Some Busy Architects. Looking through the office of J. C. & W. Woodward, architects of this city, one is impressed with the marvelous beauty of the modern buildings people demand for their homes and the im-mense amount of work and responsibility that devolves up-on the architects who cre-ate them. Few think of the tact, memory and skill it requires to be at the head of hundreds of men and mechanics in this great branch of industry to see that all the work is done to the satifaction of all parties and settle dis-putes and differences. There are thousands of little things to think of, which must be attended to at once or may cause trouble. The ideas are put on rbape and the perfect building is erected even to the smallest detail in the brain of the architect, figuring timbers, windows, doors, etc., and showing the owner the doors, etc., and showing the owner the building exactly as it will be when erected. In looking at some of our fine buildings we forget the architect to whom we are indebted, but feel a keen pride in the work which is a monument to his skill. The beautiful little Grace Epis-copal church, which was dedicated work copal church, which was dedicated yescopal church, which was dedicated yes-terday, is another monument to the skill of the Woodwards. In their office, in the form of neatly drawn plans and stacks of typewritten specifications, there are scores of other as enduring and beautiful monuments, homes for people of Council Bluffs and many other towns in western Iowa. While they are the representative home builders, many the representative home builders, many of the finest public edifices that have been erected this season will bear their names on the corner stone.

NO. 12 PEARL STREET Grace Episcopal Church Dedicated to the Worship of Almighty God. SERMON BY REV. T. J. MACKAY OF OMAHA

> Large Congregation Listens to an Eloquent Disguisition on the Uselessness of Creeds and the Essential Necessity of Christ to Salvation.

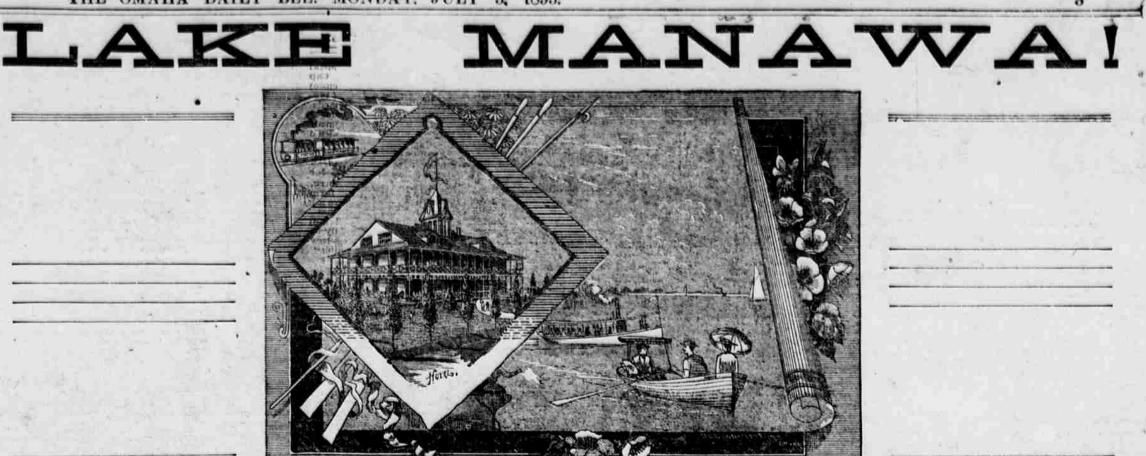

The new Grace Episcopal church, which stands at the corner of Pierce and Union streets, was dedicated yesterday. The announcement that Rev. T. J. Mackay of Omaha would preach the dedicatory sermon was sufficient to bring out a crowd of his friends and admirers that filled the cozy auditorium to its full seating capacity. The program that was presented was an attractive one, the music by the choir, assisted by Mrs. M. A. Kingsbury and Mr. I. M. Treynor as soloists, proving a valuable feature. Mr. Mackay took as his text the following passage from I Samuel, xxii, 11-2: "David therefore departed thence and escaped to the cave of Adultam, and every one that was in distress and every one that was discontented, gathered themselves unto him and he became captain themselves unto him and he became captain over them." He painted in vivid language the checkered career of the king of Israel, who arose from a simple shepherd lad to be the champion of Jehovah, the hunted outlaw, the anointed king, the penitent sinner, the royal fugitive, and the successful monarch of a united kingdom, with the true man ap-pearing howard errors character that was of a united kingdom, with the true man ap-pearing beneath every character that was thrust upon him. Driven to the wilderness by the hatred of the jealous Saul, he took refuge in the cave of Aduliam, where the men of the neighboring tribes, attracted by the starting worth of the unfortunate David, enrolled themselves under his banner to the number of 600, and followed him with the most devoted attachment. There is no power on earth greater than that of the personality of man over his fellow men. So great is this power that history men. So great is this power that history seems to revolve around persons rather than ideas or sontiments. The sentiment will remain forever only a sentiment until a living will summons it into action and it becomes a living force in the world of men

