

IMPROVING THE INTELLECT

Omaha Ladies' Literary Club and What Their Members Are Doing.

ENLARGING THE SCOPE OF KNOWLEDGE

Study of Ancient and Modern History by the Fair Sex—The City's Three Organizations and Who Compose Them.

While today Omaha may not rival the culture of older cities of the east, yet there is no inconsiderable movement among its citizens toward self-improvement, as is shown by the gradual growth of its various clubs and classes, both as regards membership, scope and thoroughness of the work undertaken.

An earnest little band of ladies gathers every Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. W. W. Koyser, on Bristol street. For several years this class has met to study English literature under the guidance of Mrs. Koyser, whose long connection with the Omaha High school had given her strength and earnestness in this field of work. This year this class has taken a step in a new direction and is giving its attention to the study of the history of art.

Aside from the text book used much reference reading is accomplished by the class. This branch of study, considered so essential in all collegiate courses, is especially practical at this time when every one desires a better comprehension of art that the wonders of the Columbia exhibition may be more appreciated. The following are members of the class: Miss Eveleth, Miss Hobbs, Miss Boellier, Miss Fair, Miss Vincent, Mrs. Lemon, Mrs. Dr. Allen, Mrs. Woodward.

One of various channels by which Dr. Duryea is endeavoring to lift humanity to a higher plane and to broaden the circle of leadership of a literary class for ladies.

The first winter of its organization "The Club" gave its attention to the study of Wordsworth, as made apparent in the programme of the "Excursion." The two succeeding seasons were given up to the consideration of Robert Browning and several other poems. This winter the club has turned its attention to the study of her "Romola."

This master piece is studied in the most careful and painstaking manner. All the side lights of history, literature and art are brought to bear upon it. Much time has been given to the study of the Renaissance in Italy and its parallel history in other countries. About the great teacher Savonarola clusters the peculiar social and political conditions that marked the closing days of Christianity at that period. Circumstances and conditions that later ripened into the Reformation. The elements that mark the dawn of a new era of freedom are not neglected; careful attention is given to the delineation of character and the institutions and customs of the age and nationality. Dr. Duryea gives most painstaking attention to this work. Its membership is limited to thirty ladies, who meet Monday evenings.

One of the most earnest and hard working literary organizations in the city is known as the Cleofan club. Some four years ago this club had its membership limited to three or four ladies met with Mrs. W. Hanchett for the purpose of reviewing English history. Today the Cleofan consists of two chapters, about sixty members. It enjoys a dual organization, being at once a club and a class. The members of Chapter I, frequently known as the "Cleofans," hold their meetings at the Paxton cafe on Wednesday mornings. Its organization and membership is as follows:

Mrs. Birlingim, Mrs. Lewis Bradford, Mrs. Caldwell, Mrs. Colpeter, Miss Crozer, Miss DeWitt, Mrs. Green, Mrs. G. H. Haines, Mrs. Hanchett, Mrs. Haller, Mrs. Jaynes, Mrs. Johannes, Mrs. Kenyon, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Lindsey, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Nichols.

List of officers and members of Cleofan Chapter I: President, Mrs. Z. T. Lindsey; vice president, Mrs. R. C. Moore; secretary, Mrs. William Williams; treasurer, Mrs. W. G. Johnson; board of directors, Mrs. Powell, chairman; Mrs. Frank Haller, Mrs. C. E. Greene, Mrs. F. E. Lee, Mrs. Lindsey, Mrs. Lindsey, Mrs. W. F. Allen, Miss Boudnot, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Risdon, Mrs. Simpson, Miss Still, Mrs. M. E. Smith.

Chapter II, the more numerous division, is made up of women employed during the day and holds its meetings on Tuesday evenings at the Paxton. The class work of the two chapters has until the present year been identical, with Mrs. Hanchett as leader, or perhaps more properly teacher. After two years had been given to the study of English history it was decided last year to begin the study of the history of the French.

A most enjoyable year's work was spent last season having reached the period of the occupancy of the French throne by Louis XIII; this year the work is practically the study of that great period of political and social upheavals—the French Revolution.

In the hands of the class Mignet's French Revolution serves as a text book. The parallel readings, extending to the present, are conscientiously followed out by the best students of the club.

The history study at which the Cleofan aim is wide reading, carefully prepared papers and ready discussion, and they ought certainly to make progress. The work is primarily, yet not exclusively, history. The study of Shakespeare's "Macbeths" and "Lear" was accomplished last year.

