UNION DEPOT CASE ON TRIAL

Arguments on the Howe Injunction Started in the Circuit Court.

THE TWO JOHNS EXCHANGE COURTESIES

John M. Present as the "Friend of the Court," John D. for the People—Kimball Keeps Those Guaranty Bonds.

The long drawn out union depot controversy is at last on trial on its merits in the district court before Judges Ferguson and Walton, in court room No. 3. The question to be decided is whether or not the city council will be allowed to carry out the proposed settlement agreed on by certain of the city officials some time ago, looking to a backdown on the part of the city and the severance of the last string by which it would be able to force any kind of terms from the roads.

The Union Depot company was represented this morning by C. J. Greene, attorney of the Burlington, Hon. J. M. Thurston and City Attorney Connell, while they were backed by President Holdrege of the first named road and President Kimball of the Union Depot company. On the other side of the table were John D. Howe, Hon. J. M. Woolworth and General John C. Cowin.

On the wall hung a calendar of the "Burlington Route," but up to the present time it has not been marked as an exhibit in the case.

Mr. Howe stated the case to the court for the plaintiff, reading the petition and elaborating on it to some extent in the way of explanation. He said it was charged that some of the city officials had conspired with the railroads to make the city pay part of the cost of the viaduct that had been erected on Tenth street. This could not be done directly, as no bonds could be issued to assist in the building of a viaduct, but the aid was to be given just the same under the guise of depot bonds. He said this was a subterfuge and a fraud. He then compared the plans of the depot as they were when the proposition was made to the city to vote bonds, and as they are now with the building partially erected. Forty-seven feet of the roadway had been cut off, and the plans had been changed and the contract had been changed without the knowledge or consent of the city. Not only this, but there had been expended by the Union Depot company only $40,000 or $60,000, instead of the $150,000, which was called for in the contract before the bonds were turned over by the city.

The history of the Milwaukee and Rock Island row was detailed, wherein the Union Pacific abrogated its contract with those roads when the Clark administration came into power, and but for the mandate of the court those roads would still be unable to run their trains into this city, as the Union Pacific had defied the injunction of the court before the latter conclusion was reached. The city's interest in the twenty acres of ground between Tenth street and the west end of the bridge was also touched on, and the old contract was read under which that property was placed in the hands of a trustee to be held for the execution of certain conditions which had never been performed to this day.

Thurston on the Guaranty Bond.

At the afternoon session Mr. Thurston was called by the plaintiff as the first witness. His examination was almost wholly relative to the guaranty bonds to be given by the Union Depot company and the Union Pacific Railway company, more particularly the latter, to insure the opening of the bridge to all other roads that might desire to enter the city from the east and use the depot and grounds, and enjoy all the facilities at the disposal of the depot company. The rate to be charged for such use was to be just and reasonable and subject to arbitration. The witness said he had prepared two such bonds on the part of the Union Pacific company, the first of which was drawn while Mr. Webster was city attorney. It was sent to Boston and was signed by the officials of the road and duly executed, having first had the approval of the city attorney. It came back to the witness and was ready for delivery to the city, when there was a change in the administration, and the new city attorney, Mr. Poppleton, objected to the form of the bond. Another was then prepared in accordance with his ideas, and that was also duly executed by the company. It was in the hands of the witness, ready to be delivered, when the injunction proceedings were begun and a stop put to all further proceedings up to this time.

Mr. Howe asked if the company was ready now to turn over this indemnifying bond to the city provided the injunction was dissolved.

Objection was raised, but it was overruled by the court. The witness then said that this was a question for the officials of the Union Depot company to answer.

Howe Says the U. P. Holds the Bond.

Howe then asked if the bond was in the possession of the Union Depot company, and again objection was raised. Howe said that the bond had not been in the possession of the Union Depot company for two years, but had been in the hands of the Union Pacific Rail way company, so that the Union Depot company could not have turned it over to the city had it so desired to do. It was proposed to show on his side that this condition existed now, even if it did not exist two years ago, for the Union Pacific company had openly refused to abide by the provisions of this contract with the city, the new management having abrogated the old conditions, and would not allow other roads to cross according to these terms, nor give a bond to that effect.

