that told his devotion. As he caressed the likeness for the last time the ambulance drove up and he was tenderly oaded in for the hospital, where his iast moments might be at any rate a jittle less painful than on the rough r ock-strewn battle ground.

The first chance I got I sent that knnp-sack and that sweet face to the ones loved the soldier. That isn't of the story. Just before the baitle of Altoona, and after General Hood swung round to Grant's rear, I was riding along a very dusty road with my company. Suddenly I saw a spectacle bafore me that nearly knocked me off my horse. There, in the middle of the road with his arms waving wildly toward me, was that samedying soldier. His head was bandaged up, and when he spoke his voice was much impeded. "I've got a furlough," he said, trying to grin good naturealy, but failing because of the bandages round his face. "I've got a furlough, and I'm going home to marry that girl." And he did.

leading "man in blue" who penetrated and fell within Pickett's advance, After Gettysburg he served to the end of the war, passing through the terribl battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and Ream's Station without serious in-jury, although ever in the vaan of the light. He narticipated in the last fusi-lade of the war-so far as the army of the Potomac was concerned-at Appo-mattox. When the conflict closed, he was assigned to the famous Fifth United States infantry, and bore a gallant part in the constant Indian warfare in which that splendid regiment was engaged. He was the first officer of the United States army who successfully used the Hotchkiss rifled cannon against Indians, having brought his battery into action after a galiop of fifteen miles over a rather difficult country, against Sitting Bull and Spotted Eagle's Indian war party at Milk River fight, Montana, July 17, 1879. He trained his guns so accurately that, at the second discharge, the unaccustomed savages, frightened by the exploding shells, broke and ran in mad panic toward the shelter of the Canadian line, leaving behind them a large quantity of provisions and other material, as well as many dead ponies. Some of the Indians, including Little Assino-boine, since killed, with Sitting Buil, during the ghost dance troubles of 1890, were wounded by fragments of the mis-siles, and this caused the stampedo.

They could stand londen bullets well enough, but iron blown to fragments in their midst was too much for their untutored courage. Colonel Rice is a tall, finely propor-tioned, decidedly handsome man, still in the prime of life, although military hardship has grizzled his mustache and worn bare his temples and his forehead. It is no wonder that, under the command of this veritable hero, the Columbian guards should be a model mili tary corps.

Colonel John L. Burleigh, who served in the Army of the Potomac, and who is said to be the youngest commissioned officer in the service of the union, was introduced to Colonel John S. Chiles, who fought for the south in Forest's cavalry. Reminiscences were in order immediately, says the Brooklyn Eagle. "I was at a Grand Army reunion the other evening," said Colonel Bur-leigh, "and a man who was a private in my company and whom had not seen since the war heard me called by name. 'Is that Burleigh that was captain of my company?' he asked. He was assured that I was the man in question. 'I swore that if I caught him after the war was over I would give him the most all-fired licking he ever got in his life.' 'Well, go in and do it,' said one of his companions. 'No, I guess not, I'm getting a little bit old now, and Lord! how he has grown. When I last saw him he was a little slip of a fellow only about five feet high, weighing 110 pounds. I guess I'll let him off.' Then Colonel Burleigh told about an encounter he had with a southern woman who had just routed the major of his regiment who had approached her house with a petition for food. "Why, sonny," she said, "you ought to be with your mamma. (The young officer tearfully agreed with her.) Give you a meal? Of course I will, and you can bring that sneaking Yankee major with you, too." A very bountiful meal of cornoread, bacon, chicken, potatoes and other dainties was soon spread and partaken of. Then the northerners pulled out greenbacks and asked to be allowed to pay for the meal.

"Ne," said the woman, "we don't take money for food here. Besides, we take money for food here. Besides, we don't call that green stuff money here; we burn it." "And that was true," said Colonel Burleigh; "the north made tons and tons of money by the southerners' burn-ing currency issued from our treasure. ing currency issued from our treasury. They were so sure it would never be redeemed. Colonel Burleigh's story reminded Colonel Chiles of a morning when General Magruder awoke and going up a hill saw a white house in the distance. He sent an aide to ask the mistress of the house if she would oblige him with a meal for himself and staff. "While the woman, who was a southern sympathizer, was preparing the meal a private of a Virginia regiment came along and asked for food," continued Colonel Chiles. "He was informed that the meal was being prepared for the general and his 'If there's anything for you after staff. they finish you are welcome to it,' said the hostess. The Virginian, who was a man of good family, waited humbly till the expected guests arrived and then crowded in beside the general and began to eat. Magruder turned to him a little sharply and said: 'Do you know with whom you are eating, sir?' 'No,' said the private, 'I dou't. Before the war, sir, I was very careful with whom I associated, but now I don't give a maintained the price it closed at yesterday although averaging above that during most of the session. Corn was in good demand and closed bic higher.