Lessons of the Text. "So it is with the great truths of the Christain religion." continued the speaker; "they are vital and powerful only when they are woven into the life and character of our loader (their character) are woven into the life and character of our leader, Christ. A croed, no matter how true, is useless as a means of influencing men. We want something more than mcre intellectual definitions and precise state-ments, about Truth—we want the incarnate Truth himself to be our pride and our leader, a person to follow rither than a cold statement of belief to which the in-tellect can assent. The weakness of the various systems of Christianity today arises from the fact that they have substituted for this trust in Jesus Christ, this devotion to our leader, an intellectual assent to a creed. The true church of Christ must be a cave of Adultam, 'a resting place' for all who are weary and heavy laden, who are discon-tented with the burdens that men have laid upon them in the confessions of faith and doctrines that cannot profit, who are weary of downt ond negative and the faith and doctrines that cannot profit, who are weary of doubt and negation and fail to find in the world that true rest which the soul craves world that true rest which the soul craves and must have ere they will be satisfied. "The tendency of men today to break away from the church is largely due to the fact that they are weary of clerical institutions which seem to divide men hopelessly from each other, while they behold institutions which are not religious able to hold men to-gether in a powerful union for their common good. I do not deny the necessity for a creed -it is like the constitution of our beloved country, a guaranty of our liberty and of our country, a guaranty of our liberty and of our rights, but when a creed becomes a badge of intellectual slavery instead of a Magna Carta of freedom of conscience and liberty of thought, it becomes comparatively necessary to revise or discard it.

Things Not in God's Creed. "I view with pleasure the attempt in some of our sister churches to revise their con-fessions of faith so that they will square with modern thought and the advance in it will draw men's attention to the simple apostolic creed which you have just recited. In that creed you heard no word of the vari-ous doctrines around which religious feuds are wont to rage, and which give occasion for sarcasm and ridicule to those who are on the outside. Not one word of prodestination, election, conversion, baptism by immersion, baptism by pouring, confession, penance purgatory, the real presence, worship by a liturgical form, or even the apostolic suc-cession. None of these things stand between the sinner and his God in this cave of Adul-lam, and from these spring all the grevious ills, the quarrels between brethren who contend for non-essentials, while this grand world of humanity is rushing rapidly past and taking up positions far in advance of the majority of the Christian host. When the church becomes a true brotherhood, with Christ for its center and its watchword, 'In essentials unity, in non-essentials perfect liberty, in all things charity,' it will be a church worthy the support of every earnest man. Such a church wil find room for the doubters of today. It will not require a man to accept any theory of the inspiration of the scriptures or ask of him a belief in the fall of man, or the bibli-cal account of the creation, because to do so would exalt these non-essentials into beliefs necessary to salvation, something utterly foreign to the spirit of the teaching of this old apostolic church of Christ. Men will reason, and should reason, and as long as they reason they must differ.

Not Making Admission Easter.

"Do not think that I am trying to make the terms of admission easier than the church allows. It is much easier to be loval to a church or a creed than to be loyal to Christ. Some day we shall all recognize that religion is more of a life than a creed It is following Christ and striving to be like unto Him. For no one can follow Him and not be obedient to His slightest wish. The church of God is not a mere adjunct of good society, a something which can be dispensed with without serious loss. It is not a luxury, as so many regard it nowadays, but a neces-tiv. There is no ability of mun that does not sity. There is no child of man that does not need it. It is said: There is a point of rest At the great center of the cyclone's force, A silence at its secret source, Where a little chila might slumber undis-turbed, Without the ruffle of one fairy curl, In that strange central caim, amid the mighty while.

"The true church of God in the midst of Cearney . the world is this one point of rest, and to the soul who has gained it the tempest may sweep around him and storms may rage on every side, but he heeds them not, for here in this strange central calm is rest, and peace and God."