The present Chapter II is at work on Henry VII, while members of Chapter I are devoting themselves to current topics as a second theme. Mrs. Hanchett is a vigorous student and has rare strength as a teacher. She never fails to infuse her own earnestness and enthusiasm into those who enter her classes.

Members and officers of Chapter II are as follows: President, Miss Hixcox; vice president, Miss Dinnan; secretary, Miss May Wilson; treasurer, Miss Tobit, Mrs. H. E. Allen, Miss Bickel, Miss Brown, Miss Burgess, Miss Bruner, Miss Cooper, Miss Dural, Miss Dawson, Miss Eddy, Miss Gardner, Miss Hamilton, Miss Hoadly, Miss McCallan, Mrs. Manly, Mrs. Penney, Mrs. Perrine, Mrs. Preston, Miss Powell, Miss Ryan, Miss Royce, Miss Hamsey, Miss Whelan, Mrs. Scapio, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. O'Connell, Miss O'Neill, Miss Lewis, Miss Lawton, Miss Swobe, Mrs. MacMurry, the Misses McChane, Miss Broadfield, Miss Reed, Miss Tobit, Miss Hut-maker.

LEARNING TO DRAW THE LINES.

What is Being Done in This Respect in Omaha Schools.

"There are people meeting with physical, financial and moral shipwreck every day in the year, because they do not know 'how to draw the lines.' Their mental vision has become impaired from some cause. The lines which form the picture of life in their mind's eye are not true, and as a consequence, the chaotic chaos of human activity to them is a miserable conglomeration of light and shade. The outlines are blurred and the perspective is a jumble of incoherences.

An important part of the work of the Omaha public school education consists of teaching the pupils how and where to draw lines. This is included in the course which the pupils are required to take in drawing, and it extends from the first year in the graded schools all the way through to the last year in the high school.

Through the kindness of Miss Ethel Evans, teacher of drawing, and Miss McShane, principal of the Long school, a representative of The Bee was permitted to observe the work done in drawing in the graded school classes last Thursday forenoon at the Long school. The Long school was selected because it has the reputation of being one of the best schools in the city in point of discipline as well as in the earnestness and thoroughness of the class work.

The first room visited was that of the first grade, where little tots only four or five months initiated into the mysteries of school life were seated and were attentively listening to something their teacher was saying. The lesson in drawing was at once taken up. It was evident that the children enjoyed this part of their daily school work, they went about it in a way that could not be misunderstood. On the front row of seats sat what are called the "little monitors." To each of these the teacher gave enough sheets of paper for all the pupils in their tier of seats, and these "little monitors" distributed them in a manner quite beyond criticism. The entire class was then directed to place the sheets of paper on their desks before them, take their pencils in their right hands with the point of the pencil in position as to leave the tip of the pencil in full view, and prepare to bisect the sheets of paper. The little folks first made a dot at the top of the sheet and then at the bottom, one near the middle as their eyes and judgment could determine and then they drew the line from top to bottom, dividing the sheet into two halves, which they had endeavored to make perfectly equal.

Some of the pupils, although mere babies in size, were remarkably accurate in drawing these their first lines, and one would have required the assistance of a measuring rule to have determined whether or not the lines were drawn exactly across the middle of the paper. Others were not so accurately drawn, but as a whole the work was very clever for infants. They were next required to trisect their sheets of paper by drawing two lines from top to bottom across the page. This they did with as much neatness and accuracy as the former task, and they made clear an excellent record on the other tasks that helped to train the eye and the muscles to obey the will.

"What is this?" asked the teacher, holding up a pupil's sheet. "That's a cylinder," was the prompt reply from half a score of throats. "Robert, you describe a cylinder," continued the teacher, calling upon a bright little fellow in the second row from the front. "A cylinder has two flat faces and a curved surface," said the youthful admirer of Barnum's greatest show on earth. His error in the use of the word "curved" for "surface" was pleasantly corrected and the lesson proceeded in individual method. The teacher described the cylinder, the cube, the sphere and various other objects employed in teaching drawing.

In the second grade the pupils are given work in clay, and this proves to be a source of much improvement in their youthful powers of designing and construction. Here the teacher makes clear an excellent record on the other tasks that helped to train the eye and the muscles to obey the will.

