Result of the Meetings. Another evidence of the practical work that has been done in the recent series of meetings held in the Masonic temple by the Christian church was seen yesterday afternoon, when sixteen additions were made by baptism. The meeting was held in the Scandinavian Baptist church in order that the baptistery might be made use of for the cereny. Five of the candidates were men, Mr. Allen, the paster of this young organi-

THE DAILY BEE NEWS FROM COUNCIL BLUFFS

School Election Today is Exciting More than Usual Interest.

MANY WOMEN WILL TAKE AN ACTIVE PART

Candidacy of Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Avlesworth Looked Upon as the Agency for Emancipating the Schools from Partisan Politics.

The election of two members of the school board takes place today. With two tickets in the field, one composed of democrats and the other of ladies, the contest promises to be a warm one. Even the democrats, who early in the campaign predicted that their ticket would be overwhelmingly elected, are now willing to admit that the election will be a very close one, and they don't know exactly how it will turn out. The citizens will be treated to a novel sight today. A large number of the lagies of the city have determined to assist in the work of reclaiming the government of the public schools from the domination of partisan politics and will be at the polls all day pediling thecets in the interests of Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Ayles-

The following is a list of the polling places in the various wards, and the polls will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning:

First Ward-Western house, 308 East Broadeny. Second Ward-Eagle laundry, 724 Broadway. Third Ward-Knotts' coal office, 37 Main Fourth Ward-Terwilliger's livery barn, on

Fifth Ward-1611 Broadway,
Sixth Ward-Clatterinek's office, North
Twenty-third street, near Broadway. The plan of selling the high school build-ing and creeting a building on some more accessible spot, is meeting with the favor of most of the patrons of the schools, and is especially popular with those who have chil-uren in the High school denortment. There are many young ladies who have been com-pelled to drop out of school a year or so before graduating by order of their physicians, as they were unable to stand the physical strain of climbing the hill twice a day. The it has ever been be the friends of education ennd not like to see any one cheated out of the right to attend simply through a physical inability to endure in unnecessary hardship. The idea of changing the location of the high school has been agitated a number of times before, but it was never thought of enough importance to become a campaign issue until this spring, Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Aylesworth were nominated on that platform, and every vote cast for them will be a vote to exchange the present high school building for one located where all the school children in the city can

Surprised the Secretary. Secretary J. C. Yose of the Young Men's Christian association was made the recipient of a couple of very much appreciated gifts Saturday night. Last week a subscription paper was circulated among the young men of the association and with the proceeds was bought a fine office desk, with rolling top, which was to be presented to him. The del egates from Des Moines who attended the state convention held here a few weeks ago, happened to hear what was being done, and happened to hear what was being done, and they immediately raised the amount necessary to buy a beautiful chair to go with the desk. Both articles of furniture were brought to the rooms Saturday night and presented in proper form. Mr. Rose was taken completely by surprise, as he had not the slightest idea that anything of the kind was being done for him. The action of the young men is a fitting recognition of the efforts being not forth by him for the area. efforts being put forth by him for the up-building of the association in this city. At the services in the hall last evening six more professions of faith were made. It is reported that the members of the Temple Baptist church have decided to unite with their Christian brethren, and that fifty of them will come forward in a body one night during this week and be taken into full mem bership. The young church is growing with astonishing rapidity under the ministry of Mr. Allen and the melody of Mr. Birdsall, and has become one of the foremost denominations in point of interest and strength in

There will be no services on Tuesday night on account of the hall having been engaged for another purpose before the commencement of the meetings.

