LUNCHEONS CONTINUE IN HIGH FEATHER

Miss Patrick is Honored by Two Functions -Harry Nott Marries a Milwaukee Beile-Local Events Among the Howling Swells.

Looking back over the week just en ded one thing is particularly noticeable, the woeful lack of big entertainments, where men and women may meet together socially for an exchange of those courtesies attendant upon fashionable life. Instead, all the real nice functions have been monopolized by women, who more and more seem to be making a pusiness of society, leaving the men to depend upon their own resources for amuse ment and entertainment. Dinners are taking the place of the evening reception and very often these dinners are "for women only in fact, the great majority of luncheons this season have been given for women, until the men more than ever feel that the only place secure to them is the club, and the Omaha club shows a decided improvement in attendance in consequence.

Whither is society drifting is a pertinent question at this time and leaders of the swell set would do well to consider this growing custom of entertainments for women alone before they become hopelessly mired. Men, as a rule, love home. They marry generally to secure a partner to attend to the home making branch of the business, and when that partner fails, why, home does not exist for them any more and the club, with its glittering inducements, its light and gaiety, finally secures a new recruit, and the family ctrcle is minus a head in its best and most endearing sense. There is too much of this division of the sexes when it comes to society, although many men are only too glad to be freed from the necessity of putting on a dress suit and posing for three or four hours as a society devotee. They much prefer an easy chair, a dressing gown and their favorite magazine to all the frills and furbelows of this nineteenth century society of which one hears and reads so much. But there are other men who love society because o Its diversions, its allurements, and men feel the clubbing together of women most keenly. For such as these, women should cater more than they do, should be less selfish than they are and take in oftener make it possible for wives to give functions.

Luncheons seem to have the call these days of May that the following descriptions of recent Gotham functions may not be in appropriate at this time as "pointers" those who are planning similar affairs. At a pink luncheon the cloth was of pure white damask, with an exquisite silk scarf of the daintiest rose pink drawn across the center At either end was a small cut glass lamp with pink silk shades, and as daylight was excluded these lamps gave a soft, low light most becoming to the assembled guests coming to the assembled guests and harmonizing with the entire tone of the decorations. Pink satin ribbons were festooned from the chandelier and from the four corners of the table, where they were fastened with stiff butterfly bows. The napkins were tied with satin ribbons, and a each plate was a large bunch of "la France roses tied with wider ribbons. The fin china was decorated with a dainty pattern of roseouds. The finger bowl doylies were made of bolting cloth with a sprig of a ros At a violet luncheon the tablecloth was of fine linen strewn with embroidered violets, and in the center of the table was a round flat mirror filled with violets and a few care lessly dropped on the mirror, which gave a charming effect as the glass reflected the violets. At the guests' places were cards decorated with violets and large bunches of the purple flowers tied with narrow ribbons The light was given from dainty Dresden candelabras placed at the four corners of the taple, the shades of which were made of white crepon paper with violets painted across them. The china was also violet cloth were of a peculiar plaid with deep crimson as the foundation color. In the cen-ter of the table was a huge candelabra of solid silver, holding tiny candles, with red shades. The chandelier was a mass of smilax tied with crimson ribbons. At either end of the table were vases filled with red carnations so spicy and sweet as to perfume the entire room. The table glass was of the softest shade of deep red, as were the finger howls. Bunches of carnations with misron. bowls. Bunches of carnations with mignonette were at the plates, and as each course was brought in a carnation was laid across the side of the plates.

At a white luncheon white satin ribbons were drawn from the four corners of the table to meet in a great splashing bow in the center. At either end were vases filled with lilies, and small dove-shaped white boxes were placed at the separate covers filled with bonbons. Any of these luncheons can easily be carried out and a change of color substituted, such as yellow, blue, green and Many women carry out the color idea of the luncheon into the drawing room, decorating with flowers and lamp shades. Much can be done by the ingenious woman of to-day with a little study and taste.

