QUALITIES NECESSARY.

The first decideratum in a typewriter is that it shall do good work at the highest practicable speed.

It must be constructed of such materials and in such a manner that it will continue to do zood and rapid work for a sufficient length of time to make it a profitable investment. do rood and rapid work for a sufficient length of time to make it a profitable investment.

It must operate so easily that it may be run a full day without excessive fatigue.

It must be simple in construction and not limble to temporary derangement.

Its operation must be easily cleaned and require as few motions as possible.

Its type must be easily cleaned. As good work is impossible when the type is filled or gummed with ink.

Its ribbon, if it has one, must have a reliable feeding mechanism which will bring the whole surface of the ribbon in contact with the type with as little attention as possible.

The above are ESSENTIALS, and the machine which EXCELS in these particulars is the SMITH PREMICE.

SAPOLIO

Dr. SYDNEY RINGER, Professor of Medicine at University College, London, Author of the Standard "Handbook of Therapeutics," actually writes as follows: "From the careful analyses of Prof. ATTRIED and others, I am satisfied that VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA is in no way injurious to health, and that it is decidedly more nutritious than other Cocoas.—It is certainly "Pure" and highly digestible.—The quotations in certain advertisements (from Trade rivals) from my book on Therapeutics are quite misleading, and cannot possibly apply to Van Houten's Cocoa."

The false reflection on Van Houten's Cocoa is thus effectually repelled, and the very authority cited to injure it, is thereby prompted to give it a very handsome testimonial. B it is easy to steal or ring watches from the pocket. The thief gets the watch in one hand, the chain in the other and gives a short, quick jerk-the ring slips off the watch stem, and away goes the watch, leaving the victim only the chain.

This idea stopped that little game: The bow has a groove on each end A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

Panama Canal Swindlers Distributed Money in This Country.

OVER $2,000,000 OF BOODLE EXPENDED

Newspapers and Congressmen Alleged to Have Been Purchased-Row Opposition to Their Schomes in This Country Was Overcome-The Story.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29 .- In a three-column article this morning the World alleges that the Panama canal corruptionists and the thieves expended over $2,000,000 in bribing American editors. In brief, the paper says: There is an American end to the Panama canal scandal. Two million five hundred thousand dollars were sent to this country and no explanation has been given of what use was made of the vast sum. Bribery and corruption practiced in the United States was just as flagrant although less in extent and in the amount of money used. The French speculators obtained concessions from the United States of Colombia, and purchased the services of Ferdinand de Lesseps to give their scheme eclat. The farce of a "canal congress," which met at Paris on May 15, 1879, was enacted and, in the face of intelligent opposition, a packed committee was appointed on the selection of a Panama route from sea to sea.

General Burnside's Protest

Soon after the Paris canal congress dissolved, General A. E. Burnside, senator from Rhode Island, introduced a resolution on the subject in congress. It read that the United States views with serious disquietude any attempt by the powers of Europe to establish under their protection and domination a ship canal across the isthmus of Panama. General Burnside, in presenting the resolution, indicated that he foresaw that an attempt would be made to influence congress, and he has stated that he introduced the anti-canal notice with the intention of anticipating any corrupting work its promoters might attempt at Washington. No sooner was the Burnside resolution made public in France than there was much discussion in official circles and by the press. The investigating public soon formed the impression that the United States would not tolerate a canal built by French-

The remembrance of the occupation of Mexico by Napoleon III., and of the prompt withdrawal of the French troops in response to the request of Mr. Seward, a request that was made after an order for the concentration of 100,000 seasoned veterans of the union army in Texas was issued, was fresh in the minds of the members of the bourse, was much head-shaking, and friends Lesseps advised against the attempt to float the canal project.

After this follows a review of the history of the Panama canal project, including the arrival of M. de Lesseps in the United States, #### and the article continues: Received at the White House.