The court held that the question should be answered, and Mr. Thurston said that he gave the bond to Mr. Kimball, president of the depot company. When asked if he could control the delivery of the bonds to the city, witness said that he could influence the disposition to be made of them. He was questioned as to the attitude of President Clark of the Union Pacific company regarding the matter, and said that for twenty years it had been the policy of the road to court the entry to this city across the bridge of the company of all the Iowa roads, and it was the same today.

Mr. Howe wanted to know on what terms such traffic was desired and was told that reasonable rates were all that was demanded. Howe would not have it that way, and insisted that this offer was a bluff, and that the other roads could not get in except by paying just as much as would be charged for a car of freight. Thurston denied that it was a bluff and was allowed to step aside.

Kimball Keeps the Bonds.

Mr. Kimball was next called, and his examination occupied the remainder of the afternoon. He was asked as to the present whereabouts of the guaranty bonds and replied that they were not accessible to him. He refused at first to say that they were in his possession, but when pinned down to it stated that they were given to him for delivery to the city two years ago, but the delivery had been stopped by the injunction proceedings, and the bonds had remained in his possession ever since. He declined to say where they were as to office location, but said they were in his personal possession. He said he was an officer of the depot company, and for twenty-two years and until within a year had been connected with the Union Pacific company, but was now only a high private so far as the latter corporation was concerned.

The old and new plans were then discussed. Howe wanted to know how it happened that the sketch of the plans, originally submitted with the proposition to vote bonds, had been removed from the city clerk's office, where it had been placed on file. He was told that the sketch was the property of the architect and he supposed that it had been taken by the owner. The witness subsequently remembered that the sketch had been returned to his office and supposed that it had reached the owner through that channel.

Objection was made to having it said that the sketch was on "file," and a word that did not mean so much was substituted, it being stated that the sketch was merely "left" there for inspection. Howe read from the proposition to show that the new depot was to conform substantially to the sketch in the clerk's office, but it was held that there was no sketch officially on file there, with which comparison was to be made.

Howe Sustained by the Court.

Witness said he knew that the new plans called for a building much smaller on the ground than the original one, which was to be 447 feet long, but it was to be five stories high, instead of three stories. He didn't remember whether or not the depot company got out the tickets for the bond election, neither could he remember whether or not there were any "no" tickets in the field. He knew that it was announced in the papers a few days before the election that there would be a change in the plans, and that the old train shed would be done away with, but that the same substantial appearance as in the plans previously discussed would be preserved. The first plans showed a building with some brick, but mostly of stone, while the one now in course of erection shows some stone, but is mostly of brick.

Howe sought to read from a newspaper report of a meeting of the Real Estate exchange, at which a speech was made by Thurston reciting why he had covered up the real object of the bonds in their wording, as there was no authority on which the city could vote bonds for either a viaduct or a union depot, and that it was the ultimatum of the Union Pacific directors that they could not build both a viaduct and depot without some assistance from the city. He asked the witness if he remembered it, as he was there at the time. Objection was raised, and Howe stated that the presence of the president of the company, who was working to the same end as Thurston, proved that the company was seeking the issuance of the bonds, and was holden for the acts of its agent. He wanted to show what representations were held out to the people to vote the bonds, and what they were induced to believe they were going to get in return for their money. Thurston objected, and Howe again insisted to know for whom he was appearing in the case. The general solicitor of the Union Pacific said he was there assisting Mr. Greene, and Howe was satisfied. The court held that interviews and statements made after the submission of the proposition, touching upon the bond and plan questions, were admissible.

An adjournment was then taken until today.

IOWA COLLEGE AFFAIRS.

Spring's Return Brings Great Interest in Out Door Athletics.

GRINNELL, Ia., May 8.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—The new athletic park, recently founded by the class of '93, will be named the "Cowden Field," after A. M. Cowden, '92, who was one of the most enthusiastic athletes and who did much toward winning for Iowa college the place she now holds at the head in the athletics of the west.

The students, among themselves, have subscribed $10,000 toward a Young Men's Christian association building, which will contain gymnasia for young men and women and social rooms in which to hold their meetings. W. M. Parsons will have charge of the subscription list from now on, and will complete it to $40,000 or $45,000.

