Partners Did Not Agree. Shook, Patterson & Co. secured a temporary injunction yesterday restraining the sheriff from selling their stock of goods to satisfy claims aggregating $30,000 in favor of the Omaha National bank and haif a dozen other creditors. Shook, Patterson & Co. were doing a wholesale jewelry business on Douglas street, over Hospe's store, and last spring they be-came involved. At that time John A. Patterson, one of the members of the firm, went into court and confessed judgment for the full amount of the indebtedness, after which the property was levied upon and the sale ad-vertised for yesterday. When Deputy Lewis went to the premises he was confronted by the order of the court, instructing him to keep his hands off until the case could be heard and determined. In the prayer for the restraining order Shook alleges that his partner, Patterson, confessed judgment without the knowledge or consent of the other members of the firm, and without even having consulted them regarding the mat-ter.

Reports of Rich Gold Discoveries in Wyoming Are Confirmed. MARVELOUS WEALTH IN PALMER MOUNTAIN

Scaling Devil's Tower-Sheep War Still Threatening-More Mineral Discoveries - Scraps from Everywhere.

The great gold discoveries recently ansounced in the South Pass country of Wyoming are attracting unusual interest. The location of the recent finds is about thirty mites south of Lander and eleven miles from the old California trail, which was the scene of the great overland immigration across the continent to the Pacific coast. Two old gold mining camps are in the immediate vicinity-Miners' Delight and Atlantic City. Miners'- Delight was a thriving camp in 1867, the main lode being worked by California parties, who, in five years, took out $1,200,000. Mr. Ferguson says of the new find: vestigation proves it to be the true potsdam cement, the same as is found at Bald mountains, Sheridan county and in parts of Call forma. The cement, when ground up and mixed with water, sets readily, becoming as hard as a solid rock.

"The material is found under a cap rock of coarse, white sandstone, spotted with iron. The cap rock is about forty feet thick and the conglomerate is reached by tunneland the conglomerate is reached by tunneling into the mountain beneath this cap rock. A company has already started two tunnels, one on either side of the mountain, with the intention of connecting the two in the center. The distance to be tunneled is 600 feet. The development so far is a tunnel on one side 150 feet in length and on the other side fifty feet. The face of these tunnels expose different stratas of the cement to view. The upper one is a rather coarse sand conglomerate, with occasional pebbles, while the second is composed of coarse pebbles, a dark sand stained with iron, and the whole bearing a strong resemblance to rock artificially constructed. The third stratum is the true potedam coment, and while the first two carry gold I venture the assertion that the third stratum is much richer than either of the others. "How deep this formation extends is un-known, as I understand it has only been prospected thirty feet below the tunnel. This material has been sent to Salt Lake and Denver for treatment and the tests show from $10 to $20 per ton in gold. As there is an immense area underlaid with this deposit which can be easily worked and cheaply treated some idea of the aggregate value of the discovery may be imagined. One nill is nearly completed and equipped with ma-chinery and several others will be put in during the present season."

The third stratum is the true potsdam co broken through its banks and cut out a channel about twenty-live feet deep. There now seems to be no doubt that the crops under this ditch, occupying some 22,000 acres of land, will be a failure. The Rocky Mountain Oil company, after several days labor of trying to repair the broken pipe line in the Arkansas river, owing to the high stage of water, was compelled to abandon any attempt to repair the damage. It is thought a suspension bridge will be required.
