All in the Way of Trade. Silas Cobb was an applicant for an injune tion yesterday, but did not get it. He appeared as the attorney for Julius Furth, who alleged that one of his runners had been unlawfully interfered with by Hayden Bros. It seems that Furth has had men on the streets distributing cards and soliciting trade, and when they failed to get sufficient returns elsewhere they took a position in front of the store of Hayden Bros. and there plied their vocation among people who were going to the latter place to trade. In self-defense the latter firm had their men warn people thus solicited to be careful about being imposed upon and know where they were going. It was the intention of Furth and his attorney to have the Haydens arrested for soliciting without a license, but they found that Haydens' men had done no soliciting, and they then sought to secure an injunction to

The hall was brilliantly lighted and fairly shone in its fresh coat of paint and varnish Its walls were covered with new paper and hung with oil paintings, its windows hidden by lace, and its rostrum richly carpeted and decorated with fings and draperies. Brooke and Mrs. Dr. Chris-tic, president of Grant corps, Dr. Stone tic, president of Grant corps. Dr. Stone was in his element and led off with a happy introductory speech.

Jules Lumbard, who had stirred many a patriotic heart in war times, opened the proceedings by singing "Rally 'Round the Flag." and was followed in a short address by Mrs. Augusta Henderson of the Women's Relief corps, who told of the organization and progress of the body which she represented. General Veazey, who had unex pectedly arrived in the city, addressed th old soldiers in a complimentary manner and offered as a benediction "God Bless the Old Soldier and Preserve Him Forever."

Miss Clara Clarkson rendered in sweetest tones the song, "Good Night," and Alonzo Church, grand commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in Nebraska, spoke of Army of the Republic in Nebraska, spoke of the loyalty of the old soldiers to the stars and stripes. They went to war because of the love they bore for their country, and if any one now sought to tear "Old Glory" down, they would be just as eager to fly to the rescue as in 1861. Jules Lumbard sang with telling effect, "I Fear No Foe," and upon being recalled rendered the humorous song, "Sweet Pagery."

ong, "Sweet Peggy."

Ex-Governor Saunders was introduced as the last surviving war governor. He said Nebraska had, in time of war, done her full duty. He had been appointed governor a few days after Lincoln's inauguration and had been immediately ordered to raise troops to go the front. Coming to Nebraska he issued his proclamation. The identical document, now thirty-two years of age, the governor produced and read, saying it was the first war document issued in Nebraska and called its first troops to suppress the rebellion. The soldiers, he continued, had a double task upon their hands, for they were beset not only by traitors in the south but also by savages on the north and west, and there was actually a larger force in the Inan service at the beginning than wa pitted against the rebels. The Indians took advantage of their troubles with the south being merted to do so by Quantrell and other rebel leaders and sympathizers. A fortunate event occurred however. The Pawnees, then hostile, became involved in war with the Sioux, and upon the governor's obtaining for them a cannon with which to defend themselves against the Sloux, they became peace able and so remained ever after. At the close of the war, and on the very day before he was shot. President Lincoln paid a compli-ment through the governor to the people of Nebraska for the loyalty and valuable as sistance they had rendered the cause of the

There was a time when the world was tired of war The French revolution came like an explo The French revolution came like an explosion and Napoleon, seeing his opportunity, seized all Europe. Later, his clutch was broken and the nations began to build up. He at one time thought this country should ever be free from war, but now thought it was best that the war had occurred. The period of progress before it could never have been entered upon and carried to its present stage, had not the heat of war melted all hearts into one. The dead were not the only heroes. Many of those now living had seen the time when it would have been easier to die than to live. "Lay garlands," he said.
"upon the graves of the departed, but put chaplets upon the brows of those who survived the struggle." He then gave a vivid picture of the riots in New York City, telling of the awful mistake made by the soldiers in firing upon the mob with blank cartridges and how upon one day, innocent negroes were hung upon the lamp posts and how on the next the colored troops, under General Butler, marched triumphantly down Broad-way and restored order. UNITED WORKMEN IN STATE CONVENTION

Glowing Reports of the Growth and Prosperity of the Order-New Officers Elected-Ascension Day Celebrations Notes from Lodges.