The estate of Cornelius B. Irwin, valued at $1,750,000, has been settled. After many bequests he left $400,000 to be divided among five colleges—Iowa, Olivet, Ripon, Marietta and Talledega. Thus Iowa college will add $80,000 to the regular endowment of the institution.

The Iowa College Base Ball club left Friday evening in their special car upon its eastern trip. Saturday, May 6, it won a game at Peoria, Ill., 14 to 4. Today the club plays at Champaign, Ill.; at Madison, Wis., May 9; at Beloit, Wis., May 10; at Decorah, Ia., May 11, and at Iowa City, Ia., May 12. The list of games in the Iowa intercollegiate league to be played by the team is: Drake, at Grinnell, April 22 (rain); Decorah, at Grinnell, April 29 (rain); Iowa City, at Iowa City, May 12; Ames, at Ames, May 29; Cornell, at Grinnell, May 27; Madison, at Grinnell, May 31; S. U. I., at Grinnell, June 13.

Sidney G. Stacy, A. B., Bowdoin '88, fellow of the Johns Hopkins university, has accepted the professorship of Latin, to be vacated by Prof. Moses S. Slaughter, who will travel in Europe.

Prof. J. C. Nellen, who has taught in the State university, but who has been studying abroad for four or five years, will occupy the chair of modern language in Iowa college next year. Prof. Calkus, who has most ably filled that position for the past two years, will go to Harvard.

On Saturday, May 13, will occur the eighth annual field day of Iowa college. It promises to excel all previous ones. There are offered more prizes than ever before, and the contests will be closer. Sixteen gold and six silver medals are offered, and a cup will be awarded to the class winning the most points. From the contestants in this field day will be chosen the team to represent Iowa college at the state field day in Des Moines June 2. Iowa college has won the state intercollegiate championship in track athletics for two years, and by winning it again next June will acquire the cup given to the college winning it three successive years as a permanent possession.

SCRAMBLE FOR OFFICE.

Aspirants for the Three Positions on the Board of Public Works.

With the approach of the first Tuesday in July candidates for appointment to the Board of Public Works are becoming very numerous, and each is vigorously pushing his claim for recognition at the hands of Mayor Bemis. Already several castors have been shied into the arena and the battle is about to commence in earnest.

There still exists a doubt as to whether, under the new charter, one or three members can be appointed. The candidates are giving themselves the benefit of the doubt, and are praying that it will be found necessary to appoint three members, in which case they will stand a more equal show of success than if but one is named. Major Birkhauser steps down and out on the first Tuesday in July; no question has been raised on that point. But on the other hand Major Balcombe and Major Furay and their friends contend that they are not legislated out of position, but will serve until the end of their terms. The city council takes the opposite view of the case, and is laying for the scalps of the two majors. It will be a fight to the finish.

The wires are already set and the candidates are pulling them faithfully. Major Balcombe is not anticipating removal nor is Major Furay, although they may have to be reappointed. The other aspirants believe that the majors stand no show in case of reappointment and they are waging battle among themselves for supremacy. Many names are mentioned and each possesses more or less backing. Ex-Councilman Shriver is ambitious in this direction and George J. Paul is toying with the lightning rod. Richard Smith would not refuse the honor and it is said Street Commissioner Winspear is anxious to continue in the public service. Charles Unitt is also looking in the same direction. It is early in the game and more candidates will spring up before the eventful first Tuesday in July.

CHARLES KENNEDY,
G. N.-W. P. A.

Judge Berka's Monday Morning Mill.

The greater number of the petty offenders who appeared before the bar of justice in police court yesterday morning consisted of plain unvarnished drunks.

Barton Hiles was assessed $10 and costs for his spree, as it had brought him before Judge Berka for the third time. J. M. Ingalls' overindulgence only costs him $1 and costs. The same fine for a like offense was recorded against Minnie White, who occupies a house in the burnt district. James Davis received $5 and costs.

The cases against Ida Thompson and Mary Black, with reputations that matched their ebon complexions, the charge against whom was drunk and disorderly conduct, were continued, so that the arresting patrolman may add his mite toward giving them their just dues.

Half a dozen cases, where the subjects had forgotten themselves for the first time, were discharged.

