Dandles in the German Army. Referring to the recent order of the German emperor with regard to the dandyfied irregularities which had be-come common in the German army, a correspondent at Berlin calls our attention to the fact that the kaiser himself is not altogether free from affectation of this kind, inasmuch as he himself sets fashion of "bangle" wearing. In most of the many portraits of the kaiser the bangle is brought into special prominence by the position of the arm. But though addicted to the bangle, he never condescended to the earring, which formerly was very commonly worn among his officers.

In the time of Frederick William II. when the German army was resting on the laurels of the great Frederick, danlies flourished in great numbers among the officers, in spite of severe official condemnations of foppery. The mon-strosities and extravagances differed but slightly from those of today-sharp-pointed toes, ridiculously high colors and short overcoats without seams. Latter-day exquisites have also adopted the plan of crowding on the finger as many rings as possible—he who can carry the largest number on the ring fingers and at the same time bend his finger being considered to have the A small Doctor Bill. Fifty cents is a small doctor bill, but that is all it will cost you to cure any ordinary case of rheumansm if you use Chamber-lain's Pain Balm. A Good Story Which Was Told by a Louis-That was a good story which Rev. C.

J. K. Jones of Louisville told in a Boston pulpit the other day, says the Jour-He said: "An arlarmist always reminds me of a friend of mine who was a commander at the battle of Round mountain. It was a hot fight-one of the hottest of the war. At a particularly intense part of the ac-tion my friend stood beside his horse scanning the field with his glass and directing the troops. He told me it seemed as if the fire of the whole confederacy was centered on him, the bullets flying thick around him. "Suddenly he felt a minie ball singing in the air and he felt something strike his leg. But the occasion was urgent and he kept up his glass. There was another 'pin-z-z,' and he felt another strike. And so it continued. The captain at last lifted up his hand and prayed: 'Oh Lord, I can go home to my wife and children without either of my legs, but, oh, Lord, let me get home. 'Finally there came the shouts of victory. The battle was won. With a long drawn sigh the captian turned. He shouted to his orderly at a little distance; 'I'm wounded, Jim. Come and help me on my horse; I must go home. It's my last battle.

No, I guess,' replied the orderly. "'What's the matter? Come, hurry up, I'm wounded."
"If you want me to help you, come here,' sang out the orderly.
"'But what's the trouble? Why can't you come here? Don't you see I'm wounded and almost dying?"

"'Oh, no, you are not,' sang out the orderly again. 'Come here instantly, you rascal! shouted the commander. "'No, I don't; that's the biggest nest of vellow jackets there I ever saw in my life,' was the final laughing reply of the "The storming swarm of hornets were the only minic balls that had

INGERSULL TAKEN DOWN.

imon Cameron Was Upset with th Thoughts of Eloquent Atheism. The mention of Colonel Bob Ingersoll's name recalls a touching story of Washington life. One cheerless, rainy night, says the Chicago Record, the venerable Simon Cameron was sitting in the office of the i Ebbitt house, gazing out through the window into the fog and darkness. He was lost in thought and his face was the picture of melancholy. Presently Colonel Ingersoll entered. "What has happened, general?" he asked. "You look as if you'd just lost your last friend. "Ah, Bob," said the old man, with sigh, "I have just seen a cruel, pitiable An aged and crippled was painfully climbing up the street yonder and was making some progress when along came a big double-fisted, bread-shouldered fellow and kicked the crutches out from under the old cripple, leaving him feeble and helpless, to pick himself up as best he could."

"I would to God I had been here!" cried Ingersoll angrily. "I'd have trounced the ruffian! I never heard of so brutal an outrage! What, abuse an old and crippled man like that! I'd make quick work of the brute!"

"Wait a moment, Bob," interposed old Simon Cameron gently. "I was that aged and crippled veteran, and I was toiling along to my grave. And it was you, Bob, who came across my path and kicked from under me the crutches that supported me in that last journey. Colonel Ingersoll made no answer; the old man continued to look mournfully out into the night.

BOSTON STORE,

COLUMBIAN BOOK MARKS. seful and Dainty Souvenirs of the Quadri-Centennial, Here is a pretty little fancy and really novel one—a historical bookmarker, says the New York Herald. To any one seeking a unique gift for a friend it is quite worthy of attention, and it has the decided uncommon merit that it may be just as costly or inexpensive as one chooses to make it. Should you decide to dedicate it to the Columbian year let the narrow ribbons be one red, one white, one blue, the center one about eighteen inches in length, the other two a trifle less. Attach to them some of the coins issued if they can be obtained; if not, let the coins bear the date of 1892 or 1893. A charming souvenir would be a Columbian half dol-lar and two of the Isabella quarters. Antique or rare coins also possess especial interest.