Esther Up to Date. In his sermon at the First Presbyterian church last evening Dr. Phelps announced himself on the question of woman suffrage and gave utterance to some opinions which are of peculiar interest in view of today's events. His sermon was on the subject of Esther, and he traced in glowing colors the history of that wonderful woman and her history of that wonderful woman and her heroic efforts to save her people from the treachery of Haman. "I am of the opinion," said he in concluding, "that there is no bet-ter or more useful place for a woman than in the home and by the fireside. And yet to say that the home is the only place where a woman's talents can be exercised is folly. For my cart I shall be also whether the woman's talents can be exercised is folly. For my part I shall be glad when the ballot is put into the hands of the women, not only at school elections, as is now done in a number of the states, but in general elections, as in Wyoming. And I shall be glad also to see the time come when it shall be as common a thing for a woman to shall be as common a thing for a woman to hold many of the offices in the gift of the people as for a man. When that time comes discountable will be disreputable politics will be a thing un-known and the government of our cities will be turned over to the representatives of purity and good morals. If you ever have a chance to help along in this good work, do it. If you ever have a chance to cast a vote for a woman, don't refuse because she is a woman. but decide in your own mind whether she is competent to hold the position, and if so by all means vote for her. Put the Esthers into power and the Hamans will get out."

Theatrical Companies Robbed. There is a gang of amateur thickes that hangs about Dohany's opera house and makes a practice of stealing money or articles of less value from the various theatrical people, who play there. Hardly a month passes without some member of a company making a complaint of losing his property. A day or two ago the manager of a troupe that played at the opera house last week wrote to Chief Scanlan and asked him to look up some wigs and other articles which had been stolen. A search was made in the opera house and away up ir the rafters in the front part were found some of the stolen articles. A search was made at the home of a boy named Willie Kane, at the corner of Tenth avenue and Seventeenth street, and other things were found which were identified as belonging to Al G. Field's Minstrel troupe which played at the opera house Wednesday night. The Kane boy and a companion named Lewis Pennington were arrested on suspicion of having done the thieving. Both of them had been leading around the place a good deal of late. Mr. Kane called at the police station to see his son after he was arrested, but refused to take any steps toward getting him out on bail, saying that if the boy was guilty he might take the consequences. Later on Sam Baker, Jack Lan-don, John Bennett and Noah Pinkman were also arrested for being implicated in the theft. The outfit was taken before Justice Vien for a trial Saturday afternoon and Kane was found guilty and sent to the county jail for two weeks. Benuett and Penning-ton were discharged and the case of the other three was continued.

Scrappy Policeman. Officer Martin became involved in an aftercation with the 17-year-old son of John Wallace, a teamster living at 812 Avenue H, last evening about 10 o'clock, just as the congregation at the solored church on North Sixth street was breaking up. The boy, with a number of companions, was standing out in front of the church when the officer ordered the crowd to keep quiet and go home. Wal-lace claims all the crowd obeyed the order except the deaf boy who had not heard it except the deaf boy who had not heard it. He turned to see what the officer was going to do with the deaf boy, and Martin grabbed him, threw him on the ground and after pounding him severely put the handcuffs on him and started for the police station. The father of the boy and several companions went by another route to the police station for the purpose of making it. for the purpose of making it warm for Martin when he arrived. But he did not arrive. As nothing was heard from him about it, it was supposed that he changed his mind and decided to let the boy go.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., March 10 .- To the Editor of THE BEE: With pleasure I note in THE MORNING BEE, the defeat of both park bond propositions; I voted for the first proposition in the hope that Casper would be defeated, and that we would get a park in the west end of the city. I also cast my first yote for a republican (as did many others) for the same reason. But with Casper's election fided every ray of hope for a park west of Seventh street, and it is a pleasure to know that we will not have to pay taxes for Casper to expend on the park nearest to his own house. "There is not a particle of heroism about you, Ulysses," said Mrs. Murfree, as she brushed out her back hair in front of the dresser glass, #Sparatory to re-tiring for the night. Not a particle," she emphatically repeated. "I have known you to be positively cowardlyat

Mr. Murfree looked up in a weary way from the corner where hesat. "I'm sure, my dear..." he began.

No, you're not," snapped his better half, "you are not sure: you are never sure of anything—you only think. Bah! I hate a man who only thinks," and she erked the tangles of a refractory auburn ock with additional force.

