other batch of war-time correspondence tetween the Sherman brothers-General W. T. and Senator John Sherman. Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant Regarding the question of surprise at Shiloh, the general wrote:

Headquarters, Camp Shinon, April 22, 1862.—Dear Brother: My hand is still verr sore, but I am able to write some. The newspapers came back to us with accounts of ou battle of the 6th and 7th inst., as usual made by people who ran away and had to excuse their cowardice by charging bad management on the part of leaders. I see that we were surprised, that our men were bayoneted in their tents, that officers had not had breakfast, etc. This is all simply false. The attack did not begin until 7.45 a. m. All but the worthless cowards had had breakfast. Not a man was bayoneted in or near his tent. Indeed our brigade surgeon, Hartshorn, has not yet seen a single bayonet wound on a living or dead subject. The regiments that professed to have been surprised lost no officers at all, and of the two that first broke in my division, the Fifty-third and Fifty-seventh Onio, the Fifty-third lost no officers, and only seven men, the Fifty-seventh, two officers and seven men. Some of my Ohio regiments that did fight well lost as many as forty-nine and thirty-four, but not a bayonet, sword, or knife wound, all cannon and musket ball. Those of my brigade held our original position from 7:45 a. m., when the attack began until 10:10 a. m., when the enemy had passed my left and got artillery to enillade my line, when I ordered them to fall back. We held our second posi-tion until 4, p. m., and then fell back with-out opposition to the third and last position, more than a mile from the river.

As to surprise, we had constant skirmishes with the enemy's cavalry all the week before, and I had strong guards out in front of each brigade, which guards were driven in on the morning of the battle, but before the enemy came within cannon-rarge of my posi-tion every regiment was under arms at the post I had previously assigned to them. The cavalry was saddled and artillery harnessed up, unlimbered, and commenced firing as soon as we could see anything to fire at.

The enemy did not carry either of my roads until he had driven Prentiss and got in on my left. * * * Whether we should have been on this or that side of the Tennessee river is not my business. I did not apprehend an attack from Beauregard, because I thought then and think now he would have done better if he could have chosen ground as far back from our stores as possible. We are bound to atour stores as possible. We are bound to attack him, and had we run out of cartridges or stores or got stampeded twenty miles back from the Tennessee the result would have been different from now. But we knew the enemy was in our front, but in what form we could not tell, and I was always ready for an attack. I am out of all patience that our people should prefer to believe the horrid stories of buttery, ridiculous in horrid stories of butchery, ridiculous in themselves, gotten up by cowards to cover their shame, than the plain natural reports of the officers who are responsible, and who saw what they describe. My report, with all the subordinate reports of brigadiers and colonels, with lists of killed and wounded and missing, went to General Grant on the

The enemy is still in our front; we can get a fight the hour and minute we want it. Halleck, Buell, Grant, all in authority are now here and responsibility cannot be shifted. The common soldiers and subordinates ran away, and now want to blame the command-ers. Your affectionate brother, W. T. Sherman.

In the two following the general gives credit to whom credit is due: WALNUT HILLS, VICKSBURG, May 29, 1863.— The move by way of Grand Gulf to secure a foothold on the hills wherefrom to assail Vicksburg appeared to me too risky at the time and General Grant is entitled to all the merit of its conception and execution. **

[Not signed.] Jackson, Miss., July 19, 1863.—My Dear Brother: The fall of Vicksburg and conse-quent capitulation of Port Hudson, the open-ing the navigation of the Mississippi, and the driving out of this great valley the only strong army that threatened us, complete as pretty a page in the history of war and of our country as ever you could ask my name to be identified with. The snare I have personally borne in all these events is one in which you may take pride for me. You know I have avoided notoricty, and the press, my standard enemy, may strip me of all popular applause, but not a soldier of the Army of the Tennessee but knows the part I have borne in this great drama, and the day will come when that army will speak in a voice that cannot be drowned.

In the events resulting thus the guiding minds and hands were Grant's, Sherman's and McPherson's, all natives of Ohio. * * Your brother, W. T. Sherman.

Colonel John P. Nicholson, secretary of the commission appointed to provide for the erection of monuments to Generals Meade, Raymond and Hancock on the field of Gettysburg, has made an interesting report to the governor of the progress of their work. With so competent and painstaking an executive officer as Colonel Nicholson, says the Philadelphia Times, the public will not be surprised that two months time has been devoted to traveling nearly 7,000 miles for the inspection of prominent monuments throughout the country. is the desire of the state to have the best monuments erected to the distinguished Pennsylvania generals who are inseparably connected with the memorable field of Gettysburg, and the efforts made by the commission to acquire the best possible information on the subject gives assurance that the responsible task will be well performed. The appropriation made for the three monuments was $100,000, and only one of the three has already been contracted for by the commission. That is an equestrian statute of General Hancock to be furnished by Frank Edwin Elwell at the cost of $22,000 completed and placed upon the pedestal, and the entire contract to be fulfilled within two years from the first of January next. expected that during the coming year the contract will be executed for the Mende and that will be followed by one of Reynolds. Some idea of the labor of the commission may be formed when it on the subject and written over 5,000.