THE SPECULATIVE MARKETS Wheat Yesterday Only Maintained the Price it Closed at Friday. CORN WAS FIRMER ON IOWA'S REPORT

Provisions were in a small way again egged on by the elique. Wheat opened at a moderate advance on better cables and the liberal exports. There were good buying orders on the market with very light offerings. But the better prices started selling, and the big receipts in the northwest and Bradstreet's report of the available supply-17,000,000 bu,-more than ever known before, were depressing factors. Fluctuations were confined within %c range. Corn was firmer, the Iowa report showing only a 173,800,000 'bushel crop this year, against 350,000,000 bushel last year. Prime's report, saying that there was disappointment nearly everywhere over the husking and the moderate receipts and poor inspection, were all strong factors. Shorts were good buyers from the start and there was good speculative from the start and there was good speculative buying with seliers scarce. The buying ap-peared to be led by houses supposed to be act-ing for the provision interest. The market opened at a fractional advance and sold up with little reactions from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$, eased off from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$, ruled firm and closed within from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$, in sympathy with other grain and closed steady. Provisions were tance at a light advance. Compared with yesterday prices are up 5c to 10c all 'round. Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 150 cars; corn, 150 cars; oats, 140 cars; hogs, 35,000 head. The leading futures ranged as follows:

The situation is rather strained. Present comparatively high prices are the result directly of short supplies and indirectly of speculation in hog products. Should there be a big run of hogs and the schemes of speculators miscarry there is no telling where prices would go. On the other hand the shortage may be more serions than generally anticipated, in which case the pres-ent high prices would seem how. One thing is certain, farmers are well satisfied with present prices and are running in all kinds of hogs, pigs, brood sows and all to receive the benefit of them.

certain, furmers are well satisfied with present prices and are running in all kinds of hogs, pigs, brood sows and all to receive the benefit of them. The supply today was fully as good as last Saturday as to numbers, but the offerings were decidedly common. Business was brisk, but it was difficult to compare the market intelli-gently with Friday's uneven trade. The range was pretty much the same, very com-mon light and mixed to choice heavy hogs selling at from $5.80 to $6.10. The popular price was $6.00 and it was practically at $5.55 to $6.00 for fair to good hogs of all weights. Many people think of Rheumatism as a tenacious and torturing disease, but one not necessarily dangerous to human life ; yet fatal tendencies are always in the blood and organs of those who have any form of Rheumatism, Sciatica or Neuralgia. Really, these are among the most dangerous of diseases. They often strike at the heart as swiftly and fatally as serpent's fang or lightning's stroke.

PROF. THEODORE W. DWIGHT, founder of the Law School of Columbia College, New York, and one of America's most learned lawyers, died suddenly in Clinton, N.Y., June 29, 1892. He went to Clinton from New York about two weeks before, suffering from theumatic difficulty. His complaint developed into an affection of the heart. The best medical treatment was proided, but he failed rapidly and died suddenly.

EX-SENATOR KERNAN, of New York, the "Sage of Utica," the only man who defeated Roscoe Conkling at the polls, and who was defeated for Governor of New York State on account of his religion (Mr. Kernan was a Roman Catholic), died suddenly in Utica, Sept. 17, 1892. He had been confined to his home for three months with rheumatism, was supposed to be recovering, but was seized with a chill and died without regaining consciousness.

The world at large hears the details of the deaths of great men, but how few, except within the small circle of acquaintance of the "common people," know of the thousands of such cases among the masses. They are occurring every hour somewhere, and all who are afflicted with rhoumatism, solatica or neuralgia are in the same peril as were the two eminent men named above. For all thus afflicted and in similar danger there is ready to hand the strictly scientific, long-

Illstory of a Fight.

The stalwart soldier who commands the Columbian guards at the World's fair grounds has a military record of which the highest of our generals might well be proud. He holds only the rank of lieutenant colonel, although he is credited with having done as much to turn the tide of rebel victory into the ebb of defeat on the third and final day of Gettysburg as any man who stood in the union ranks on that bloody and really decisive field. Colonel Rice began his active military career at the age of 19 as captain of the Fourteenth Massachusetts regiment April 27, 1861. He held the same rank successively in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Massachusetts volunteers, and was engaged in the battle of Ball's Bluffs, Peninsular campaign, battle of Marion Mills, siege of York-town, battles of West Point, Fair Oaks, Oak Grove, Peach Orchard, Allen's Farm, Savage Station, White Oak Swamp, Glendall (commanding regi-ment), Mulvern Hill, second Malvern Hill, Bull Run, Fairfax Court House, South Mountain and Antietam, where he was severely wounded. After recovery he was promoted major of the Nineteenth Massachusetts volunteers. He was engaged in the second attack on Fredericksburg and the action at Thoroughfare gap.