Among the children who are not able to take care of themselves and who are called on the secretary of the organization yesterday and was given some interesting facts from a report made with regard to the society and its work since winter began. The officers are: President, Mrs. A. L. Latt, Seventeenth and Missouri avenues; vice president, Mrs. W. B. Cheek, Twenty-second between H and I; second vice president, Mrs. C. L. Talbot, Twenty-second between J and K; secretary, Mrs. H. Meyers, corner Twenty-third and H; Mrs. I. A. Clayton, corner Twenty-third and I; Mrs. W. M. Wood, 912 North Twenty-third; Mrs. D. K. Kierpatrick, 2294 H; Mrs. D. K. Pinney, Mrs. N. V. Richardson, corner Twenty-third and H; Mrs. Frank Boyd, 110 North Twenty-sixth; Mrs. A. W. Miller, Twenty-first near N; Mrs. L. Housholder, 910 Twenty-third; Mrs. A. W. Babcock, Twenty-fourth between D and E; Mrs. E. C. Hayward, corner Twenty-fourth and H; Mrs. D. Jones, 230 North Twenty-second; Mrs. E. C. Anderson, Twenty-fourth between D and E; Mrs. Elmer Wert, corner H and Twenty-seventh; Mrs. J. M. Smith, Twenty-fourth and I; Mrs. W. Meyers, J between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth; Mrs. J. C. Graham, Nineteenth and M; Miss M. A. Davis, Twenty-second between H and I.

The society meets every two weeks, on Thursday afternoon at the residence of some one of the members, and the practical work is done through various committees. Naturally, at this time of the year, the committee on charities has the most important work to look after. This committee is made up of the entire membership, each individual acting as a committee of one to ferret out the needy and report same at once, if necessary, or at the next meeting. When cases of distress are reported at a meeting, a special committee is named, whose duty it is to investigate at once and supply whatever is needed by ladies appointed ministers of all the churches and to the public generally for information as to the condition of the unfortunate, and in this respect the Omaha Ladies' Home is of great assistance. There is always money in the treasury, and supplies of clothing and provisions constantly on hand. Members rejoice to have the opportunity of doing good as a special favor if any one knowing of needy people will kindly inform any one of their number.

It was reported some time ago that Mrs. Watts, the lady whose husband deserted her in a destitute condition. The King's Daughters visited her at once and found her nicely situated, with three boarders, and a destitute family was also reported in the Mack block, which proved untrue, as the ladies visited every family in the block and adjoining houses and found no one needing assistance.

The Third Ward school, presided over by Misses Harting, O'Neil and C. L. H. of a graceful act of charity during the holidays, for when the King's Daughters desire to thank the school. Each pupil, presumably under the direction of the teachers, presented an offering to the school, which aggregated $25.00 in money, several bushels of potatoes, sacks of flour, kindling wood, clothing, coal, etc., to the extent of a wagon load and turned it over to the society. It is needless to say it has made more than one poor family happy.

In many cases the ladies buy new shoes for barefooted children and coal to keep them from freezing. While the percentage of extremely poor people is very small indeed in this city, no city of 15,000 people can exist without the need of charitably inclined people. The next meeting of the King's Daughters will be held at the residence of Mr. W. H. Slabaugh, 914 Twenty-third street.

GOOD WORK OF THE KING'S DAUGHTERS

How the Ladies of This Society Have Systematized the Furnishing of Relief to Worthy Poor—Record of the Society.

The long continued cold weather naturally causes charitably inclined people to think of the poor, who perform live in shanties with a scant supply of fuel and clothing, and sometimes not enough to eat. As a rule the greatest suffering falls upon the defenseless heads of women and children, which fact touches the hearts of sympathetic people, who would not trouble themselves about men who are often responsible for their own condition and that of their families.

There is no city, even in this favored country, that has not its poor, improvident or otherwise, and South Omaha varies from the rule only in a degree.

A reporter for The Bee made the rounds of the city yesterday for the purpose of ascertaining whether suffering existed an one less fortunate to an extent worthy of public mention, and was agreeably surprised to find that within the limits of the city but very few families actually need assistance.

There is probably not over a dozen families in the city, worthy and unworthy, who are not able to take care of themselves and who are called on the secretary of the organization yesterday and was given some interesting facts from a report made with regard to the society and its work since winter began.

The officers are: President, Mrs. A. L. Latt, Seventeenth and Missouri avenues; vice president, Mrs. W. B. Cheek, Twenty-second between H and I; second vice president, Mrs. C. L.
