Jim Seevers, a young man in the employ of Eli Brown, tried to commit suicide yesterday shortly after noon. Four shots were heard in rapid succession from the second floor, and Mr. Brown, who was in the store

during the noon hour, ran up stairs to see what was the matter. He found Seevers lying on the floor beside a chair from which he had evidently just fallen. A revolver was in his hand and the blood was pouring in a

right car. Help was at once summoned and a medical examination was made which re-sulted in the discovery that Seevers was not with him state that he used to be a first-class workman when sober, and it is only Brown's liking for him that kept him the situation so long. For the last two weeks he has hardly drawn a sober breath.

The fourth took effect just above the right car and glanced upward, coming out an inch or so above the place where it went in, inflicting a small scalp wound that bled vigo ously, but doing no further damage. The shot was from a 32-caliber Smith & Wesson, and the fact that it failed to accomplish a result any more dire speaks in glowing terms of the hardness of Mr. Seevers' skull. He was taken to the Woman's Christian Association hospital, where he is having the best of treatment. It sulted in the discovery that Seevers was not killed, but had had a rather narrow escape. Seevers has had a great deal of trouble from his tendencies to drink more than his stomach actually needed. In fact he had taken the Keely treatment twice, but each time went back to his cups with a fervor that resulted in his becoming almost a chronic drunkard. The men in the store with him state that he used to be a first. William Arnd, treasurer of the Council Bluffs lodge, No. 270, Ancient Order of United Workmen, was presented with a fine easy chair at the meeting of the lodge Fri-

Judge Deemer overruled the city's motion for a new trial yesterday in the case of L. L. he has hardly drawn a sober breath. Yesterday noon he went up stairs and a few minutes later brought into active use the gun which he had provided for him-self. Three shots failed to hit the mark at all, but were picked out of the ceiling later on by Officer Wiatt and given to the coroner as evidence in case the cor-oner's services should be required. The fourth took effect just abave Hendricks against the city, in which a judg-ment for $3,500 was recently rendered in favor of the plaintiff.

The June term of the superior court will commence tomorrow morning. The follow-ing are the jurors: L. Zurmuehlen, O. H. Lucas, J. Kilday, John Mulqueen, L. Swear-T. Whittlesey, John Ketring, J. S. Miller and S. Covalt.

Miss Neal, assisted by Miss Howe, Miss Lillian Jackson, Mrs. I. Lovett and Mrs. E. H. Lougee will entertain the ladies of St. Paul's Guild at a medley social next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. H. W. Tilton, 527 Fifth avenue.

The police made a raid Friday night on an alleged disreputable house on Vine street, which has caused much complaint from the neighbors. Edward Barrett, Cora Calhoun and Milton and Allie Beebe were arrested and will have a trial next Thursday.

GFrank Tichnor was arrested early yester-day morning on the charges of drunkenness and larceny. He was tried in police courand found guilty of stealing a coat and vest from Utterback's stable. He will serve out a thirty day sentence in the county fail.

A meeting of the Alumni of the Council Bluffs High school is announced for tomor-row evening at the office of Superintendent Bawyer in the Bloomer school. Arrange-ments will be made for an Alumni reception immediately after the close of the school

The pupils of the Eighth avenue school The pupils of the Eighth avenue school were entertained yesterday afternoon at a picnic in Fairmount park. One of the amusements provided for the pupils was a race between Justice Vicn and four little girls, in which the justice managed to come out ahead, minus a large amount of breath.

Baird Bros. received a turtle from the Gulf of Mexico yesterday which is said to weigh 350 pounds. During the afternoon it grew rapidly, and when a sign was painted on its shell about 5 o'clock it gave the weight as 500 pounds. The phenomenon was witnessed by a large crowd of people with the liveliest interest.

Lottie Beadle was given an examination by the commissioners of insanity yesterday morning. The commissioners came to the conclusion that while she was very near the verge of insanity they would not be war-ranted in sending her to any of the state in-stitutions for treatment. She was accordingly given over into the hands, of her driends and left for home in the afternoon.

