

BATTILING FOR HER BABES

Queer Story of Domestic Trouble Brought Out in the County Court.

WIFE ARRAYS AGAINST HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Mary Russell Seeking to Recover Possession of Her Two Children, Whom She Alleges Are Seized and Kept in Wretchedness.

In the dramas of the courts many cases come up for judicial adjudication that appeal to the finer sensibilities of human nature, yet none more so than the legal battle which yesterday in the county court over the possession of two children, one a boy, the other a girl, for whose possession father is arrayed against mother, and husband against wife.

Pretty little 11-year-old Virgie Russell and her 9-year-old brother, George Worthington Russell, are being fought over in the courts, the father wanting the care and custody of both, the mother seeking by legal means to have them to herself.

The parties to the case are Mary C. Russell and George F. Russell, who were united in marriage at Galena, Ill., on January 21, 1880. For a number of years no cloud darkened the little home and the life was one of continued happiness. During these years two children came to bless the home, one a girl, Virginia Fletcher, now 11 years of age, and the other a boy, George Worthington, over whose head the storms of nine winters have passed.

Broke Up Their Home. In the summer of 1887 the family came to this city. At first the husband made money and providing a good home for the wife and the little ones, but as the years rolled on he commenced to neglect the hearthstone and associate with men who were far beneath his equal. The liquor habit was acquired and from that time on the downward course was a rapid one, the wife alleging. He became coarse, abusive and morose. Then came the breaking up of the home, and in the fall of 1891, with her two little children, Mrs. Russell went to St. Paul, Minn., there to begin life anew and earn a pittance for herself and the ones dependent upon her for support. By hard work and practicing the strictest economy she kept the children in school.

Occasionally letters passed between Mr. and Mrs. Russell, but no attempt to reconcile the domestic trouble was ever made. In July of last year the father wrote from this city that he wanted to see the children once more and if they could visit him for a short time he would pay the expenses of the trip and return them when the time had expired. An agreement to this effect was entered into and one bright morning the mother kissed the little boy and girl, put them on the Omaha-bound train and bid them God-speed. They were met by the father at the depot and taken to his boarding house, where he showed them every kindness. Their Omaha life was one of enjoyment, as their every wish was gratified, the object, so it is alleged, being to estrange them from their mother and cause them to forget the boundless love that was felt for them by the woman in the far-away Minnesota city. Finally the time for their return arrived and the little girl was getting ready for the return journey, at the end of which she would meet her mother. That journey was never made, for the father hid them down and declared that both boy and girl should stay with him until they were old enough to be married. The mother carried this information to Mrs. Russell, who by letter pleaded for her babes, but a deaf ear was turned to the pleadings.

Searching for Her Babies. A few weeks ago she gathered together the little boardings of the many months and came to Omaha. Upon reaching this city she demanded her children, but the demand was met with a rough reply and she was told that she had better go back to St. Paul, and that at once, for there was no use of staying, as the children were satisfied to remain where they were. The woman insisted upon seeing them and hearing their account from their own lips, but this request she was denied. Then she commenced a vigorous search and found them in the custody of a woman named Cora Emelth, who resides outside the city, on the west side. Mrs. Russell visited the house but was denied admission, or even the opportunity of conversation with her children, though she alleged that she learned enough to inform that they are kept from school and are living the lives of outcasts.

With the information that she had, Mrs. Russell has gone into court, where she has asked for the custody of both the children, alleging that neither Russell nor Cora Emelth are fit persons to have the care and custody of any children of tender years, and especially these two.

County Judge Miller has considered the case, and has set it for hearing next Friday afternoon, when all of the interested parties will be brought before the court.

WHERE IS KRENTZ?

His Disappearance is Causing Anxiety Among His Friends in Omaha. Among the strange disappearances recorded as coming from the section along the river known as the flats, that of Robert Krentz presents many curious features. Krentz has not been seen since January 8, and his friends fear the worst.

