SCIENCE OF SPRINKLING. Experience of a Parent Who Posed as an Expert with the Hose.

"Have you ever noticed the keen desire of an otherwise sensible man to play with a garden hose?"

"Well, I guess I have a great deal to say about it," said a great big chump as any one else.

"One evening last week my wife told me to go out and sprinkle the lawn. The boy grabbed the hose and was doing the job in good shape.

"My wife and I had accepted invitations for a party that evening. I had on my evening dress suit and was waiting for my better half to make her appearance.

"In order to show my paternal authority I went out to boss the job and began to give orders like the chief of a volunteer company fire department.

"In order to more fully impress my offspring with my superior knowledge I grabbed hold of the hose and started to spray him how it was done. The young man looked at me with disgust and took refuge upon the porch.

"I looked at the scene by playfully turning the stream on the dog, which was lying in the shade to keep cool. I then began to play water over the lawn in a scientific manner.

"As the feeling grew on me, I became possessed with a desire to do everything in my power to twist the hose with my hands.

"My wife and I had accepted invitations for a party that evening. I had on my evening dress suit and was waiting for my better half to make her appearance.

Real Estate Owners Propose to Contest the Garage Contract.

Mr. MacDonald will hardly be permitted to carry out the terms of his garage contract without a legal struggle.

The Real Estate Owners association has not yet given up the fight and will not surrender the interests of the people to the contractor until the courts have passed upon the validity of the contract and everything connected with it.

President Boyd and the board of directors of the association is held 1 do not know what steps we will take. Our time yesterday was too limited to prepare the necessary papers for a restraining order, and the council's speed in rushing the contract through last night over the heads of the protesting members is not to be forgotten.

However, it is not necessary that we abandon the interests of the taxpayers, as there are other means at our command to prevent the contract being carried out. Yesterday the committee consulted with two of our best attorneys and the conclusion was reached that the best thing to be done under the circumstances was to permit the council to proceed with its action.

As soon as it is put in force to have some one violate its provisions and cause his arrest. In that way the matter can be speedily brought into court and the fact established that the proceedings in availing the contract were irregular and that the same is not just and should be annulled.

I believe that this is the best way in which to test the validity of the contract, after the talk we had with the attorneys. The hotel andivery men, who are so vitally interested, should come to the front and join with us.

"I hope the press will continue to stir this thing up until the very best of the matter is reached and the people aroused to the enormity of the outrage that has been perpetrated upon them by forcing this contract through without giving the citizens an opportunity to discuss its merits and look into it. I, for one, am willing to expend the last dollar in the contest, and believe $100,000 should be spent rather than have the contract go into force in all its perniciousness.

A conference of the members of the association will be held just as soon as practicable, and this matter will be thoroughly discussed, and I believe a line of action will be mapped out. We will not so easily submit to such a piece of outrageousness being foisted upon us."

Improving County Roads. The county commissioners have that the proposition to pave the county roads with the proceeds of the $150,000 of road improvement bonds voted last year is not dead and that it is only sleeping. They say that there will be nothing done this year, but that if the money market gets better before this fall they will sell the bonds during the coming winter and make their contracts, so that the work may begin with the opening of next spring.

Balloon tonight at Courtland beach. LAST ACT. Judges Attended to the Closing Business of the May Court Term.

Several of the judges of the district court were on the bench yesterday, cleaning up the books and getting things in shape for the final adjournment of the May term, an order for which was entered last night.

Judge Scott took up and disposed of the S. P. Morse family difficulties until the September term. Morse furnished his bond, $500, by which he guarantees to keep away from the home of his wife, and also to obey the mandates of the court, which compels him to keep the peace during the pendency of the divorce proceedings, which have also been adjourned until the September term.

The disposition of the property, that being left to abide the findings of the court or jury at the time of the trial. Upon furnishing the bond, Mr. Morse was released from the custody of the sheriff.

Denny Haley and Sylvester Harrison, two obstreperous youngsters, were taken before Judge Keyser and were ordered sent to the Kearney industrial school. Both of the lads were anxious to go, saying that they would be better off there than at home.

Judge Howells came down from his Tekamah home and spent the day upon the bench, hearing the lawyers who wanted to argue that the order of the court, which was for the possession of a choice tract of farming land, which both of them claimed.

Judge Davis still clings to the determination to retire from the bench, but has decided that his resignation will not be handed to the governor for some days yet. When the document goes into the hands of the executive, it will be with the understanding that it must take effect not later than September 1, as upon that date the judge desires to resume the practice of law.

While the clerk of the district court cannot give any estimate regarding the size of the docket for the next term of the court, he is of the opinion that it will be larger than ever before, as a great number of new suits are being commenced. He accounts for the bringing of these suits by the fact that the litigants are enabled to get more speedy action than heretofore, as a suit brought now can be tried at the next term of court, while a few years ago the dockets were so far behind that it was usually several years after the bringing of a suit before it could be reached for trial.

We Speak What We Know. From the Omaha (27c) Register. My wife and four children were taken very suddenly with severe cases of cholera morbus. It is not likely that the bathing house capacity will be increased this year as the season is so far advanced. Next year it will be doubted, as it is now crowded to its utmost nightly.

The ten new gasoline lamps that have been ordered placed on Ames avenue, between Sixteenth street and the bridge, are a needed improvement which everybody who drives his automobile will appreciate.

The two young men who were arrested near the west end for bathing on Sunday last were allowed to go with simply a reprimand and a warning to be good citizens, and didn't want to prosecute them, this being the first case of arrest within the beach association's enclosure.

There has been a number of complaints against nude bathing on the north shore of the lake, opposite the long bridge. The beach authorities now have officers who patrol the beach, and every case will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Manager Griffith and Superintendent Crozier are both coming to Ames avenue, and are ready to receive any suggestions that require immediate attention, but everything is gradually being brought to perfection. The road is in good condition, and these gentlemen are doing all in their power for the convenience and comfort of the beach patrons.