So many of Omaha's hotels have been named for individuals, as the Paxton, the Murray, the Millard, the Dellone, the Mer-cer, that the Interstate Hotel company is cer, that the Interstate Hotel company is desirous of changing the existing order of things in the naming of the new hotel shortly to be erected at Fifteenth and Harney streets. The gentlemen connected with the enterprise invite through the columns of The Bgz suggestions for a name, the only stipulation being that it should be of Indian origin, short and musical. Makatah has been suggested as being par Makatah has been suggested as being particularly musical and full of significance, its meaning being "cosmopolitan." Alabama, which means "rest," has also several enthu-siastic supporters, but neither of these meet with the approbation of all the stockholders. Students of Indian lan-guages have here an opportunity to suggest a name that shall be distinct from every other hotel name in the country and at the same time appropriate to the structure and the city in which the hotel is to be erected. What shall be the name for the new hotel? The Beg invites suggestions on this question.

Luncheons for Miss Patrick.

OMAHA'S MUSICAL FESTIVAL

full Programs of the Four Concerts to Be Given Next Week at Exposition Hall. Next week Omaha will enjoy a festival of music, and two of the greatest musical organizations of this or any country will provide it-Sousa's concert band of fifty instruments and Waiter Damrosch's New York Symphony orchestra of sixty-five pieces. There will be four concerts, beginning with two on May 15. The vocal talent engaged is of the highest class, every singer an artist of international renown. At the Sousa concerts, on the 15th, the vocalists will be Mme Fursch-Madi and Mme. Cauteren, sopranos: Miss Minnie Bohnne, contralto; Mr. A. L. Guille, tenor; Mr. William Mertens, baritone, and Signor Viviani, basso. In the Damrosca concerts, on the 17th and 18th, Omaha's particular favorite cantatrice, Mme. Scalchi, will head the vocal list, and the soprano soloist will be the nardly less famous Miss Lillian Blauvelt. Mr. Adolph Brodsky will be solo violinist and the great Anton Hekking solo cellist. What a feast will be set! Season ticket holders may re-serve their seats tomorrow at Ford & Charlton's 1508 Dodge street, single ticket holders on Wednesday, and the sale will open to the general public next Friday. May 12. Soosa's band program will include his fine arrangement of "The Flying Dutchman" arrangement of "The Flying Dutchman" overture, displaying how perfectly his reeds and brass winds can overcome stupendous difficulties. No other military band has ever attempted an adequate rendition of this overture of Wagnerisa Sousa will also present his new pieces, "In a Clock Store," by Orth: "The Nuterackers," by Tschaikowsky; the magnificently, descriptive "The Last Days of Pompeii," and his much talked of "The Salute of the Nations of the Earth to the Columbian Exposition." The critics have declared "The Last Days of Pompeii" the best thing Sousa has yet written. It is in the form of a suite the first number being a description of the gladiators in the house of Burbo in Stratonice; the second number is devoted to the blind girl, Nydia, in which an exquisite corno Anglaise solo is heard; the third number is a depiction of the heard; the third number is a depiction of the destruction, in the midst of which is heard the hymn of the Nazarenes, and the Nydia the hymn of the spraces, and the Nyula theme is repeated.

The Damrosch orchestra and its talented conductor and organizer will be warmly welcomed in Omaha. With the exception of Theodore Thomas no man has done so much in America for the cultivation of an appression of the higher thousand manifest of the cultivation of the Control of the States themes in Music. cuation of the higher things in music. Omaha appreciates the opportunity of hearing this great orchestra, whose work it has read and heard so much praise of, and if the Apollo club's own work be not above the average club's own work be not above the average amateur mediocrity its directory has carned the gratitude and deserves the heartlest sup-port of the people of Omaha in being the chief means whereby they may enjoy a festi-val that will include the best of music inter-preted by the best of musicians in America today. "HOW DID YOU REST LAST NIGHT?" James Whiteomb Riley in Atlanta Constitution "How did you rest last night?"—
I heard my gran'pap say
Them words a thousand time—that's right—
Jes' them words thataway!
As punctchal like as mornin' dast
To ever heave in sight
Gran'pap' ad allus half to ast—
"How did you rest last night?"

Us young-uns used to grin, At breakfast on the sly, And mock the wobble of his chin And cycbrows helt so high And kind. "How did you rest last night?" We'd mumble an' let on Our voices trimbled and our sight Was dim, and hearin' gone.