The little cabin or flatboat occupied by the missing man lay moored up on the Iowa side of the river near the bridge, and when its occupant was last seen he was in his home from Grocer Kasmussen's, where he came to purchase the necessities of life. This was a week ago last Monday, and whether Krentz was reported to have some $60 or $70 in his pocket at the time broke through the ice on his way homeward or met with foul play, is a matter of conjecture.

Friends have searched as well as could be done under the circumstances for some trace of the body, with the supposition that he may have gone through the ice, but so far without any result. The missing man has a brother in Omaha who will institute a systematic search for him.

May Appeal to the Courts. The members of the Board of Education, consisting of Messrs. Elgutter, Powell and HAIBOOK, who are opposed to the re-establishment of the teachers' training institute, may yet decide to contest the legality of the board's decision to again open the school, in the courts. It is claimed by those opposed to the scheme that it contemplates a useless waste of money.

Decisions of the License Board on Some Recent Applications. Two protested cases were heard by the license board yesterday afternoon.

Snow, Land & Co. were charged with illegal publication, as was also J. J. Seville.

Mr. Snow claimed that he advertised in the World-Herald because he received a guarantee, and because he believed that the World-Herald would have the largest circulation in Douglas county.

If the Herald had given a guarantee he would have placed his advertisement with that paper. Witness claimed that he did not know of the resolution of the board designating what paper advertisements must be published in.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Building of the First Methodist Church Society Ruined by Fire.

CAUGHT FROM AN OVERHEATED STOVE

Fire Built by a Volunteer Janitor Got Away from Him—How of the Firemen Proved Unserviceable—Loss and Insurance.

The revival services at the Methodist Episcopal church were suddenly brought to a close last evening by the burning of the building.

The fire started from an overheated stove on the second floor. In the absence of the regular janitor a young man named Smith had charge of the building for some days past.

At the usual hour last evening he started a fire and went home to supper, when the stove heated up away beyond what the young man expected, resulting in a blaze which left the church a wreck.

Councilman James Baird first saw the fire and almost extinguished it with two pails of water, but before he could secure more the fire was beyond control of the one-man bucket brigade.

In the meantime an alarm was turned in from the American District Telegraph office, which confined the fire department and caused delay. It is also stated that when hydrant connection was made it was found that a section of the hose was frozen and unusable.

At about the Third ward company threw first water, and soon three streams were playing on the fire.

The fire was discovered at 6:45 and was entirely out three-quarters of an hour later. The entire upper story of the church, which was built of brick, was destroyed, leaving the brick basement unharmed except by water.

The loss is estimated at $3,500, with $2,500 insurance. The policy is held by the Church Extension society as collateral security for a loan of $1,000 advanced by the society to aid in building the church. Something over $600 of the loan has been paid, and the balance of $400 is all subscribed but not yet collected.

The exact cost of the building could not be ascertained. It having been erected by piece meal, owing to grading of streets, but $3,000 is not far from the figure.

Mr. Etter, the grocer, living next door to the church, had his sick wife removed across the street to the residence of Mr. Davis. Mrs. Etter, who is very ill, took the matter coolly and is none the worse for the experience.

Rev. Mr. Dawson, pastor of the church, assisted the firemen and went home after it was over, leaving the church in the hands of Barry Maxwell the Tramp and Virginia Earle the Lunch Counter Girl. With such names as these "Holy Ground," will certainly be well preserved.

No better cast than the one that will be presented in Hoyt's farce comedy, "A Hole in the Ground," at Boyd's theater on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, was ever in the piece. Frank Lawton plays the Station Agent, the Tramp, the Stranger, Barry Maxwell the Tramp and Virginia Earle the Lunch Counter Girl.

"Pete Peterson," the Anglo-Swedish comedy, which will be presented at the Farnam Street theater on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, is one of the most successful laugh makers of the season.

The electric light company fired up the fourth boiler last evening. The new boiler is of larger size than the others and is intended to take the place of one of the smaller ones which will be taken out.

A fight in the Exchange building this afternoon between S. B. Fenno and Hugh Hitchcock broke the monotony for a few minutes. The trouble arose over a disputed account between Fenno and Hitchcock.