One of the heaviest rain storms, if not the heaviest, that will ever experienced in South Omaha set in about 5 o'clock last night and in thirty minutes the streets were rushing streams of water and not a person could be seen on the city's thoroughfares. In addition to rainfall there was terrific thunder and lightning. Torrents of water went gushing down N street, and at the intersection of N and Twenty-sixth, where the water met at the base of the two hills, there was a regular maelstrom. The cellar under Mr. Pivonka's office on the corner of the alley between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth, on N street. was filled with water in twenty minutes from the time the rain began to fall. The damage will not be heavy here as there was nothing in the cellar but plumbers' stock.

Narrow Escapes from Drowolng.

At half past 8 o'clock the curbing at Twenty-seventh and N streets gave way and a perfect flood of water rushed into the basement of E. W. Tichnor's restaurant, filling the rooms to the ceiling in less than five minutes. Mr. Tichnor lives in the basement and his help also occupy rooms there. The members of the family who were in the basement at the time barely had time to get out with their lives. Anna Mackey and Clara Juchniess were in the act of changing their garments and had to flee with simply a dress. They even lost their shoes and stockings. All of Mr. Tichnor's household goods are runed, and his wife and himself will loose all their clothing.

A few minutes after the police were called to Mr. Tichnor's place there was a terrific noise, and it was announced that the wall on the west side of the jail had caved in. This is the wall that protects the area way, and it has been considered dangerous for some Braces were put in only a few days When the brick caved in they smashed time. ago. down the doors and windows and gave the nmates a terrible fright. Officer Kruger came within an ace of being buried in the ruins. He had his hand on the door knob and was in the act of opening it, when some person called to him and he turned to see what was wanted. As he did so the crash came and he sprang back far enough to avoid being struck. There was one prisoner and Officer Argebright in the station at the time. The damage will be about $300. The telephone wires were working badly, but enough could be understood that several shantles in the vicinity of Twenty-ninth and H and Twenty-eigth and J streets were be ing deluged with water and that assistance was needed. Chief Beckett notified the firemen and Captain Austin assisted in soon getting a crowd of men together and at the scene. When The BEE reporter arrived at the place the water was up to the roofs of the shantles and there was great excitement. All hands were willing and the women and children were soon carried to where it was dry and placed in a railroad car, where they were made comfortable until morning. Joe Wolf and Jack Hensen of the section gang were on the ground early and did good work. About fifty women and children were placed in one of the boarding cars. Helped Those in Danger.

The woman said that she had nothing in her trunk except articles that rightfully belonged to her. Schmidt then replevined the trunk and a search developed that certain small pieces of linen in it bore Schmidt's mark. Her statement is that Schmidt put his mark on the goods in order to beat her. The whole matter will be thoroughly aired in Justice Levy's court on next Tuesday.

He was captured on September 18, 1776, by the British and hung at sunrise on Sunday morning, September 22, in the orchard of Colonel Henry Rutgers, near what is now the junction of Market street and East Broadway, New York. Hale was an American spy. He had in many respects his prototype in John Andre, the British spy who was executed by the revolutionists. He was a typical New England boy. He was born at Coventry Corner, Mass., June 6, 1755. His grandfather was one of the early settlers of Massachusetts, graduated at Har-vard college and attended the Salem witch-craft trials in 1692 and approved the judicial statue, by MacMonais. It has been exhibited in the Paris Salon and has had the approval of high authorities on art in Europe and here. The statue has for some time been in the studio of Augustus St. Gaudens. After being officially approved by New York City's murders that resulted. Nathan Hale at-tended Yale college and graduated in 1772. He was then 18 years of age. What the Rain Did.

