PRINCETON BOYS OWN THE METROPOLIS

The Youngsters Usurp the Places of Their Elders and Have a High Old Time-What the Swells Found to Entertain Them.

"The mistletoe hung in the castle hall.
The holly branch shone on the old oak wall,
The baron's retainers were blithe and gay.
Keeping their Christmas holiday."

Everywhere this old song found an echo during the past week and if internal appearances amount to anything it was the happlest, merriest Christmas for many of the swells of Omaha, to say nothing of that great middle class which is the bone and sinew of the country, who enjoy Christmas and every other holiday with genuine enthuslasm and who really make it what it is. And the poor, "who are always with you," it is hoped they too came in for the real old fashioned cheer of the Christmas tide, and that they are richer by many fold for the warm sympathy shown them by acts of kind ness by those who through the whirliging of time are better off in this world's goods. It was a real old-fashioned Christmas, there was lots of snow and Santa Claus found snow covered roofs all the way to cloudland over which to drive his team of

And the children-well they have owned the week and Tue Bee with perfect impartiality so chronicles it in these columns.

The long anticipated visit from the Prince ton boys is a memory very sweet and very tender. They caught the town with their rollicking choruses and glees, part songs and soles, while the mandolins and banjos thrummed their way into the hearts of a score or more of our ownest own fair maids. The alumnus of '43 grew moist about the eye as he heard the virtues of Miss Nellie who was a lady recited by Mr. Harding, sweet-voiced tenor, and he lived over his college days through the golden strings struck to the tune of "Old Nassau."

"Let music rule the fleeting hour Her mantle round us draw; And thrill each heart with all her power In praise of Old Nassau."

It is wonderful how these old-time songs carried the college men back to palmy days. No matter in how straightened circumstan ces was the alma mater, he loved it then and he loves it still. It needed only the songs of college days to rekindle the love for the college days to rekindle the love for the school from whence his early education was obtained. Daniel Webster reflected this sentiment most strongly in his famous appeal for Dartmouth college in the supreme court of the United States. "With tear-dimmed eye and faltering voice he turned to the chief justice," so his biographer says, "and said: "Sir it is a small college—and yet—there are those who love it."

there are those who love it."

The "Orange and Black" gave the collegians an opportunity to tell the deeds of Princeton and incidentally indulge in just a bit of sentiment which ran in this wise:

When cares of life o'ertake us

"When cares of life o'ertake us,
Mingling fast our locks with gray.
Should our dearest hopes betray us,
False fortunes fall away.
Still we banish care and sadness,
As we turn our memories back.
And recall those days of gladness,
'Neath the Orange and the Black."

And the Creole Love Song' sent the girls away dreaming of moonlit nights, the southland and the painette and the pine. land and the palmetto and the pine.

The reception at Happy Hollow was very enjoyable, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. H. Patrick leaving nothing undone to give the young taste of western thospi men a genuine at one of the prettiest country place tality at one of the prettiest country places in this section and to meet the young men were: Mrs. Lewis Reed, Mrs. Yates, Mrs. Hull, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith, Miss White, Mrs. Ludington, Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. Cowin, Mr. Augustus Kountze, Mr. Paul Ludington, the Misses Wakeley, Emily Wakeley, Doane, Curtis, Balcombe, Mahel Balcombe, Kountze Basa Gestrude Mabel Balcombe, Kountze, Boss, Gertrude Kountze, Johnson, Lemon Lowe, Wilhelmina Lowe, Hughes, Ethel Mills, Sherwood, Mary Brown, Burns, Lozier, Wallace, Grace Hime-Yates, Bessie Yates, May Wallace Gentie Yates.

could it have been otherwise with fifty additional men to dance upon the capricous smiles of that meny fair women?

The girls had on their war paint, and never has there been a more brilliant ball than that given at the Millard Thursday night. There were many new and beautiful gowns seen, and quite a few strangers, besides the collegians, to add interest. The supper was excellent and everywhere the orange and black floated to the joy of the "tigers" at least, if a little glaring at times as the color scheme unfolded.

Mrs. Joy Morton of Chicago was exquisitely gowned in a lovely shade of heliotrope brocade, with wide revers of a darker shade trimmed with sable.

Miss Edith Mills of Des Moines, a dashing girl and a big favorite in the Hawkeye capital, was wholly in red, which became her

Mrs. Boyd of St. Paul wore a brocaded silk of pink and white stripes, finished in Duchesse lace. Miss Ijams of Chicago was regal in beautiful wine-colored velvet and satin. Miss Boss was in white silk made empire

But it's all over! The royal Bengal tiger has been taken back to his lair in front of the fur store and the "tigers" will soon be back in classic halls able to scan 296 lines of Ovid while you wait. But it was jolly while it lasted, only it didn't last long enough.

For Their Children.

The young folks, God bless them, have not permitted the grass to grow under their feet during the past seven days, and with the round of parties, dances and dinners which have fallen to their lot the past week it would not take very long to bring care and crows' feet to their faces. But beauty must sleep and the youngsters have been tucked between sheets long after sun up and indulgent parents have even permitted 10 o'clock around before summoning them be-

Swells Appear in Theatricals. How delightful it would be if the ladies and gentlemen who appeared so successfully Monday evening at the residence of Hon.

George W. Donne in private theatricals would extend their sphere and permit a larger circle to see and admire their really admirable work. Omaha needs an amateur dramatic association and this could easily be made the nucleus for a larger and more var organization which could a class of bright society edies now impossible because of limited numbers. There are a number of really clever amateurs in the social life of the city. and these should be brought together under ægis of some association, and should give one or more plays a year for "sweet charity." A pleasant divertisement of the Lenten nights would be the formation of such an organization, and rehearsals commenced, the play to be given after Easter.

Monday evening Miss Doane had the per formance in charge, and the arrangement of the parlors, the guests occupying the front parlor, allowing for fine stage effect in the rear parlor, which was handsomely set by means of curtains, and there were real lights, the whole being particularly well planned.

"My Uncle's Will," was the first play presented, with Mr. Arthur Wakeley as Mr.

Barker, Mr. Crofoot as Charles Cashmere and Miss Mabel Balcombe as Miss Florence and Miss Madel Balcombe as Miss Florence Marigold. The playing was capital, Mr. Crofoot particularly winning golden opinions as a lover. "The Mouse Trap," arranged by Mrs. Burton Harrison, and a fine bit of dramatic acting, terminated the evening. dramatic acting, terminated the evening;

Julia 444 Marlowe

The distinguished exponent of the Leading Female roles of the American stage, and a company including

MR. ROBERT TABER.

By special request Miss Marlowe will appear in the character of JULIA in Sheridan Knowles' great play.

THE HUNCHBACK.

"Perhaps the reason Julia is regarded as Miss Marlowe's best character is due to the fact that in it they find her possessed of strength and other qualities which are not in evidence in the purely ideal creatures. Be that as it may, her strength, dramatic intensity and genuine pathos, surprising to a degree."-Crifficism of Miss Marlowe in "The Hunchback" in the Kansas City Journal, Wednesday, December 28, 1892.

"Miss Marlowe's gift is not in this character or that not in some particular spirituality or some given passion, but in the natural, flowerlike fragrance of the human feminine which she diffuses in whatever she appears. Art could not teach it for it could not own the mastery of consciousness. Nature's voice is speaking through an actress' feeling. Last night the play was Knowle's "Hunchback" and Miss Marlowe's Julia will be remembered as the finest."-Criticism of Miss Marlowe's performance in "The Hunchback," in the Kansas City Times, December 28, 1892.