Mr. Fenno owned an membership in the World Stock exchange, which he wanted Hitchcock to pay him $30 cash, while Hitchcock insisted on giving Fenno credit on an account of $100. The fight was to a finish with bare knuckles.

L. H. HARRIS INDICATED. Serious Charges Against Him Found to Be Without Foundation.

DENVER, Neb., Jan. 14.—To the Editor of THE BEE: In your daily of December 25 you have this item:

"L. H. Harris, president of the International State bank of Brewster, Neb., who runs a little grocery store at this place, was arrested this morning on a warrant sworn out by J. L. Overman, charging him with horse stealing. Overman claims to be able to prove his charge and will push the case to the fullest extent of the law."

The only truth in this article is the fact that I was arrested.

The correct history of the case is this: J. L. Overman, a brewer, and the section at this place on the B. & M. section, lives at the B. & M. section house. He put on a little box of ome and told two of my horses to break up John Egan and his wife that we have owned in the family a number of years, and had him out in the brush of the Loup bottom over night in a snow storm and leaving him with a broken leg and $5 for the damages. While I knew that he had a shadow of right to detain my horse, and knowing that he had only commenced this to make trouble, and if possible, any trouble with the man, gave one of my men $5 and sent him after the horse. He was ready to pay me the money to go, and seeing how the law was being abused, unhitched the animal and brought him home.

The next day, Overman, accompanied by her father, R. E. Boaz, went to Brewster, the county seat of this county, and swore out a warrant for me for alleged horse stealing and it was served on me by Sheriff I. to avoid, if I would, the trouble of going to court, I went to report at Brewster as soon as possible. I was arrested and taken to the county jail. They were not ready for trial, so I was put off until Monday, December 26.

Meantime R. E. Boaz, Homer Calkins, the B. & M. agent at this place, D. G. Berry, my would-be competitor and your correspondent of December 20, and J. L. Overman, the section foreman of the B. & M., went around making a list of my horses, and had me out of horse stealing, and that the B. & M. company was backing them, and that they would have several railroad attorneys to help prosecute the case. Meantime they did write to an attorney at Broken Bow explaining their case. They received a letter from an attorney at Broken Bow explaining the case to them and telling them they had made a bad blunder, and calling their attention to the law and the penalty for conspiring to accuse a man of a crime he never committed. Then they began to see the fix they were in. They received this letter from their attorney at 9:30 on Saturday evening the 24th, and before daylight Sunday morning, December 25, they were at our place knocking at the door to make us a present of the horse.

They pleaded and begged for this thing to be dropped, and interspersed their pleading with tears and sobs.

On the 25th all assembled at Brewster for trial. They came in with the motion to dismiss. We opposed the motion. The court ruled in my favor, and the trial developed the fact that what they accused me of was a misdemeanor and not a crime. It also developed the fact that what they had done was a crime, and that I was not punishable by one year in the penitentiary, but $100 fine.

J. Davis of Solomon, Mo., and he is short some $95, which he thinks was taken from him in a colored divan in the burnt district. The loss was reported to the police, and late in the night they arrested a crowd of descendants of Ham who were having a good time in a barroom. The entire outfit said "not guilty" in police court yesterday, and were given a continuance.

ANNOUNCEMENTS. Dramatic writers of the past few years have been at their wit's end in their attempts to secure something new of a realistic kind to introduce into the play.

The realization of Dramatist Hawthorn's hopes was fulfilled when, after careful thought and research, he conceived the idea of introducing in the third act of a "Nutmeg Match" a complete working plebiscite. This widely heralded and successful comedy drama, will be the attraction at Boyd's theater this evening, continuing four nights with Saturday matinee. In this scene a great machine for tickets must be made by the 31st inst. Sleeping car reservations can be secured to Galveston without charge.

Others in the company are Miss Helen Weathersby, Mrs. E. A. Eberle, Mrs. Fanny Deaman, Mrs. E. A. Eberle, Mrs. E. A. Deamer, R. E. Sullivan, Earl Brown and others equally as capable.
