hour. The pressure used is from 6 to 12 pounds, supplied by an air compressor. When the carrier is inserted in the tube it is carried along by a current of air with a velocity depending on the pressure until it reaches the place of delivery, where the velocity is checked by air cushions, and when the carrier leaves the tube the air is prevented from escaping by automatic valves.

The first official trial of the pneumatic tube for mail transit in America was made in Philadelphia, Friday last. The day chosen for the inauguration of rapid transit of mail was the bicentennial of the establishment of the American post-office system.

The pneumatic tubes for local transmission of telegrams are now used in all the principal cities of Great Britain. At present about fifty miles of such tubes are in operation, requiring an aggregate of 400-horse power, and transmitting a daily average of over 100,000 messages (or over 30,000,000 annually), more than half of these in London.