President Haves received the Frenchman courteously and after listening to the pliments and plausible assertions of the canal promoter patiently responded that "the people of the United States were convinced they must have a prependerating influence over the canal, whoever might President Hayes was stirred by the presence of de Lesseps and hastened to send to the senate a message. A senate resolution of February 11, 1880, called on the president for copies of correspondence bertween the government and foreign countries respecting a ship canal between the two oceans In the message President Hayes thought he had struck a radical blow at the French scheme. He stated that the policy of this country is a canal under American control. The United States cannot consent to the surrender of their control to any European power or to any combination of European powers. If existing treaties between the United States and other nations, and if the rights of sovereignty stand in the way of this policy—a contingency which is not apprehended—suitable steps should be taken to promote and establish the American policy on this subject consistent with the interests The president's message to congress was a staggering shock to de Lesseps and those who had gathered about him. He waved his hands above his head, uttered a series of voluble invectives and then paced the floor endeavoring to comprehend the extent of th assault on his big money-making plans. He was at Washington to produce effects that would quiet the apprehensions of the French investing class that the United States would interpose objections to the prosecution of the work at Panama. No sooner had he reached Washington than the head of the American government issued a proclamation against foreign control of any canal. To think was to act. De Lesseps banked on the confidence his countrymen placed in himself. Among those who accompanied the count to America was his friend M. de Bionne, who afterwards

Turning to M. de Bionne, he quickly said: "Cable Charles [de Lesseps] that I say the message of the president assures the political security of the canal. Direct him to give out to the newspapers my message." The committee on foreign affairs of the The committee on foreign affairs of the house was in session and the day before President Hayes issued his message de Lesseps appeared before them. His good friend, Appleton, engineered the invitation and acted as interpreter for the count, who could speak little or no English. From the first to the last de Lesseps endeavored to mislead the committee.

On July 7, 1880, de Lesseps erganized, in New York, that which he regarded as a master stroke of policy, and called it the Amerian committee. The alleged purpose of this association was to represent the interests of the company in everything that concerns the observance of the neutrality of the canal as defined by article 5 of the law of the concession of the United States of Colombia."

This was to confirm the impression he had created in France that America was friendly as well as to lead the people of the United States to think that the interests of their country were being favorably considered by the canal company. Soon after de Lesseps returned to France he announced that all problems had been solved and difficulties smoothed. The opposi-tion in America, he announced, had been hushed by the formation of a committee with the following agreement: "The American committee shall represent in the United States the interests of the company in everything that concerns the observance of the neutrality of the canal, and, moreover, the committee shall represent the company in any other matters for which the company may request co-operation, not only during construction, but during the working of the canal."

Cost Lots of Money. The American committee was not disposed to work for nothing, and de Lesseps agreed to make, when the company was organized six annual payments to his American com-mittee. The first payment was 3,100,000 francs. A year following, a payment of 1,400,000 francs was to be made, and subsequent payments of 1,500,000 francs a year for five years. Thit was that about $2,500,000 was provided the head of the Panama canal scheme to influence the people of the United States and their government. Here was a convuption fund that was capable of accomplishing great results. The organization of the com-mittee was negotiated by New York bankers. The purpose was to secure for chairman a distinguished American, whose name would inspire confidence and lend luster to the Panama canal project.

The first chairman suggested was General U. S. Grana. The position was tendered the distinguished citizen through the banking house of G. W. Seligman & Co., the annual compensation offered being $205,000, and the general was assured that the duties would be light. The general saw through the in-tentions of the committee. A friend of Gen-eral Grant informed the writer that in the course of a conversation on the subject the general said he was not satisfied with some things which he had seen and heard and did not view favorably the work done in Wash-ington by some of those who were associated with the committee.

Continuing the article says that certain public officials in the American committee received $15,000 for their services.

Bought a Newspaper.

The corruption which followed the organization of the American committee and the income of the hard-carned money of the French subscribers to the canal company are still fondly remembered at Washington by some of those who received some of the boodle. A certain newspaper in New York received a liberal newspaper in New York received a liberal subside to favor the canal. received a liberal subsidy to favor the canal.
Two congressmen were bribed, and the money of the French peasantry ran like water at the national capital. An article in the Financial News of London described the situation as follows:

"The American syndicate is one of the most shameful corruption funds ever recorded in the history of financial enterprises. Imagine the expenditure of $489,000 so that a few men in New York might represent the company in America and co-operate with it when requested. To that fund is due the success which attended M. do Lesseps' invitation to the then secretary of the navy of the United States to accept the the navy of the United States to accept the presidency of the syndicate, and no respectable banker should ever have participated in that costly fraud upon the shareholders of the Panama Canal company. These men are challenged to show that they ever did anything for the company, except to lend their names, so that in Europe M. de Lesseps might say that 'America was all right.'"

The attitude of congress was decidedly unfriendly when the committee was formed and the press quite generally was then adverse to the canal under French control. Then congress adjourned. When de Lesseps returned to France, he announced that the United States favored his project. He claimed that he had refuted all scientific objections to the Panama plan and that the Americans have now recognized that the my trip to the United States." English Press Comment.