Last night's storm was one of the hardest over seen in Council Bluffs. From 7:30 o'clock until five or six hours later it was a steady downpour, the register at the water works office showing a fall of an inch and a half in forty minutes. All over the city the water ran above the curbstones and flooded cellars and in many cases the first floors of the houses. The streets were so full of water that persons who were compelled to cross and were unprovided with appliances for wading hired backs to convey them to for wading hired hacks to convey them to the other side of the street. Almost every cellar on Upper Broadway will be found this morning with a couple of fect or more of water. A patch of cedar block paving on Oakland avenue about 75 feet long and 10 feet wide was torn loose and the blocks went sailing down the place that was once Washington avenue. Many business houses on Lower Main street were also flooded, the Ploneer Implement warehouse being one of ioneer Implement warehouse being one of the most unfortunate. Harrison street and almost the entire eastern part of the city were damaged considerably.

The Mayne Real Estate Co., 621 Broad-way, is well equipped in every depart-ment of the business.

five trains to carry the multitude down At the lake every arrangement had been made to make the day a memorable one. The Galloway Specialty company gave a fine matinee performance in the incompleted pavilion opera house. It was just what the intile people and all others liked, and they stirred the depths of the lake with their shouts of approval. Dalbey's band gave a concert after the matinee, and there were many other special features to please the hildren. One was especially new and novel. Colonel Reed had bought fifteen boxes of oranges, and hit upon a novel manner of dis-tributing them. He cleared the crowd from the big lawn for a few moments and then scattered the oranges over an acre of the the children into the golden field and let them scramble for the fruit. During the afternoon several thousand of the children and their guardians were given free excursions on the lake, the big steamer Max Meyer and Ed Ainscow's two safe and sturdy little flyers furnishing the means. Everything was free and the children of the three cities owned the take and everything in

Employing Prominent Men.

The Perpetual Maturity Bonding Company of Council Bluffs has the dis-tinction of having in its employ as agents some of the best men in the counry, and this is one of the reasons why their singularly simple plan of saving and making money upon small invest-ments has become so popular. Among the prominent men who have recently become associated with the company in this capacity is Hon. Alonzo Perkins, who has been on the Nebraska bench for thirteen years. He has been appointed general agent for Northeastern Newith headquarters at Blair. A switch engine took a run down to Albright about 9:30 o'clock but could not get through. The Rock Island tracks are all washed out, and the operator was seen sitting on top of the depot in order to keep from being soaked. A number of families had to be taken from their houses in flat boats and other contrivances, as the water rose so rapidly that they were surrounded Fire Chief Smith, Chief Beckett and Mike the "Peeper" Arrested.

"Mike the Peeper" was run in last night by Officer Emerick and is booked as a suspicious character. He gave the name of Mike Powledge. The fellow has been shadowed by the police for several days and has been seen loafing about saloons and has no occupation. Early last evening he was seen approaching the windows of several houses in the eastern part of the city and peeping through them. What his object was is not known, as it was too early to commit a burglary as none of the people in the vicinity he visited had retired. At one or two places he asked for something to eat, but it is supposed that he was spotting a place to enter later on and commit robbery. Several women and children were badly frightened at his placing his face at the window and if he had been caught last night it is likely that he would have been roughly handled. All day long he evaded the police, but at dusk this even ing he was gathered in just he was starting out on another roundup.

John Snively, the city garbage master, got away with ninety-nine dogs in the month of May. He expects to do three times that much business during the present month, as was increasing to an ominous tension. The political situation was well understood by young Hale when he left college and when news of the battle of Lexington reached New London, Conn., where he was teaching school, he called a meeting of his fellow townsmen in the school house to take action. That was Nathan Hale's debut in public as a patriot. To those who faltered he said: "Let us march immediately to the battlefield and never lay down our arms until we have obtained our independence." last words.