When ribbons of rich, dark colors or different colors are used the handsomest effect is secured with one coin of gold and two of silver, or vice versa, rather than all of one metal. A slight difference in the size of the coins is also usually blue ribbons a shining silver dime, with the yellow gold of a dollar glittering on either side, looks well. If one wishes something almost equally pretty, but of less value, a dazzling new cent flanked by silver half dimes meets the require-Very dainty are the ribbons of rose pink and pale blue weighted with spotess silver, while with a white ribbon gold affords a desirable contrast. Where the souvenir consists of valuable coins one should procure from a silversmith a small top bar in silver or gold, but for more modest affairs the ribbons at the top can be tied in a pretty bow or into a gilt curtain ring. A fancy bead may conceal the end of ribbon to which the coin is attached, but a fine chain passed through the tiny hole drilled in the coin-is perhaps prettier. It is quite evident that this little arrangement may be varied to suit the taste of whoever is to receive it, whether historically inclined or otherwise.

Arizona Camela.

Wild camels have lately been reported in Arizona, and there has been some speculation as to their origin. They vere imported nearly forty years ago, when Jefferson Davis was secretary of war under the Pierce administration. It was thought they would be valuable for use in the "Great American desert" which was commonly supposed be something of Arabia something like the desert Arabia and of Sahara in the desert Africa. They were found service-able, but the war coming on the camels Africa. were lost sight of, became wild and have considerably increased in numbers. It is said that the camel endures extreme cold better than extreme heat, its only dvant ge for hot desert countries being that it can drink at once enough water to last two or three days. The camel is said to be a more effective worker in many places than the horse or mule. It feet will not stand hard roads, and it can, therefore, never be used for farming purposes except in wild, uncuitivated districts. Big Fish Eat Little Fish. Such fierce carnivorous fishes as exist in the depths of the ocean are unknown at the surface. There is the "black swallower," which devours other finny creatures ten times as big as itself, liter ally climbing over its victim, first with one jaw and then with the other. Another species is nearly all mouth, and having no power of locomotion, it lives buried in the soft coze at the bottom, its head alone protruding, ready to engulf any prey that may wander into its cavjaws. There is a ferocious kind of shark, resembling a huge eel. All of these monsters are black as ink. Some of them are perfectly blind, while others have enormous goggling eyes. No ray of sunlight ever pierces the dark, unfathomed caves in which they dwell. Each species is gobbled by the species next bigger, for there is no vegetable life to feed on.

One of the Few Bright Spots in a Herds-man's Life.

The great event of the year is closing on the sheep ranches of the prairiesshearing time-writes an Abilene, Kan., correspondent. By the thousand the fleeces have been robbed from the backs of the bleating flocks, and after a little while all of the fluffy beauty that made the great flocks so attractive will be gone, and the animals in their angular. shaven condition will look like very ghosts of themselves. Simple, in a way, as the operation is, it is very well worth seeing when sheep are handled, worth seeing when sheep are handled, not as in the east in "bunches" of fifty or sixty, but in the great masses that turn many square rods of prairie into a woolly sea. No occasional shearer has charge of the prairie or "rape of the fleece," There are regular bands who move from ranch to ranch, camping at each during the season, from April 1 to June 1. While in camp the workmen improve every minute, for the job is "by the head," 6 cents to 10 cents, according to the fineness of the wool. Where an expert shearer can clip sixty to 100 Mexican sheep, running his shears through their long, light wool and having no work on legs or belly, the merino and Cotswold present an entirely differ-ent problem. The wrinkles that lap over one another from nose to tail and the greasy wool that grows thickly down to the very hoofs make fifteen to twenty-five a big day's work.

With the shearers ranged along a bench reaching across the shed, with the bleating animals undergoing the to them severe operation and the anxious ones outside awaiting their turn, the scene is a lively one. When a sheep is sheared a call of "Tar!" brings the tar boy, and a daub of black is put hastily on each spot where the careless shears have snipped out a piece of the tender skin. Then the ear marks are looked over to be sure there is a means of identification, and sometimes a brand is put on in paint on the hip-usually the owner's initials or a monogram. If the flock is troubled with "scab," a disease resembling eczema, each animal is "dipped." A tub of strong solution of tobacco and water or some similar material is provided and the sheep goes under, head and all, killing any insects that may infest it and curing for the time the sores made by the scab on the sheep's flesh. The fleeces are tied up in cubes a foot each in dimension—the white, clean side from next the sheep on the outside, the soiled portion folded carefully within. A huge sack, seven feet long and three feet in diameter, is hung up between four poles and the wool thrown in, a small boy being put in also to tramp down the accumulating fleeces. When full the sack more effective. For instance, with dark | weighs from 180 to 300 pounds, depending on the quality of the wool. When 100 such bales are sent out from a single ranch it means a considerable income wool bringing on the plains from 15 to 20 cents a pound.

