A reminiscence of the base bail season of 1891 was recalled when the cases of Hank O'Day, D. E. Rowe, Jack Rowe, John Cline and Jesse Burkett against F' W. Little were called. The club disbanded in August, and Little, who had agreed to purchase a half interest in the club, was sued by the boys for the difference between the salaries they were to have received and the ones they rewere to have received and the ones they re seived with the clubs with which they flu-shed the season. Dave Rowe included in his claim a note for $2,200, which he and sevrai local enthusiasts negotiated to keep sub affoat. A stipulation of dismissal was iled, Little agreeing to pay the note, but the boys will get nothing on their claims Simeon Brownell asks Judgment in distric court against Frank and Jennie Brownell son and daughter-in-law respectively of plaintiff, for $20,000 for defamation of character.