Hale was made a lieutenant in Colone. Webb's regiment, known as "the Nineteenth Continentals," and early in 1776 was pro-moted to a captaincy. On August 27 Webb's command, with others, was hurried over to Long Island, but took no part in the engage ment that culminated in the defeat of Wash-ington's army. On August 30 the skillful re-treat of Washington to New York City was begun and Hale was transferred to the mand of a company in the Connecticut rangers known as "Congress' Own."

rangers known as "Congress' Own." It was at this point that he became a fa-mous character in American history. A spy was needed to gain information of the enemy's movements. Hale volunteered and reported to General Washington at the house of Robert Murray on Murray Hill in 'New York City. What specific instructions, advice and cautions Hale received from Wash-nation is not recorded but suffere it to any ngton is not recorded, but suffice it to say that he made his way back to Connecticut, assumed the garb of a schoolmaster and a loyalist and in this guise mingled with the tories and the British troops. He was on his way back to Washington's headquarters on September 18, 1776, when headquarters on September 18, 1776, when his diguise was penetrated and he was cap-tured by a clever trick on Long Island Sound and placed on board a British man-of-war. He was brought to New York and delivered to General Howe. The British commander examined him, but there was no formal trial, and Hale was condemned to die on September 22 at sunrise. He never flinched, His willing executioner was Provest Marshal His willing executioner was Provost Marshal William Cunningham, a man of violent and coarse nature, who hated the Revolutionists with a bitterness past understanding. Hale, whose request for a bible had been denied, passed his last night on earth writing to his parents, his sister and to his be-trothed. These letters were given into Cun-ningham's hands. He cruelly tore them up before Hale's eyes, "so" as he said, "the rebels should never know they had a man who could die with such firmness." Hale was hung to the limb of an old apple tree. He was made to climb a ladder that the noose might be placed about his neck. Before complying he said impressively: "You are shedding the blood of the innocent wif I had 10,000 lives I would lay them down in defense of my injured, bleeding country.

His last words were: "I only regret that I have but one life to loso for my country." The words had hardly escaped his lips when Cunningham, with a malignant leer, kicked the ladder from under the condemned man.

Many years afterward Lafayette in his memoirs thus described the sad scene: "Captain Hale of Connecticut, a distin-guished young man, beloved by his family and friends, had been taken on Long Island and friends, had been taken on Long Island under circumstances of the same kind as those that occasioned the death of Major Andre, but instead of being treated with the like respect, to which Major Andre himself bore testimony, Captain Hale was insulted to the last moment of his life. 'This is a fine death for a soldier!' said one of the English officers who were surrounding the Eart of execution. 'Sir,' replied Hale, lifting up his cap, 'there is no death which would not be rendered noble in such a glorious cause.' He calmly replaced his cap, and the fatal cart moving on he died with the most perfect composure.

perfect composure. Hale left no descendants to glory in the deed of their ancestor. His nephews and grandnephews were able and noted journalgrandhephews were able and noted journal-ists, and the mental development as well as the honorable character of the Hale race has been manifest in each generation. His grandniece, Lucretia Peabody, was an authoress well worthy of mention, and the literary career of Edward Everett Hale, her brother-but that is another, a modern and familiar story.

disappointing, says Richard Harding Davis in Harper's Weekly. It means so much, and so many lives have been given for it, and so many great ships sunk by its batteries, and such great powers have warred for 1.200 years for its few miles of stone, that its black outline against the sky, with nothing to meas-ure it with but the fading stars, is dwarfed and spoiled. It is only after the sun begins to turn the lights out and you are able to compare it with the great ships at its base, and you see the battlements and the mouths of cannon, and the clouds resting on its top, that you understand it, and then, when the Omaha outline of the crouching lion that has faced all Europe for 100 years comes into relief, you remember it is, as they say, the lock to the Mediterranoan, of which England holds the key. And even while you feel this, and are greedily following the course of each rampart and terrace with eyes that are fired of blank stretches of water, some one points to a low line of mountains lying like blue clouds before the red sky of the sunrise, dim, forbidding and mysterious-and you know that it is Africa.
