of one of Omaha's best known citizens. He reviewed the work of the official year, the number of priests, parishes, persons confirmed, baptisms made, sermons preached, and all that occurred in the life of a busy, hardworking father of the flock.

to carry forward a load that crushes and endures a toll beyond the strength of the mind, and greater than figures and numbers can measure. 'Coming down to later times, he spoke of the elevation of George Worthington to the episcopacy of Nebraska, and said: 'The new bishop, as the church has a pioneer as the old one. The work was pressed with great vigor. Whenever a new town appeared, the bishop developed itself in the midst of the increasing population and at the same time a resolution was passed memorializing the general convention of the diocese for the purpose of catechizing the pupils of the schools with the hope that it would tend to raise a national sentiment in the church. He put his own down upon theatrical entertainments, dances and other worldly pleasures used by some churches as a means to raise money, and he trusts his would not have to say more upon this subject.'