Bad as I used to be. All I'm a-wantin' is As puore and ca'm a sleep fer me And sweet a sleep as his! And so I pray, on Judgment day To wake, and with its light See his face dawn and hear him say— "How did you rest last night?"

TALK OF YOUNGSTERS.

Lady Caller-Is your mamma in this afternoon! Afternoon!

Precocious Youngster—No, my mamma's not in this afternoon, see! You needn't ask any questions, or go snooking around, either. I say that she's not in, and that settles it. Mamma, from behind the door-Why, Willie, you mortify me to death.

Little Girl-That's the second time your mamma has called you.

Little Boy (busy playing)—I know.

Little Girl—Won't she whip you if you don't go? Little Boy--No; she's got company, and she'll say, "He's been real deaf since he had the measles, poor little fellow." Little Girl-It's all nonsense bout old naids never tellin' their age.

'Little Boy-Why?

"Queen Elizabeth was an old maid, wasn't "Yes."

"Well, th' paper says Prof. Dryasdust is goin' to lecture on the 'Age of Elizabeth,' so there.'

The story of the rich man's selling all he had and giving unto the poor was the sub ject under discussion in a certain Sunday school class not long ago. The teacher was illustrating the moral that the lesson conveys. One of her most attentive listeners was a little fellow scarcely 6 years old, but as bright as a dollar, and with a tongue that uses the Queen's English in a manner that would make that motherly old soul squirm if she heard it. "Now," said the teacher very impressively, "If a man is fortunate enough to make $1.000,000 in the course of his life it is his duty to give half of it at least to the poor." "Yes," interrupted a prim little girl n one corner, "but how many men make $1,000,000 in the course of their lives!" There was silence for a moment when the little fellow chirped in the caustic answer: "Darn Little Miss De Fashion-I am going to send these shoes right back. They are a miscrable misfit. Father-How? Little Miss De Fashion—They is a mile too big. They don't pinch a bit.

Little Boy-The hens out west must be awful small. Mamma—Why so? Lattle Boy-Uncle John says he's seen hailstones there as large as hen's eggs.

New Paster-Did you hear your father say now he liked my sermon yesterday! Little Johnny—He said it was too short. Well, I declare. "Yes, sir. Pop nates to get waked up out of a sound sleep."

Uncle Seadog had been relating his thrillng marine adventures, when his 7-year-old nephew remarked: "I was washed ashore once, too."

"Indeed!" exclaimed thould sailor; "when, "This morning."

Father-Who is that young man who calls here so regularly?
Mother—That's young Mr. Bullion. I think Dora has made an impression on him.
Little Johnny—Yes, indeed; there's a big white place on his shoulder.

Chicago Journal: "Children are queer," said one of them. "You never can tell about 'em. Not long ago I went after a little girl to take her to our institution. She was a queer, wild little thing, and no one could do a thing with her. I didn't like the looks of her myself. She had a hard face and an impudent little mouth. She had only a few things of her own and I packed them in my trunk.

"When we had been on the train a little while I noticed that she kept putting he hand furtively into her pocket, as if she had something hidden and wanted to see if it was all right. I watched her do this once in a while and at last I said: 'Anna, what have you got in your

"Her face crimsoned. 'Nothin',' she said. She acted so queer that I began to think of the stories they had told me about her Show me what you have there, I said.
"'Nothin', she said again, looking me de fiantly in the face.
"I argued with her a long time, and at last made her take the mysterious thing out of her pocket. It was an odd, little, clums bundle and I hated to open it for fear should find a stolen piece of jewelry or rare trinket of some sort. I unwrapped fold after fold of dirty cloth. In the center i found—what do you think?"

"A picture?" said the other woman.
"No."

"A purse?"
"No; a little, old, dirty sugar heart, tied with a piece of faded ribbon.
"Tve had it since I was little," sobbed the child, and manima used to give it to me to play with when I was good. She had it when she was little, and she used to go to bed alone, if her mother'd let her have it for company. "What did you do with the dirty thing?"

said the other woman; "throw it away?"
The first woman didn't answer for a min ute. Then she said:
"Would you have thrown it away?" "Yes," said the other, firmly, "I would
