Digging for Iron. N. Schurz of this city is the possessor of one of the few iron mines to be found in the state of lowa, and he is making preparations to work it for all it is worth within the next few months. It is located at Hinton station, about twelve miles southeast of Council Bluffs, on the Wabasa road. A switch is now being put in, and will be completed in a week or two, when the work of digging will be begun. Specimens of the ore have been sent to Kansas City for analysis, and have been found to contain 9 per cent of the metal. The ore will be ent to Kansas City for smelting as fast as it is taken from the ground.

"Help! Murder! Take him off! Don't let him kill me!" were the words that aroused the residents of Washington avenue and Seventh street from their slumbers, ac-companied by a series of howls that would have done credit to a first class pig-sticking solree. It was about II o'clock Tuesday night, and a pitched battle was in progress between T. W. Quinn, an employe of the gas between T. W. Quinn, an employe of the gas company, and H. E. Sherwood, who crives a wagon for the Pacific Express company. According to the story told by the neighbors. Quinn is at outs with the whole neighborhood and has been making himself generally disagreeable and encouraging his children to do likewise. Among other things, Quion had been inaking remarks about Mrs. Sherwood which made her bushand wrathy. Tuesday evening Mrs. Quinn and her daughter had been spending an hour or so at the house of a friend and Mr. Sherwood was coming home with them, when he was met by Quinn, who had been pacing up and down the street waiting for their return.

And Then They Fought.

When they met, Quinn asked Sherwood if it was true that he had said he wished his family would leave the neighborhood. Sher-wood replied that it was, and Quinn let fly at him with his fist, hitting Sherwood in the face. Sherwood is not more than half as large as Quinn, but he lost no time in striking back, and in a few minutes he had Quinn ing back, and in a few minutes he had Quinn lying on the sidewalk and was pummeling him with his fists, which fell with the regularity of a trip hammer. At that Quinn began to call for help. The neighbors were aroused, and in a few minutes there were twenty five or thirty of them standing around to watch the affray and encouraging Sherwood. The fight must have lasted nearly half an hour, and although it was within two blocks of Broadway and only a short distance from the business center of town, there was not a policeman in sight.

The two mean were finally separated. As soon as Quinn was allowed to get up he drew soon as Quinn was allowed to get up he drew a revolver out of his pocket, and aiming it in the direction of Sherwood he exclaimed. "Til the direction of Sherwood he exclaimed, "Til-kill you," There was a great scatteration in the crowd as the would-be shootist was so dazed by the thumping he had received that he could not stand up straight, but kept the gun waving about in a rather unpleasant fashion. He was finally induced to put up the gun by the request of Justice Fox, who told him he would arrest him and Sherwood too if he didn't go home and mind his best. too if he didn't go home and mind his busi-