The War department testified that the conspicuous gallantry of Major Edmund Rice of the Nineteenth Massachusetts volunteer infantry at the third day's battle of Gettysburg, where he was severely wounded, did more than the single exertion of any other officer on our side to retrieve the day, after the battle had been virtually won by confederates who had broken our lines, and were cheering and swinging their hats on our captured guns.

After the line was broken the Nine-teenth dashed in and placed themselves in the rear of the break, and for twelve minutes received the enemy's fire, at a distance of less than fifteen paces. In that time one man in every two of the whole regiment, and seven over, fell, including Rice, who was shot in front of his men, with his foot on the body of a fallen confederate, he being at that moment the officer fighting nearest the enemy in our whole line. He fought till he fell; his men fought till they fell. His example held them firm at a great crisis in the country's history. Ho held Pickett's heavy column in check with the single thin line of his regi-ment till reinforcements came from right and left and thus saved the day, To the daring leadership and magnifi-cent courage of Lieutenant Colonel Rice in that crisis much credit is due for the great success of the movement. With the crylof "Follow me, boys!" he dashed forward into the advance of the enemy, fighting with indomitable courage, and fell desperately wounded inside the lines of the enemy, without doubt the

THAT AWFUL TOBOGGAN.

Thrilling Description of a First Ride on It

Among the Canucks.

A queer-looking contrivance, with a snuo nose, and almost as flat as you are, is placed in position. It is a toboggan, and it hath a devil. In obedience to directions, says a writer in Outing, you squat down on its long, flat cushion and tuck in your fect. Others get on be-hind; a voice exclaims, "Hold on tight!" and you are a dead man! You give one mighty, convulsive gasp and contraction of the muscles, like a man shocked by electricity; some evil-minded brute hit you over the head with a club and made you see myriads of stars, and you fell off the fool toboggan and are whizzing down from that dizzy height. Half way you struck a stake which pierced your chest and drove its point up into the roof of your mouth; somebody tried to save you and tore away half your whiskers, an entire ear and your slik tile-and your falling still, alling to a shattering doom.

That's all right; the imaginary stake is only your heart trying to get out of your mouth; you have lost you tile and one earmuff temporarily, and the zeph-yrs sough a bit freely through your hirsute appendages, but those Canuck savages don't want to kill you and are only laughing cheerfully. You have fallen 10,000 feet now, and the final crash must be close at hand. Whiz-izz-whiz! You gradually become conscious of an amazing, birdlike forward flight; the sparks pale from your frightened eyes; your halted blood surges wildly through your veins and you feel a sensation of glorious exultation. You have escaped.

Your hat is recovered for you, with your lost earmuff; you manage to close your mouth again; somebody asks you what you think of it and you answer vaguely, "Fuff-fuff-fine."

Chicago Live Stock Market. Chicago Live Stock Market. CHICAGO, III., Dec. 10.—(Special Telegram to THE BEE.)—The cattle market was quiet to-day and prices were without important change. Only about 1,500 cattle arrived at the yards and they were bought up early at full prices. The offerings consisted principally of butchers' and canners' stock, and prices ranging downward from $3.50, which took most of it. Quotations were from $1 to $3.25 for inferior to extra cows, helfers and buils, $1.75 to $3.25 for stockers and feed-ers, $2.90 to $6.00 for common to extra dressed beef and shipping steers, and from $1.50 to $5.50 for calves. Sales of hogs were made to somewhat better advantage than at the close of yesterday's market. Receipts were small estimated at 12,000, and they were soon out of sellers limits at from $6.00 to $6.45 for common to choice medium and heavy, and at from $3.60 to $6.10 for poor to prime light. Trading was largely at from $6.00 to $6.35 for the former, while from $5.90 to $6.10 took the builk of the light. The demand was good at from $3.00 to $5.25 for poor to choice trades of sheep. Culls and poor stuff sold anywhere from $1.50 to $2.75. There was a strong market for lambs at from $3.75 to $6.00 for poor to choice. Fancy were quoted as high as $6.25.