But the work of the "shearing bees," as the spring festivals are sometimes called, is as nothing compared to the pleasures that surround them for the men engaged. What a barn raising is to a New Englander, what hop harvest is among the Catskills, is the shearing season on the plains ranch. Then it is that what little joy comes into the long, dreary tedium of a herdsman's life is found. The friendly races at the shear ing table are not the least of this They brighten up the hours and the record of being the best shearer in the camp is no slight honor. But when the day is done, when the big shed door, redolent with the woolly odor and shining as if waxed from the oil of the fleeces, is swept clean and lanterns dispel in part the gloom that lingers around the rafters, the real fun commences. Invitations are sent out to the settlers and ranchmen around, and in they come, from twenty miles some times, to have an evening of enjoyment The dresses of the evening are the latest style-indeed, they might be laughed at even in well out west cities -but they harmonize with trousers in boots, wide-collared shirts, belts and spurs of the cavaliers. There is no thought of dress, so it comports with the occasion. The musicians occupy boxes on the shearer's bench and saw restlessly at their grimy violins. The dance is ready. There is much pic-turesqueness in the scene, for it all is characteristic of the new west-the only frontier that now exists. The night wears away rapidly, and the lunch that is served is eagerly disposed of. There are no ices or fanc; cakes; indeed, a very ordinary sponge cake is apt to be greatest delicacy on the table, or on the enches, for there the supper is served. However, to those who have seen only stale bread and corned beef for ten months it seems like the daintiest of angel's food. Justice Maul's Unique Sentence. Mr. Justice Maul of San Francisco once addressed a phenomenon of inno-cence as follows: "Prisoner at the bar, your counsel thinks you innocent; the counsel for the prosecution thinks you innocent; I think you innocent. Buten jury of your own countrymen, in the exercise of such common law as they possess, which does not seem to be much have found you 'guilty' and it remains that I should pass upon you the sentence of law. That sentence is that you be kept in imprisonment for one day and as that day was yesterday you may now go about your business.' The early representations of Christ in painting were purposely devoid of all attrac-tion; in the eighth century Adrian I decreed that Christ should be represented as beautiful as possible.

THEY KILLED A GRIZZLY.

Bruin Was Lassoed and Tied to a Tree Before He Was Shot. One of the largest grizzly bears ever killed in the state of Washington was assoed and afterwards shot near Asotin, in the Palouse country, on the other side of the Cascade mountains, a few days ago, by Henry and Frank Hanson. The two men were riding along the river hills looking for stock when they came unexpectedly upon the big grizzly, who was moving slowly along in the road. Brain heard the tramp of the horses and stopped long enough to turn his head in the direction of the approaching team and utter a long growl. Then he went swaggering along at a little faster pace than he had been The two brothers examined their rifles carefully and put spurs to their horses.

When they got within a few yards of the bear he rose upon his haunches and displayed his teeth significantly. While he was doing this the men got their rawhide lariats and in an instant Henry Hanson had his lariat around bruin's neck. His brother quickly located tho noose of his lariat in the same place. The grizzly made one pass with his paw and broke one of the lariats as if it had been a common piece of twine. He tried hard to reach the other lariat with his paws, but he couldn't, and in a few moments he was fighting mad. He bit and clawed around, but he could not get away. The lariat had been wound around a tree and Harry Hanson took a position where he could get good aim and shot the struggling animal. It took five shots to kill him.

German in Austria. Foreigners are wont to classify Austria among the German countries. As a matter of fact her German speaking population is but limited, and annually losing ground. The increase in population among the German inhabitants of Austria is but 5.17 per 1,000 per year; the increase with the Italians in Aus-tria is 5.92 and with the Slavonic races .93. Of 100 marriageable women in the German districts of Austria, forty-one find husbands; among the Slavonic races the per centage is fifty-two. One of the reasons for this showing is that in the German districts of Austria the economic management of affairs is almost prohibitory to marriage among the younger sons and daughters of the peasants. The homestead goes to the eldest son, whose brothers and sisters become his servants. Among the Slavs the family property is equally divided among all children after the death of the father, and each one is allowed to begin housekeeping on his own hook.