Tuesday of last week the grand lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen assembled in biennial session at Lincoln. more than 400 delegates being present, representing the local lodges in all parts of the state. The session was an enthusiastic one, and a vast amount of business was disposed of and a great deal of beneficial legislation was enacted.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday morning the session was called to order in representative hall. The lodge was immediately opened for grand lodge degree work, and those not having had the degree conferred were initiated. One committee especially, the one to which Grand Master Tate's report had been referred, aroused considerable interest in the discussions. Tate was not content to allow the others to discuss his work without being in a position to first ex-riain his intentions, so he yielded the chair to a brother while he took the floor and made one of his characteristic addresses. The troversy was a recommendation to the effect that the moral tenets of the order should be adhered to closer than they were. The report further recommended the rigid enforce-ment of the law prohibiting the use of intox-icating drink by the members of the order. Numerous instances were cited wherein these laws had not been kept inviolate as they should have been. The members pres ent all coincided with the grand master in his views on this subject.

A number of committee reports were then read and adopted, with the exception of the reports of the grand recorder and grand re-ceiver, which were referred to the commit-tee on finance. The report of Grand Medical Examiner Holyoge was then taken up and discussed, after which the lodge adjourned.

In the afternoon a grand street parade took place, more than 400 uniformed workmen participating. The march was through the principal streets of Lincoln to the capiol, where the line was broken and the grand odec was reconvened in session.

In the evening the Lincoln workmen tendered the visitors a complimentary banquet at the Lansing theater. Mayor Weir de-livered an address of welcome and turned the city over to the delegates. Good music was provided, and short addresses were made by W. S. Houseworth, Dr. E. H. Chapin, Rev. John Hewitt and Rev. Byron Master Workman Tate de-Grand Master Workman Tate livered the principal address of the evening, and it was an eloquent effort.

Wednesday's session was devoted to the discussion and disposition of routine work and the adoption of rules for the sessions of the grand lodge. The special auditing committee reported the financial condition of the order as being very good.

The most important business of the day's session was the election of officers for the ensuing two years as follows: J. G. Tate of Hastings was re-elected grand master workman by acclamation. For grand foreman R. W. Laffin of Wymore and James Jaskalek of South Omaha were named, Laffin winning. J. C. Hayes of Champion and J. W. Hunts-berger were nominated for grand overseer, and the count of ballots resulted in Hayes' election. L. A. Payne of Grand Island was unanimously re-elected grand recorder and a like honor was conferred on W. H. Jones of Broken Bow, grand watchman. The contest of Seward, W. H. Davis of McCook and John Converse of Fairbury. Polley was selected. For grand guide F. E. Smith of Albion, John Hawley of North Platte, R. O. Rewick of Carleton and T. H. Cullom of Schuyler were ominated, Hawley being elected by a good plurality.

At the afternoon session the complement of officers was filled by the election of the following: Grand trustee, E. W. Johnson,

THE THEATERS.

Light opera at the Boyd this week, with the Calhoun Opera company as the exponent thereof. The company is said to be vocally satisfactory and the operas are well staged. Miss Laura Millard is the prima donna soprano of the organization. She has done some excellent work in her class and is sure to maintain the good reputation she made year as principal in "The Little on." Miss Amy Leslie is also with the Calhouns and her friends in Omaha will doubtless give her a warm welcome. All the members of the company highly com-mended, and with a good strong chorus and an increased orchestra it may be expected that the works to be presented will be all that even the critical could wish. Stahl's "Said Pasha" opens the season tonight and continues till Wednesday, when it will be re-placed by "Beccacio" for two nights, to be followed on Friday and Saturday evenings by "Fantinitza." Nearly all the critics have a good word to say of Frank Lindon's production of "The Son of Monte Cristo." It begins a week's engagement at the Farnam this afternoon. The play is a strong one, full of strong situations, and its comedy is pleasing, making an excellent foil to the more serious in-cidents of the drama. The company, headed by Frank Lindon and his daughter Edna, is a good one, and every part is said to be adequately played.

This week's change of bill at the Bijou brings on "The Wages of Sin," a sterling comedy drama of the good old sort, present ing characters that are sure to receive capa-ble interpretation at the lands of the thea-ter's excellent stock company.

The poomerang throwers, right from the depths of the Australian bush, which have proved such a drawing card for the past seven days, will give an open air exhibition at the fair grounds this afternoon at 2:30. A highly interesting show may be promised Boomerang throwing, an act in itself worth going miles to see, dancing of the corroboree a native dance, and illustrations of how this lowest type of the human species lives make up the exhibition, which should draw big