When Mrs. Jenks was telling tonight about that paragon of a husband of hers I was simply consumed with envy. It shows how much to believe in names. Look at you two men-look, I say!" "Yes, my dear," responded Mr. Mur-free, pulling off his boots in a resigned way, "I'm looking."

way. "I'm looking." "Bah!" retorted his wife. "I mean your names, Ulysses Murfree-Peter Jenksjust think of the difference, and yet Peter Jenks knocked a burglar downstairs this week with one fist, one, I assure you, and you, you are afraid to go calling on the Simsongibbers after dark, because they keep a dog." Well, my dear," feebly expostulated

Mr. Murfree, "it is a very large dog, and I Here Mrs. Murfree suddenly turned around, and through lips containing sundry hairpins, combs and such trifling articles, hissed, "Don't talk to me!" in such an impressive and disgusted manner that Mr. Murfree subsided at once, and proceeded to finish pulling off his He was not disturbed again until the moment came for retiring, when, contrary to their usual custom, Mrs. Murfree turned the gas entirely out, leaving the room in darkness, save where a streak of moonlight fell through the window, open for ventilation. Now, if there was anything that Mr Murfree hated it was to have the bed-room gas turned off at night, but he limbed sadly into bed, and lay cogitating a plan whereby he should be able to shoot a burglar in the dark, should one chance to visit his abode that night.

Just as the city cleek was striking I Mr. Murfree awoke with a start and looked in a dazed way up into the dark-

"What's the matter with me?" he muttered, a sensation of uneasiness creeping over him. "I think—ha what's that?" and, broad awake now with the cold perspiration starting re-every pore, he became conscious of rustle in the room, the cause o which the heavy portieres draping the

Cautiously he reached under the mattress for his revolver, and, to his horror found that after cleaning it on the previous day he had carelessly forgotten to place it in its wonted spot.

Oh, Lord! oh, Lord! he chattered to himself, teying to keep cool, "no revolver, no nothing, and a burglar sure as fate. Samantha was right. I am a coward: what on earth shall I do? awake Samantha I will never hear the last of it-she will nag worse than ever: besides, she is sure to yell, and then we will all be murdered, and then the poor man shook so that the springs creaked and sent him into a fresh fit of trembling. Rustle, rustle, it came again, and then a soft thump and a clink.

"He's got my pants," ejaculated Mr. Murfree to himself, as he cautiously sat up in bed and tried to calm himself.

Thump "I can't stand this any longer," said Mr. Murfree in a whisper, beginning to get huffy. "I'm a fool. No wonder Sa-mantha said so. I will certainly find out what is outside of those curtains, and this time Samantha shan't have a chance to brag over me. Perhaps I shall be able to do something for once.

Keeping well away from the separation between the portieres he carefully let one foot out of bed. As it touched the floor the rustle sounded again, and so near that Mr. Murfree nearly lost his balance with fright, and found himself on his feet the next moment, shaking with alarm lest he had provoked the marauder's attention to the alcove or awakened the sleeping Samantha.

But no; all was quiet, and as soon as ne plucked up a sufficient amount of courage he peered cautiously through the curtains.

With difficulty he repressed an exlamation of horror. The moon's rays fell across the dresser, bringing out each article on it with a weird distinctness, and just in the shadow before the cheval glass was the stooping figure of a man. He was evidently searching the upper drawer, and Mr. Murfree gasped for joy as he distinguished on the top of the cabinet to the right of the glass the nissing revolver. "If I could only reach him," said Mr. Murfree to himself, "jump on him as he is bending over and secure the revolver before he recovers himself-it's a good plan, and the only one, I'm getting kind of riled. I don't believe I'm such a coward after all."

With a mighty effort he braced himself and advanced cautiously, keeping his eyes on the bent figure.

In the uncertain light the man looked unnaturally large and heavy, and seemed each second to be on the point of rising. Indeed, as Mr. Murfree reached the center-table he thought all was over, and shrank down behind it despairingly.

But fortune was kind, the burglar still searched busily, and Mr. Murfree, gathering himself for a grand effort, and nerved to a point of desperation. made a flying leap, and landing with terrific force upon the burglar's ders, grabbed the revolver, yelling: "Police! thieves!— c'.:—!"