Sheriff Sale and Seizure.

The sheriff yesterday sold the machinery in the Rosebery planing mill to satisfy a claim of the First National bank. It was bought by the bank for $1,700. The claim is about $8,000.

The liquor stock of C. B. Connor & Co., which was sold by the sheriff a few days ago to satisfy the claims of creditors, and was bought by John Connor for $500, was again seized yesterday by the sheriff on attachment of other eastern creditors who were unable to get in on the first deal.

AN INDIAN'S ORATION.

Flying Cloud's Masterly and Thrilling Speech.

Worthy of Ingersoll, Blaine, Gladstone or Bismarck—The Bloody Past and the Peaceful Present—Presented in a Verbal Panorama—Here is a Lesson to Heed.

The Indian is the most poetic race in the world, in their relations with their own; in their habits when not on the warpath; in their customs, songs, dances; in their belief in the happy hunting ground, and in their conceptions of the Great Manitou.

The following is an extract from the speech of Flying Cloud, a famous Kickapoo medicine man:

"Children of the Great Spirit, whose form is in the air, though invisible, I am here to tell you of our wrongs and of our rights!

"Four hundred years ago a Great White Man sailed from Spain to find a New World. That World was the Red Man's. Then all went well with our Forefathers from the upper waters of the Hurons to the Great Warm Gulf that kissed the land of Fruit and Flowers, where the Seminoles hunted and fished.

Catlin says: "The word of an Indian can always be relied upon."

"The Indian welcomed the White Man, and for that welcome our people were driven step by step toward the great Salt Lake, beneath which drops the Great Spirit's Eye every day when twilight comes down upon the earth.

"We are scattered like leaves when autumn winds shake the trees of the forest.

"We, the Kickapoos, whose home was once in Illinois, later in Kansas, and is now in the land of the Sacs and Foxes, are at peace with the White Man. What we have, that we will give to our White Brother.

"Our Kickapoo Indian Sagwa makes men live to be one hundred years old.

"There are Red Men living who have used it ever since they were young men, and who are now so old that they can only sit, lie and sleep in the sun.

"Our Kickapoo Indian Oil is the foe of pain.

"Our Kickapoo Cough Cure stops the hand of death.

"Our Kickapoo Indian Salve heals and cures all wounds, and our Kickapoo Worm Killer preserves the lives of papooses.

"Our 'Sagwa'—good medicine—is from the great mother of us all—Nature. All that is best that grows in the woods, that blossoms on the plain, that hides in the earth, our Sagwa contains. It has preserved the lives of our warriors and our women.

"It acts upon the body like sunshine on the trees and flowers, and gives life and strength to all who use it. Men and women who partake of it freely can only die of old age.

"This secret which the Kickapoos alone possess, they give freely to their white brother. It is our richest offering.

"I have spoken. Let the voices of the world bear answer to what I have said!"

Without doubt the Indian has a profound knowledge of the mysterious herbs with which they cure radically many formidable diseases which baffle the greatest physicians of the world.

Those remedies can now be obtained of any druggist or wholesale dealer. The Kickapoo Indian Sagwa is one dollar per bottle. Six for five dollars. The Cough Cure is fifty and all the other remedies twenty-five cents per bottle. In using these remedies you may be absolutely certain that they are purely vegetable, that they contain no acids or mineral poisons, because the Indians know absolutely nothing of these harmful drugs.

The Kickapoo Indian Medicines are genuine Indian made. How they came to be given to the world is fully explained in our large book, which we gladly send free to all applying who care for it sufficiently to write us enclosing three 2c stamps to pay postage. THREE THINGS

To think of in buyings for boys—color—style and wear—and the greatest of these is wear. You can sometimes find a good deal of style in a shoddy garment and many handsome shades and colors are found where wear is lacking; but to get style—"stay so" colors and "wear as they should" cloths in

They are in solid hard twisted cassimeres—every thread wool—goods that will wear and wear, and then wear a little while longer. The style is correct for the season—the color is a shade between a tan and a brown. They are in ages 5 to 14—and every suit has five dollars worth of wear concealed somewhere about it. For a week or less, as the suits hold out—they're $3.50 A SUIT. We will also offer 200 big boy's and