With each returning year public interest has been quickened in the Gettysburg battlefield. It was the decisive battle of the war; as decisive against the Casar on the plains of Pharsalia for the mastery of R me. Although a generaperate conflict, visitors to Gettysburg increase every year not only from our own people, but from intelligent tourists from every part of the world, and it should be made the most attractive as it is the most historic battlefield of the eral who was prominent in the conflict be represented in the statue, but the south should be permitted to place on Seminary Hill the statue of Lee, and Longstreet and Pickett would appropri-ately adorn a place where Pickett's line was formed for the disastrous charge that reade the bloody angle importal Leaves CHICAGO & NORTH WESTERN Arrives

Won the First Medal of Honor. The proud distinction of having received from the congress of the United States the first medal of honor for "distinguished conduct in the presence of the enemy" was enjoyed oy Captain John G. Merritt, acting assistant doorkeeper of the United Statessenate, whose death from the effects of wounds received in battle occurred in Washington December 17. In General Theodoro F, Roden-baugh's very interesting book appears what has been styled "the picturesque report by Sergeant John G. Merritt of the First Minnesota infantry of the first battle of Bull Run," which closes with a letter written by Hon Alexander Ramsey, secretary of war, transmitting to Merritt the first medal of honor, the inscription upon which reads:

SHROT, JOHN G. MERRETT, Company K. First Minnesota Volunteers.
This medal is awarded to you under provisions of the WarDepartment for gallantry in the battle of Bull Run, in July, 1861, where you were wounded while in advance of How It Became Popular.

When people find an article much superior to anything of the kind they have ever be-fore used, they are almost sure to tell their friends about it, and especially if they know of some friends needing such an article. Dealers also soon learn the true value of their goods, and when they have an article of unusual merit they will almost invariably mention the fact to their customers. This accounts in a great measure for the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Here is an instance: W. L. Needham, a prominent citizen and business man of Orrsburg, Mo., has been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for several years and recommends it to his customers, because in his experience it has proven to be the best for colds, croup and whooping cough. He says it is the most popular medicine that he handles, and gives the best satisfaction. 50 cent bottles for

At no time in the history of the country has pneumonia been so prevalent as during the winter months of the last two years. In times past a common cold was not consid-ered at all serious, but of late years the great tendency of colds to result in pneumo-nia has made people apprehensive. The trouble is that colds are not always properly treated. No preparation containing opium, wild cherry or chloroform should be used, as they have a tendency todry up a cold, whereas it should be loosened and the lungs relieved. It has been observed that when Chambertain's Cough Remedy is used the cold never results in pneumonia. The reason is that this remedy stimulates the mucous membrane which lines the throat and lungs to a healthy action, causes a free expectoration, throwing off the poisonous matter, and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For Executing a Murderer the United States

Will Be Asked to Pay $1,000,000.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Jan. 7.—Charles Peshall has prepared a petition for presentation to the United States government, through the British consulate at Washington, asking for Edward Hallinger, a British subject who was hanged December 22 for the murder of Mary Peterson. Peshall said:
"Hallinger was not even given a chance to speak for himself when brought before Judge Werts and sentenced the last time to be hanged. Another curious thing I have beard is that the official record of Hallinger's acutencing and his execution is scratched and marked. For instance, that portion which recites that the condemned man has been asked whether he had anything to say why the sentence of death should not be pronounced upon him, has been omitted in the corrected record. That fact omitted in the corrected record. That fact bears out my statement that Hallinger was led out like a dog, placed before Judge Werts and sentenced to the gallows without being afforded the opportunity to make a state-ment or protest against the sentence. Such a method of proceedure is contradictory to all law and precedent."

As Cheap as Water. St. Louis, Jan. 7.—The beer war has taken another turn. The retailers demand a rebate from the open price of $4 per barrel and, it is understood, that it will be granted.

This will cut the price almost in half again, and $2 beer will be the result. An independent brower discussing the situation today said that he would not be at all surprised to see the liquid at $1 per barrel before the termination of the present warfare.

Incidental to the war the bonds of the St. Louis association are dropping rapidly, being now down to $86.