Over he went, bumpety bump; and as he found himself prostrate upon the floor, with a chair and something soft and thick over him, he finihed his exclamation with d—n it.
"Oh! Ulysses! Ulysses!" screamed Mrs. Murfree, tangling herself up in the bedelothes in her efforts to rise. Where are you?" Mr. Murfree was on his feet in a flash, holding in his arms the harmless cause of his fright and disturbance. Mrs. Murfree's fur cape, which she had hung over the chair back in front of the dresser, and which, with its high shoulders and collar, had looked in the dim light like a stooping tiger. Men think quickly sometimes, and Mr. Murfree realized the situation with remarkable speed, and being on his mettle determined not to be made a fool of. Kneeking Mrs. Murfree's jewel case from the dresser as he fled, he rushed out of the room pell-mell, stepping on the cat, the author of the mysterious noises that had first awakened him, With a savage kick he sent her ahead of him, as he flew down the front stairs, and banged the front door open and

Then he panted breathlessly up again, sin'ting on the top stair, sore, bruised and mad, just as his wife succeeded in lighting the gas. "Burglar," he gasped. "Where, oh where," she screamed, excitedly, half helping, half dragging him into the room. "Gone," he managed to say; "knocked him over-got away-front door-see there," pointing to the jewelry strewn around the floor. Mrs. Murfree gave one look, and then, with that faithful sense of obligation to the tradition of her sex which the average woman seems to possess in an emergency, she proceeded to faint away. Mr. Murfree dumped her into a chair. He was too weak to hold her, and besides he felt a fiendish exultation in glorying in his superior strength of mind; so, when she recovered, he was picking up the eleverly scattered trinkets with as bored an air as he could assume.

"What are you seared of?" he said, scounfully, "man's gone, I'm here; I rather think I have protected you, even if I am a coward. Perhaps you will leave the light burning after this so that shall not be obliged to struggle for my life in the dark." And he wiped from his forchead a few drops of blood trickling from a scratch received in the encounter with the large pin on his cape burglar, making his face as gory as possible with the small amount of material. Mrs. Murfree looked at him a moment in a hysterical sort of way, and then, falling on his neck, alternately implored forgiveness and wept over her former severity, calling him her hero and all the delightful names which Mr. Murfree's soul was thirsting for. "I'll never say such mean things again," she sobbed; "never, never." There, there, said her spouse, straightening up and putting on a patronizing air to conecal the nervous haking of his muscles-scarce over their recent sheek. "You sit down and I will search the house so that we can feel easy during the remainder of the night.

So that while Mrs. Murfree hid behind the bed curtains, for fear of another visitor, her Ulysses went out in the hall and stayed five minutes in a dark corner, returning with a serious air and the assurance that all was well. Locking their door, the couple once more sought repose, but both were too excited for sleep.

"Won't I just gleat over Mrs. Jenks," exclaimed Mrs. Murfree, as she convulsively patted the pillow into a more accommodating shape. "Oh, Ulysses, I'll tell every woman in the block."

Just then the ludicrous side of the thing struck Mr. Murfree, and he stuffed the corner of the sheet in his mouth and hook convulsively. "What's the matter, dear?" cried his wife. "What's the matter, Uly?"

"Only a chill-don't bother about it; guess I took cold." "Shan't I get you something hot?" asked his wife, anxiously. "Nonsense," he replied, controlling himself with difficulty, "just go to sleep

I'm tired." 'All right, dear," responded she. "I do hope you won't be sick. It's very funny, Ulysses, that the policeman on our beat didn't hear anything, or come running up to the house when that dreadful man made such a noise at the door. Dear me, if I didn't know you had a chill I should think you were laughing." And Mr. Murfree was.

morning that an attempt to assault her had been made at 4:30 a. m. at a switch shanty near Fifteenth and Grace streets by a couple of car repairers working for the Chicago, St.

Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway The woman reached Omaha on a freight The woman reached Omaha on a freight train and claimed that while trying to find her way out of the yards she was approached by two men and an assault attempted. Acting upon the information the police arrested William Hill, a car repairer, who stops at the switch shanty spoken of by the woman. Hill is a man of family and gives his residence as 1107 North Nineteenth street. He denies that he tried to assault the woman and says that he heart her several and says that he heard her scream and went out and brought her into the shanty. The woman sticks to her story and Hill declares that he is telling the truth, and the police judge will have to decide between the
